CHARLOTTETOWN

IS THE SCENE OF STRANGE HAPPENINGS

Charlottetown, P. E. I., June 28.—For some time a number of mysterious occurrences have taken place in this city, which have baffled the police. The store of Auld Bros. was broken into twice, but nothing taken.

The door of a drug store and the Charlottetown Club were badly hacked. A window was found broken in M. P. Hogan's wood-working factory and half burned oil saturated waste found therein and on Wednesday last the Queen's Hotel stable was discovered on fire, but extinguished by the proprietor, who found a bundle of papers saturated with kerosene burning under the floor. An investigation last night into the latter fire brought out evidence which throws strong suspicion on a night watchman of a certain section of the city who is looking for more work and wanted to alarm the owners of the buildings in order to get them to employ him.

The Island militia went into camp today. The Army Medical Corps left for Sussex to go into camp.

"I certainly admire that man."

"What in the world for?"

"His will power."

"He has no will power at all."

"Why he told me that he just made up his mind to quit smoking and he quit."

"He's lying; his wife made up her mind and he quit."

A Chinese laundryman in Oakland, California, recently had his troubles with a watch that habitually lost time. So he took the timepiece to the nearest watchmaker.

"Watchee no good to Charlie Lee," said he briefly, pushing it across the counter. "You fixee him, eh?"

"Certainly," said the watchmaker.

AMERICANS SEEM TO PREFER CANADIAN ROUTE TO THEIR OWN

Montreal, June 28.—One of the most striking features of the passenger bookings by all the steamship companies is the exceedingly large increase in the proportion of people travelling to and from the United States via the St. Lawrence route. The Allans, the C. P. R. Co., White Star-Dominion, and the Canadian Northern each tells the same story, that while the present season is one of exceptionally heavy traffic, the number of American travellers to and from Montreal are even greater in proportion than the general increase, as compared with the returns of any previous year. Bookings on one of the Allan boats alone in August next include no fewer than four hundred people bound for different points in the United States.

Mr. William Jennings Bryan and Mrs. Bryan are among the latest Americans to show their partiality for the beauties of the St. Lawrence route. The Canadian Northern Company today received a cable from Bristol confirming the news published in The Star last week that Mr. Bryan was one of the passengers on the Royal George which left Bristol for Montreal on Thursday last, and is due here on Wednesday next. There are also a number of other American passengers on the same ship who are going through from Montreal to Chicago and different places in Nebraska.

"What seems to be the trouble with it?"

"Oh him too muchee by 'n, by," said Charlie Lee.

Of Interest to the Ladies

Fashion, as judged in its edicts by the short woman of robust proportions and her slim sister with the graceful silhouette, will seem this season to wear too very different aspects. After all, the varying modes of dress are of far greater importance to the short woman than to her taller sister, as, in spite of her own individual charm, there are certain fashions that she cannot wear with impunity.

What can the short woman think for instance, of the modish tunic coat of chiffon that will be seen on every second woman this season, weighted down by rich and artistic embroideries or by kilted pleatings of satin? These three-quarters tunic are ideal for the slim woman, but her short sister might survey such a fashion with somewhat rueful face, knowing that her salvation lies in unbroken continuity of line. Well, too, may she look askance on another new note of fashion, the revival of the three-tier skirt, in a series of three flounces edged, usually with silk or satin, a mode that shortens even the woman of superfluous inches.

FASHIONABLE PATTERNED FABRICS.

Or the vogue of the coin and water spotted foulard which is again in our midst cannot fail to create annoyance in the mind of the short woman who is aware that stripes and not stops or wafers are her friend, and that large "all over" designs she must carefully eschew. Again, she hears with dismay that patterned fabrics are to be the leading mode this season as a reaction against self-colored materials.

Truly, at first sight all the fashions in their course seem arrayed against the short woman, more especially when she is threatened with the extinction of the long, plain coat to which she has so fondly clung during the past two or three seasons. But, after all, there is no reason to utter dismay, as the world of fashion is wide and the arbiter of modes remembers the needs of all her devotees, whether they be short or of Junoesque proportions or slim and of the svelte figure beloved by the fiction writer.

Striped materials, especially in the popular combination of black and white, grey and white, and blue and black, will be as popular this season as any of the coin-dotted fabrics. The short woman can wear the fashionable short coat and skirt of striped blue and black or even grey and white tussore, now so much in vogue in Paris, trimmed simply with the buttons of gun-metal or even colored wood. This season the introduction of side panels on the skirt, showing the material cut on the cross, makes a welcome innovation from the skirt in which the stripes go all the same way.

Among the other novelties of fashion that may be worn with success by the short woman are the new fabrics with printed borders, such as the lovely crepe de Chine finished with a deep hem of Eastern silk. Such a gown as this can be made with the skirt slightly pleated from the waist, and finished with the printed border thus giving an unbroken line and yet expressing the last note of fashion.

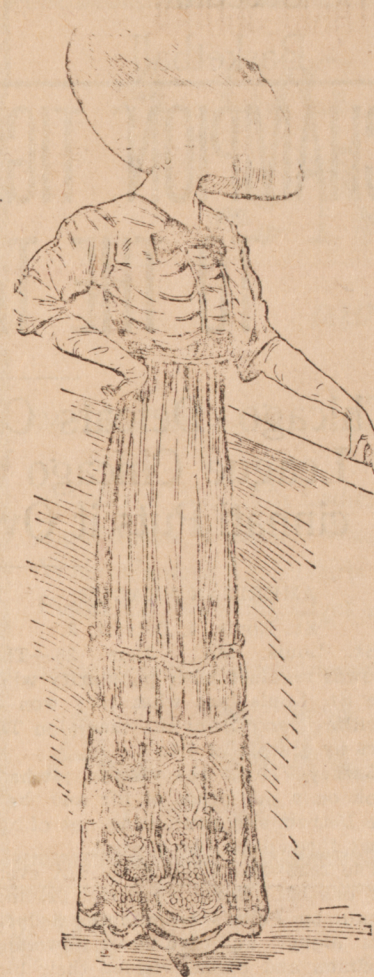

A True Soldier.—The new reporter had written: "Among the prettiest girls at the dance was Lieut. Loring." When asked if he hadn't got his sexes mixed, he replied: "Certainly not! If you think the lieutenant was anywhere else than among the prettiest girls, you don't know him."—Boston Transcript.

The Language of Aquatics.—A French woman, proud of her limited French in bad English and the American woman, proud of her limited knowledge of French, were introduced at an uptown evening company. The French woman insisted on expressing herself in bad English and the American would talk nothing but bad French.

When the guests began to depart they were still at it. At last they arose to go. Here is their watery farewell:

"Reservoir," said the fair American.

"Thanks," responded her new friend.—Philadelphia Times.

PRETTY LAWN FROCK

Slender girls will take heed of this dainty little printed lawn dress, for its lines are surely not cut for those of stout figures. Shirrings and gatherings are most fashionable and both are used in this design.

The broad picture hat is of white Milan, trimmed with black chantilly lace.

LICKING POSTAGE STAMPS IS DANGEROUS PRACTICE

(Telegraph)

Dr. G. G. Melvin, chief health officer of the city and county of St. John, has declared war on the germs that attach themselves to postage stamps. He points out that by reason of the adhesiveness of the gummed surfaces, stamps are apt to be collectors of germs and when moistened by the tongue, as is usual with most people, these germs are liable to carry contagion to those taking this method of preparing the stamp for the letter. He has suggested to the postmaster that vendors of stamps assist in preventing the collection of germs on the stamps by placing them "gummed side upwards" when passing them out to purchasers. In this way there is not so much danger of gathering germs from the dispensing counters. The postmaster asks the vendors of stamps to follow the course advised by the health officer.

Following is the text of the letter sent to the postmaster:

171 Princess Street,
St. John, N. B.,
June 25, 1910

Edward Sears, Esq., Postmaster, St. John (N. B.):

Dear Sir,—I beg to call your attention to the fact that postage stamps are frequently affixed to postage material by being moistened by the tongue; that the gummed surfaces, by reason of their adhesiveness, are most apt collectors of disease germs whenever coming in contact with latter; that counters, etc., over which stamps are sold are, by reason of very contagious disease; that the gummed stamp surfaces, when pushed by vendor over such counters, or laid upon them, are very liable to become contaminated.

In view of the above, I would respectfully ask that you lend your influence to the effect that when such stamps are dispensed by vendors, the latter pass them to the purchaser with the gummed side upwards. This has been adopted by the American postal authorities at Washington.

Most Sincerely yours,
(Sgd.) GEO. G. MELVIN, M. D.
Chief Health Officer St. John City and County.

It is the postmaster's desire that the views of the chief health officer of the city and county of St. John should obtain in respect to the manner of the disbursement of stamps, and all vendors or licensees are requested to exercise due diligence in following the course advised.
