THE SMARTEST
SHAPES FOR SPRING
SUMMER

The preferred shapes for the present season, still show the flat and medium-flat set brims. In soft hats the style differences are rather more in evidence. Of course good form and taste dictate the avoidance of extremes, in hats as in clothes. Individuality is of course desirable, and it is this attribute combined with Style, Quality, Superior Workmanship, Finish and Fit, that has placed HAWES, VON GAL HATS first in the favour of smartly dressed men.

ALBERT WOLTER FOUND GUILTY IN FIRST DEGREE

Jury Deliberated One Hour and Fifty Minutes--Prisoner Profoundly Indifferent and Had to be Awakened to be Told Verdict.

New York, April 22.—Albert Wolter, the youth of nineteen years, who was "crazy" about women, must die in the electric chair for the murder of Ruth Wheeler, a pretty fifteen-year-old stenographer. After only one hour and fifty minutes of deliberation a jury in the court of special sessions found him guilty of murder in the first degree at 10.30 o'clock tonight, bringing to a close a trial marked by swiftness and testimony of horror.

The boy's counsel said with eloquence this afternoon that Wolter was too tender-hearted to harm a cat, but twelve men decided tonight that he choked Ruth Wheeler and thrust her while yet alive into his fireplace where, soaked with oil, she burned to death.

With the same waxed-faced indifference that he showed throughout the trial, Wolter evinced no emotion when the verdict was announced. With almost inhuman complacency he was asleep in his cell—and sleeping soundly—while the jury deliberated on his fate. This was made known by a court attendant who said that he had to arouse the prisoner to bring him into court. He will be sentenced on Wednesday.

SENTENCED ON WEDNESDAY.

Immediately after the announcement of the verdict, Wallace Scott, counsel for Wolter, made a formal motion that the verdict be set aside, but Judge Warren Foster over-ruled him, and Scott hurriedly left court after having obtained a stay of sentence until Wednesday.

The jurymen themselves showed emotion while the boy that must die showed none. As the jurors filed in, the prisoner was led into the room, and took his seat facing the judge. His face was the color of putty, but his complexion is naturally unwholesome, and its ashiness was accentuated by the brilliant lights of the court room. When asked if they had found a verdict, William V. Klup, foreman of the jury, answered in a shaking voice:

"We have." He then announced he and his associates had found Wolter guilty of murder in the first degree. All eyes immediately shifted toward the prisoner, but he was as stolid as a stone. As he was being handcuffed to officers preparatory to being taken back to the Tombs, he gazed about him unconcernedly.

Neither relatives of the murderer or his victim were in court to hear the verdict. His elderly parents were in court during the afternoon, but as he heard the decision which means death he was among strangers. Efforts were made to get a statement from him on his way to the Tombs, but he refused to talk.

"I don't want to talk tonight—I'm tired and I want to get a little sleep first," he said.

Ruth Wheeler was killed on Thursday, March 24. Failing to dispose of her body in the fire-place, Wolter cut it apart and left the bust and head wrapped in burlap on a fire escape, from where it was pushed into the yard below. The gruesome discovery led to his arrest. He was arrested on Saturday, March 26, and was placed on trial on Monday last. He denied ever knowing Ruth Wheeler, but testimony showed that she was lured to his rooms expecting to obtain employment as a stenographer. There Wolter attempted to assault her, and in the struggle, strangled her with a rope.

Wolter's cool facing of the gruesome exhibits and his lack of emotion during the heart-rending testimony as to Ruth Wheeler's death, his lawyer today strove to emphasize as a point in his client's favor. This indifference the lawyer said, was indicative of the boy's innocence; if guilty, he would not have been able to undergo the ordeal with such composure.

"Circumstantial evidence is very dangerous evidence upon which to convict," he went on. "Instances have occurred where men have been mistakenly convicted. This boy hasn't nerve enough to kill a cat, let alone a human being."

He reviewed the testimony of Kate Gille, Wolter's erstwhile girl neighbor, who occupied a room adjoining the apartment in which the murder was committed and who was one of the witnesses for the defense. The Gille girl testified that she had heard no noise in Wolter's apartment. "The Wheeler girl weighed about 120 lbs.," said Mr. Scott. "It is impossible that Wolter could have choked her and strangled her and suppressed any outcry. No girl would have submitted to what they say Ruth Wheeler was subjected to without screaming. More over, it was impossible to burn a girl in that fire place, and there is no evidence of anything used to burn the body with. There is no oil."

The assistant district attorney's arraignment of the prisoner during his summing up was scathing. "He is not a great criminal," said Mr. Moss. "He is a dangerous criminal—a perverted character and a scourge to the community."

"There is no unexplained circumstance here," he continued. "There is not a single trial for murder in which you must not rely, to some extent, on circumstantial evidence. But I cannot think of a single case in the State of New York, where a conviction on circumstantial evidence has proven to be a mistake."

"There was never a case in which every circumstance was so straight-pointed. That child was not dead when she was put into the flames. He put her in the fire with her clothing off, we must infer, and poured oil on her clothing. In the hand was hair which was not her's. She fought her assailant. She angered him and he put her to death. He left no victim to tell what he had done in carrying out his original intent. His killing her was an intentional act to hide his first crime."

Mr. Moss grew emotional as he talked and turned pleadingly to the jury. "I have no thirst for human blood," he said, "but we ask you in deciding this case to think of the army of women who must go out to earn their daily bread and must trust themselves to the honor of the men whom they meet. They are entitled to be safeguarded by the community. It does not require great wit to prey upon the innocent upon the guileless—upon a little girl of fifteen, just graduating, hoping to take up the burdens of the household."

Judge Foster's charge was brief, occupying in all but eighteen minutes.

OVATION FOR JOHNSON AT OMAHA, NEB.

Omaha, Neb., April 23.—Jack Johnson, the colored pugilist, was given a notable reception when he arrived in Omaha. Three thousand people were at the station to see the big prize fighter and many insisted on shaking hands. The crowd was so great that the police forced a passage through which Johnson and his wife might pass. As he walked between the walls of people, he was showered with flowers and immense bunches of American beauties were presented to Mrs. Johnson by a little white girl.

GOLD IN OLD STOVE

New York, April 22.—After she had sold an old stove to a second hand dealer today for thirty cents, Miss Norah Sullivan, aged seventy, of Newark, N. J., learned that it was really worth $600. A package which dropped from the stove unnoticed by the purchaser was picked up by two boys and found to contain sixty $10 gold pieces. The money was turned over to the police and will probably be returned to Miss Sullivan. It is thought the stove had been used as a safety vault by her brother-in-law, who died several years ago.

Mr. G. T. Dodge, of St. John, is at the Queen.
