Give your servants GOLD DUST to clean with, treat them rightly and you will have few occasions to insert a "help wanted" ad

They say a good workman is known by his tools. You cannot expect your maid to keep everything ship-shape unless you give her every modern help. To keep house without GOLD DUST is to do work by hard, old-fashioned methods. For cleaning everything and anything about the house—from cellar to attic—GOLD DUST is worth its weight in gold. It cuts grease and dirt like magic, does away with scouring and scrubbing, and saves time and tempers.

Your servant can do more and better work and keep sweet with the aid of GOLD DUST in all household cleaning.

RESULT OF CONFERENCE OF PARTY LEADERS KEPT SECRET

Liberals Still Hostile--Tories Want Budget They Defeated Last Year--The Political Whirligig Brings Strange Revenges--A Letter From One Landowner to Another That Indicates Their Line of Thought,

London, July 16.—We are in the doldrums just now, so far as politics are concerned, and all we care about is the result of the veto conference. The secret of the deliberations of the eight have been well kept, and from the first Liberal opinion has been strongly divided on the question whether or not any result would follow these meetings of the four Liberal and four Conservative statesmen. Before this appears in print the result of their consultations and discussions may be known, and I can only repeat my original opinion, that, if there is any compromise on the legislative vote of the Lords, the Liberal party will be split in twain.

To turn to more tangible propositions, Mr. Lloyd-George has introduced his second budget, and there has been some illuminating discussion upon it. It was D'Israeli, the most far-seeing leader the Tories have ever had, who made a character in one of his novels describe Toryism as "an organized hypocrisy." The truth of the observation has been illustrated time after time in the history of this country, and never more so than in the case of the budget of this year.

CLAMORING FOR THE BUDGET.

It is the budget of 1909—only a little more so—which the Tories denounced and the Lords rejected, but now they are clamoring for it, because they know it is popular, and are insisting that it shall be passed at once so that the House may proceed with other business and avoid the necessity of an autumn sitting. I am writing on the morrow of one of these discussions, when Mr. Lloyd-George has had to reply to one of the basest arguments ever used by the protectionists. This is that the Government in the last two budgets protected cocoa in order to subsidize manufacturers who are proprietors of Liberal newspapers. With fine scorn the Chancellor of the Exchequer threw across to Mr. Bonar Law—the rising hope of the stern, unbending tariff reformers, who have very few able men in their ranks—a Tory leaflet in which this base allegation is made, and asked the member for Dulwich if he could defend it. Of course he could not. The cocoa duty has been in existence for sixteen years, and was handed on to the Liberals by the Tories. That it has not been removed in spite of the demands on the part of Liberals and the willingness of the Liberal cocoa manufacturers is one of those things that are not easily explained. At any rate the protectionists do not wish it repealed, because it will deprive them of the use of their inglorious poster, and it is certain that in spite of Mr. Bonar Law's repudiation of it, the poster will be used in the constituencies.

DRAGGING THE CROWN IN.

Curiously enough, on the top of this exposure comes another illustration of Tory methods. The Tories of South Islington have issued a poster on which this is printed in big type: "If you desire to support the Crown and to express your disapproval of the present Government you should at once see that your name is on the register." I have been to a great many bye-elections throughout the country during the past nine or ten years, and there has hardly been one in connection with which Lord Knollys, the late King's private secretary, did not have to telegraph, at the request of the Liberal agent, an expression of the King's desire that his name or the Royal Standard should not be used for electioneering purposes. But the offence was almost always repeated.

THE INTIMIDATION CRY.

East Dorset has followed the example of the Hertlepoles, has returned in the Liberal interest a kinsman of the Liberal member who was unseated on a vexatious petition by the Tories. Both elections will bear a note of comment, for they had some points in common. Sir Christopher Furness and Captain Guest were unseated on technical points, mistakes committed by their agents. There was no charge of corruption or intimidation made in either case, and the Tories were so uncertain about their position that they dared not claim the seat for their defeated candidate. Yet because two Liberal members were unseated on technicalities, and there has not been a petition against a Tory member, certain superficial critics are raising the cry of "Liberal intimidation!" That is nonsense. There were breaches of the corrupt practice act on the Liberal side, made through ignorance, and so open and obvious that it is a marvel they were not stopped at the outset, but there was none of that insidious intimidation and coercion in the practise of which the Tories are past masters. In East Dorset, especially, where the Guest family have enormous influence and might well have exercised it, there was not at the recent election the slightest attempt to interfere with the liberty of the electors. Whether or not the Tories "put the screw on" I cannot say, but an interesting document which has come into my possession suggests that if they did not it was not for want of desire. The document is a letter written from one leading Tory to another, and the writer is answering an invitation to attend a meeting at Captain Pretymen's Land Union.

A VERY FRANK LETTER.

The letter is as follows, names being, for obvious reasons, omitted: "I much fear that, so long as the present Government is in power, no good can come of any union of property-owners, as the Government program seems to be particularly aimed at the rooking of landowners and the benefitting at their expense of the laboring classes.

"It was on the votes of the latter class that the Radicals were returned to power; it is to their votes that they look to be kept there, and all their legislation will be for the benefit of the class, no matter how many unions may be formed by the landed proprietors. The Government does not expect anything but opposition from some landed proprietors, and so long as they can command the labor vote, I don't think they care a tinker's dam for any organization that may be formed to protect the landowner. Until the fall of the present Government I see no hope for us. After all, what does our vote amount to? For instance, I have one vote and against that you have to put the votes of all the cottagers of the estate. There is not a single cottage tenant that I know of on whom I could possibly rely to vote for the Unionist party, and I do not think this case exceptional. I will go to the meeting on Thursday and hear what has to be said, although I much doubt the utility of the union."

THE COTTAGERS GOING WRONG.

When it is analyzed this letter is seen to be a really remarkable exposition of the Tory creed and the Tory attitude of mind towards the people. The writer quite frankly objects to the "laboring classes" getting any benefit at all by legislation, and he considers that any reforms in that direction could be accomplished only by "rooking" the landowners. He deplores his inability to rely on the cottagers to vote Tory, and, reading between the lines of the letter, it seems clear that some attempt at coercion has been made and failed. The cottagers cannot be trusted to vote for the landowners, although they may promise to do so; that is really the meaning of this letter, which lifts the curtain a little bit and reveals what is going on behind.

CANADIAN MANUFACTURERS HAVE STRONG OBJECTION TO B. C. COMPANIES ACT

Ottawa, July 18.—The new British Columbia companies act is the subject of a communication from the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, through its legal counsel, addressed to the Department of Justice. A memo. or synopsis of the objections is enclosed, and it is alleged that the act is ultra vires of the Provincial legislature, inasmuch as it trammels companies chartered by the Dominion Parliament and also British companies authorized to do business throughout Canada. The Federal Government, which has power of disallowance, will probably not deal with the matter until about October. The year within which the Government can legally exercise the power of veto will not expire until next March, and the practice is to allow about two-thirds of the year to elapse before passing on such questionable acts. This is to permit of the receipt of a full statement of the

IMMIGRATION LAWS

Ottawa, July 16.—Mr. W. D. Scott, Superintendent of Immigration, left this afternoon for England on his annual tour of inspection of the Canadian immigration agencies in Europe. In London Mr. Scott will hold a conference with the Imperial authorities interested in Canadian immigration regulations, and will explain to them the reasons for the additional restrictions put into force last year. The criticisms in Britain against the alleged undue severity of the Canadian regulations are largely based on a misunderstanding of the Canadian viewpoint and Canadian conditions. As a further means of relieving Canadians returning home after travelling abroad from the necessity of answering in detail the usual long list of questions by the immigration inspectors at ports of entry arrangements have been made with the ocean steamship agents for certificates to be taken out from ticket agents on the purchase of steamship tickets. This certificate, on presentation to the immigration inspector on the return voyage, will relieve the holder from the necessity of undergoing the usual examination.

For the first five months of the present calendar year homestead entries in Canada reached the large figure of 23,354, as compared with 13,111 for the same months of 1909, or an increase of 78 per cent. By Provinces the entries were as follows:—Manitoba, 1,120; Saskatchewan, 12,718; Alberta, 9,414; British Columbia, 102.

ase on behalf of the Province and any objections that may be submitted to the claim for or against disallowance. The question will raise important constitutional issues.
