A CLERGYMAN WRITES OF CANADIAN ELECTIONS

(The British Weekly)

The Laurier Government has been replaced by the Conservatives, the overturn being so great that the strength of parties is practically reversed. In the fall of the Government no less than eight ministers have been defeated, and among them those who were most strongly identified with the proposed agreement for reciprocity in natural products. The disaster has left the party practically without a leader. Sir Wilfrid Laurier intimated that if his party was defeated, he would not lead in opposition. If he adheres to that decision, it will hard to provide a man of sufficient experience and strength to take his place until a seat is found for some of those defeated.

The fight has been the keenest since the time of Confederation. Indeed, there has never been a strong party issue before. Sir Wilfrid has thrown himself into the struggle with a heroic abandon. For a man in his seventieth year, he has achieved a record only beaten by Mr. Gladstone in the Midlothian campaign. But although he is the most striking personality in the Dominion, and the greatest Canadian living, he has failed to carry with him the sentiment of the people.

There are several subsidiary reasons for the defeat. The party has suffered from the lust of office. It held undisputed sway since 1896, and has seen under its rule a phenomenal development in the resources and population. There seemed to be reason to suspect that they would have to contend for a continuance of power. In consequence, they have neglected the country. Very little has been done to educate the electorate or even to cultivate an intimate acquaintance with the feelings of the people. Party organization has therefore become very sick.

Then it is a matter of notoriety that there is a deep-seated suspicion of Sir Wilfrid's religion. On the face of things there is no instance to which the most rabid Orangemen can fairly point which shows any bias in the direction of the Papacy in all his public actions. But the Roman Catholic Congress, held at Montreal last year, was an offence to thousands of Canadians. It received recognition from the authorities which it could have got in no other country, Protestant or Catholic. Its leaders—men like Cardinal Vaughan—wounded the people with their proud, ecclesiastical lash, and, rightly or wrongly, the blame was laid on Laurier. The French Catholic is a serious factor in Canadian life, and had developed ambitions which create alarm. His arrogance is supposed to flourish under the smile of official favour.

The manufacturers have lavished money in the campaign. In one constituency through which I passed, I saw in a journey of five miles over two hundred double demy posters, embellished with the Union Jack and "God Save the King." There were only twenty homesteads in that area. Comment is needless. They have also called their men together, and appealed to them to vote for their business, and turn out the Laurier Government. In Scotland or England the effect of an appeal of that kind would be to send the men to vote against the advice, but there has been no resentment of it here.

The one thing which has shadowed everything else and produced this notable defeat is a combination of hatred and fear of the American. This is a sinister omen, which politicians and statesmen alike must take into account. Canada is fifty years behind Britain in this respect. The animosity which found expression in the Press of the old country then finds speech on all hands here today. The United States has much to account for in this undesirable state of affairs. Her treatment of Canada in many minor affairs is aggravating. There is no question about the bad feeling which prevails among the masses of people. It affects those who come into the country as readily as those who are natives. Loyalty to the flag is one of the distinguishing characteristics of immigrants, and they can easily be enlisted among those who detest the States. Then the Canadian manufacturer is afraid of the American. He cannot stand up to him in the product of skill, and wants a tariff wall built high enough to keep him out. These are facts of solemn portent for our future. While riots are breaking the public peace of France, Germany and Austria because of the hardships of Protection, Canada, the young dominion whose future will determine in a large measure the destiny of the Empire, has voted into power a party which is pledged to that policy. For good or evil it must now have its turn. But the most serious fact to every serious person is that we have among us such elements as may break the peace between the two sister peoples. Until they are modified and removed the highest statesmanship is not without its function.

MONUMENT TO GENERAL MORGAN

Lexington, Ky., Oct. 17.—The memory of General John H. Morgan, the noted Confederate cavalry leader, was fittingly honored here today by the unveiling of a statue erected in the court house square by the Kentucky chapters of the Daughters of the Confederacy. The unveiling was attended by interesting exercises. The memorial consists of an heroic bronze equestrian statue of the famous soldier mounted upon a granite base. The statue was designed by the Italian sculptor, Romphi Coffini. The cost of the memorial was $15,000.

DON'T PULL OUT THE GRAY HAIRS

A Few Applications of a Simple Remedy will Bring Back the Natural Color

"Pull out one gray hair and a dozen will take its place" is an old saying, which is, to a great extent, true, if no steps are taken to stop the cause. When gray hairs appear it is a sign that Nature needs assistance. It is Nature's call for help. Gray hair, dull, lifeless hair, or hair that is falling out, is not necessarily a sign of advancing age, for there are thousands of elderly people with perfect heads of hair without a single streak of gray.

When gray hairs come, or when the hair seems to be lifeless or dead, some good, reliable hair-restoring treatment should be restored to at once. Specialists say that one of the best preparations to use is the old-fashioned "sage tea" which our grandparents used. The best preparation of this kind is Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy, a preparation of domestic sage and sulphur, scientifically compounded with later discovered hair tonics and stimulants, the whole mixture being carefully balanced and tested by experts.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur is clean and wholesome and perfectly harmless. It refreshes dry, parched hair, removes dandruff restores faded or gray hair to its natural color.

Don't delay another minute. Start using Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur at once and see what a difference a few days' treatment will make in your hair.

This preparation is offered to the public at fifty cents a bottle, and is recommended and sold by all druggists.

THE WHITE SQUAW TOMORROW EVENING

"The White Squaw," a romantic drama, will be the attraction at City Opera House tomorrow evening. The play is by Della Clarke, a talented young actor-author, and will be presented here under the direction of Louis F. Werba. Miss Clarke, who until recently, was identified with Charles Frohman's forces and before that with Augustine Daly, will play the principal character in her drama. Associated with her in the cast are some of America's best known actors. Romance, comedy and a tremendous vein of human interest form the basis of building of "The White Squaw." The scenes are laid in the forest of Michigan just a century ago, near to what is now the prosperous city of Detroit. Years before the time of the play's opening, a French Canadian trapper, and his English wife and their two baby daughters, Leah, dark and French like her father, and Octavia, who had her mother's golden hair and blue eyes; settled in this forest land. The father goes hunting one day, the little dark eyed daughter accompanying him. He is slain by a beast of prey, the child is rescued by an old Indian chief, and the redskin and his squaw rear the girl to believe she is their own child. At the opening of the play both the sisters have grown to womanhood, each unaware of the other's being. Jacques Cautier, a French Canadian trapper, is in love with the supposed Indian girl, Neamata by name, while she has given her heart to an English fur trader named Bruce Marshall. He in turn is in love with Neamata's beautiful sister who dwells in the foreign land from whence he comes. With her chaperone the golden haired Octavia comes to visit her fiancée; the sisters come face to face, not knowing each other, and it is from this situation that Miss Clarke has woven her play said to vibrate with emotion of the dramatic sort and to pulsate with the sweetest sentiment to which frail humanity is heir.

DIFFERENCES OVER HOME RULE BILL

(Canadian Press.)
London, Oct. 17.—Serious differences have arisen between the government and the Irish Nationalists over the proposed provisions for Home Rule Bill. On the other points there is practical agreement.
The Irish parliament is to consist of two elected chambers, and an Irish representation largely reduced is to be maintained at Westminster.
The Irish government is to have control of police administration, on which the Nationalists propose a saving of £700,000 annually.
