DISPOSAL OF DEBRIS OF LUMBERING OPERATIONS

The following paper on Disposal of Debris and Waste Following Lumbering Operations was read at the Forestry Convention of Quebec last week by E. G. Joly de Lotbiniere, Pointe Platon, Que.

Among the many precautions to be taken to preserve our forests from fire, there is one that so far has received but scant attention, though it is of the greatest importance. I allude to the treatment of the debris or waste that litters our forests after lumbering operations.

There are three methods by which debris may be handled: Firstly—Its destruction by fire. Secondly—By lopping off all branches from the tops of piling them with other waste in isolated heaps as far removed from each other as possible.

Thirdly—By lopping off all branches from tops and spreading them on the forest floor.

PERSONAL EXPERIENCE

I propose in a very few words to give the result of my personal experience in testing these three methods, with the object of ascertaining as closely as possible which of them could best be put into operation, without entailing expenses which would render lumbering practically prohibitive.

I found that two good "fellers" where timber is plentiful and not too large could fell and cut into logs an average of 4000 ft. B. M. of lumber per day. These 4000 ft. would represent about 100 logs of an average of 40 ft. per log. To trim the tops of these 100 trees, light the fires and attend to the burning of the branches four men were required, at a cost of $1.25 per man, or five dollars for the four, making an additional cost in the production of these 100 logs of $1.25 per thousand feet.

To trim the tops and pile the debris in isolated heaps two men were able to follow the work at a cost of 52c. per 1000 ft., whilst to trim the tops and scatter the branches on the forest floor one man proved sufficient at a cost of 31c. per 1000 ft.

The second method, viz, that of piling the refuse in isolated heaps at a cost of 62c. per 1000 ft., is also more. I fancy than any lumberman would care to incur, particularly as this method is really not a safe one. The heaps in the case of a fire, being in the nature of a menace instead of a safety factor.

THE BEST METHOD

The third method, that of stripping the tops of all their branches and spreading them on the forest floor, appears to me to be the most practical and economic way of disposing of debris. An additional expenditure of 31c. per 1000 ft. to secure a large measure of safety can hardly be considered an obstacle to the adoption of this latter method in Canada. If I am not mistaken it is already largely followed in the States and with the best results. The reason is apparent, for when the debris is scattered on the forest floor it is crushed and particularly in this section of Canada where we have heavy snow into the mosses and humus and being constantly exposed to moisture very soon loses its dangerous qualities. Should a fire invade lumbered areas, where this precaution has been adopted, at the worst it would be largely a surface one and indefinitely safer to cope with than one coming in contact with tree tops or large piles of branches.

CUT DOWN DEAD TREES.

Before concluding these few remarks I should like to draw attention to another factor of safety, and that is that all standing dead trees especially if decayed, should be felled. In the case of a forest fire they are to be dreaded, particularly when hollow. They act as enormous chimneys belching sparks and flame far in front of the actual conflagration and setting fire as they fall, in many new places. The task of fire fighting, already a difficult one, is thus often rendered an impossibility.

I must confess that so far as I am concerned, I haven't, up to the present time, taken any of the precautions of which I have spoken in my lumbering operations, but the result of the experiments I have made this winter has decided me for the future to adopt at least the method of lopping and spreading the branches on the ground and I trust that before long arrangements may be made between our different governments and limit holders which will enable the latter to adopt some method of disposing of the waste material incident to lumbering operations in the forest.

"PIMPLES"

Broke Out All Over Her Face

Pimples are caused, almost entirely by bad blood and there is only one way to get rid of them and that is to get at the seat of the trouble by using a good reliable blood-purifying medicine.

Burdock Blood Bitters has been on the market for 35 years, and is one of the very best blood medicines procurable. After using it you will find that the pimples have disappeared, and you will have a beautiful clear complexion.

Mrs. Robert McNab, Badjeros, Ont. writes:—"I am greatly pleased to report the benefit I have received from the use of Burdock Blood Bitters. About a year ago I became so weak and run down I could scarcely walk, and pimples broke out all over my face. I tried one thing after another but nothing seemed to do me any good. I was advised by a friend to try B. B. B., and before I had used one bottle I felt it was doing me good so I used three bottles and I am now well and strong, and the pimples have all disappeared."

TORIES ALREADY ASHAMED OF NATIONALIST HERO

Some of our Opposition friends appear to be very much distressed over the fact that Mr. Gilbert, the new member for Drummond and Arthabaska, has been put down in the official blue-book as a Conservative. Indeed, one excited organ hysterically declares that "this is a depth, or 'height, of crime probably without parallel in any other Government in the world." If the member for Drummond, and Arthabaska is not now to be placed in the Conservative category, certainly some of the objecting organs were very ready to take him to their arms on the occasion of his election. Mr. Gilbert was acclaimed as the hero of the hour at that time, and his defeat of the Liberal candidate in that famous by-election was heralded throughout the length and breadth of the Dominion by the Opposition press, as "the beginning of the end of Liberal rule in Canada," and as "a crushing blow for Sir Wilfrid Laurier."

Not only was this so, but prominent leaders of the Conservative Party, such as Hon. George Bulas Foster, had sent telegrams advising Conservatives to vote for Mr. Gilbert. Mr. Borden, the official leader of the Opposition, was asked for his advice, and while he knew, or, at all events, ought to have known that Mr. Gilbert's campaign was "vicious, incendiary and anti-British in the extreme," he had no advice to offer other than, that the electors should "vote as their conscience dictated."

There was also the other fact that Mr. Gilbert's campaign was conducted by Mr. Monk, the Conservative members and the Conservative machine in that Province spared no effort to secure his election.

Under these circumstances, it was quite natural that the partisan press supporting the Opposition should have gone into paroxysms of joy over the return of Mr. Gilbert. Just

A VISION.

"And a little child shall lead them."
—Isa. XL; Verse 6.

Methought I stood within a temple
Sacred to the name of God,
I, a troubled, sin-stained pilgrim
Burdened with my heavy load.
And as rose the Christmas music
From the heavenly dome above,
Seemed to come an answering echo,
Borne upon the wings of love;
Quivering my fevered spirit
With a sense of inward calm.
Sounds of golden harps, and music
Breathing peace and healing balm.
And the vaulted roof above me
Seemed to open towards the sky;
While a dazzling choir of Angels
Shone before my awe-struck eye.
And as fell the heavenly music
From that bright celestial band,
Came a little cherub flying,
With a smile, and outstretched hand
As upon those angelic features
Wonderingly my gaze I bore,
Came the memory of a lost one
I had loved long years before.
Gone before but not forgotten,
Treasured in my heart's recess;
Once so fair, but now more lovely,
With a heavenly loveliness.
Then while on this beautiful vision
Gazed I on that face so mild,
With a voice of silvery sweetness
Spoke to me my angel child:

For the love that you do bear me,
I have come from realms of light;
From the Father's glorious presence,
Far beyond the starry height.
For as once on that first Christmas
Was the gentle Saviour's birth,
So at Christmas my visit
Those who love us best on earth.
For a golden link binds earthward
From its source in Heaven above;
Twixt the immortal and the mortal,
And its name is Human Love.
For this Love the Almighty Saviour
Came a little child to earth;
To redeem our sinful manhood
By His glorious death, and birth
I have come, but soon must leave you
For the Master calls me hence;
And "behind the veil" must vanish
From thy sight and human sense.

Oh, my child, I would go with you
I am weary of the strife;
Worn with the toil and struggle,
And there seems no better life.
But the burden of a sinner
I must carry all alone;
Shut out by my own ill-doing
From your bright and blessed Home
Can't thou give me hope to cheer me
How for sin can I atone?
That at last with all my loved ones
I may stand before the Throne.

Then the gentle child made answer
To my spirit's pleading prayer;
Thou hast many years before thee,
Patient you, your cross must bear,
From your sad and toil-worn brother
You must lift the load of care,
Bringing gladness to your own heart
While his burden you do share.
Then God's blessing will go with you
And your life will happy be;
"Inasmuch as you have helped him,
You have done it unto Me."
When the battle goes against you
And the tempter's power severs,
Lean not only on your own strength,
Bow your knee to God in prayer;
"Till you reach the journey's ending
And the bitter strife is won,
Gathering then that Glorious Presence
With His loving words—Well Done!

While the "Gloria (Deo) in Excelsis"
Pealed from out the organ then;
Passed away that gentle spirit
From my sight and human ken.
But as turned I from that temple
To the world of strife again,
Came the answer from the Heavens
Peace on earth, good will to men.

why they should object to the fact that he has been put down officially as a Conservative is hard to understand. They were willing to profit by his election, they applauded his defeat of the Government candidate, and leaders, like Mr. Foster and Mr. George Taylor, the late Chief Whip of the party, signalled the occasion by sending telegrams of congratulation to Mr. Monk.

If Mr. Gilbert is now on their side, they have only themselves to blame for it. Certainly the Liberals are not going to take him off their hands.
