SAME DIVIDEND ON U.S. STEEL.

R.U.D. FOR D.U.R.

Few people appreciate the strain under which Mayor Thompson and the attaches of his office worked for six months while the secret conference with the D.U.R. officials were on and which finally resulted in the submission of a tentative agreement with eight-for-a-quarter fares, universal transfers and a municipal ownership option. The most difficult thing was to keep the alert newspaper reporters from learning what the mayor was doing on his frequent absences from his office.

Ernest W. Kurz, the mayor's secretary, accomplished this by entering in the mayor's diary the mere initials "R.U.D." on the dates booked for conference. The pages of the diary are filled with "R.U.D.'s." One day a reporter noticed one of the peculiar entries. He asked who or what R.U.D. was.

CANADA CEMENT PROFITS.

In 1910 the Canada Cement Company earned 1.05 per cent. on its common stock. That was the first year of consolidation, before Mr. F. P. Jones had got a proper grip of the detail of the organization. It does not require a great stretch of imagination to look for 7 or 8 per cent. earned on the stock during the present year. Net profits in the first year of operations were $1,177,597, or nearly four times the annual bond interest. An increase of $750,000 to $1,000,000 in net profits should be possible, especially in view of the very strong working capital shown at the end of the last fiscal year. The excellent record of earnings has been accomplished more by saving in costs than by increased prices to consumers. That is the very best feature in the Cement position, and it is one which other big organizations might emulate to advantage.

SLASHED HIS THROAT IN ANDOVER JAIL

Andover, N.B., Oct. 30.—John Murphy, aged thirty-seven, a prisoner in the jail here, attempted suicide about nine o'clock this morning by cutting his throat with his jack-knife. He slashed twice, making an incision about four inches long, and which missed the jugular vein but penetrated the larynx.

Drs. F. N. Welling and G. B. Peat were called and sewed up the wound. The man refused to take an anaesthetic and underwent the ordeal quietly.

In explaining his act, Murphy said he had been troubled with a soreness in his throat which he believed was caused by an internal pimple, and that it was to relieve the swelling that he cut his throat. Murphy is serving a sentence of thirty days imposed by Judge Carleton on Thursday last for an assault on a thirteen-year-old lad named Gambin, whom he choked to obtain money. He came from Waterford, Ire., about eight years ago, and worked for a time on the G.T.P. near Grand Falls. He will be sent tomorrow to the Provincial Hospital for Nervous Diseases at St. John, as it is believed that he is insane.

WILL CARRY OUT PRE-ELECTION PROMISES

North Bay, Ont., Oct. 31.—Hon. Frank Cochrane, minister of railways and canals, stated at a convention at North Bay, that it would be his endeavor to see carried out, the election promise of the Borden administration that the same energetic policy heretofore applied to Western Canada, would be given in northern Ontario. Railway would be considered, the opinion of the minister of railways and canals, being that the provincial railway, was entitled to the same consideration as a private company from the federal government.

SCOTLAND'S LIFE BLOOD DRAINED BY EMIGRATION

Scotland is being drained of her life's blood. In the Highlands and Lowlands the old people are being left in loneliness, and by their hearthside they are thinking wistfully of the bairns who once played around them. There is silence now in many Scottish homes. The footsteps of the young folk no longer clatter up from the village street or crush the scent out of the purple heather on the hillsides. The bairns have grown up into tall men and women, and they have listened to the voice which is calling away the sturdy sons and the tallest lasses of Scotland. They have followed the call and have gone to build new homes in the Far West, while the old folk sit with clasped hands, hugging remembrance, which is a cold and ghostly thing.

For hundreds of years Scotland has sent out her sons in search of fortune. Too barren is the soil to nourish those who have ambition. Never has there been elbow room for Scots who have the spirit of adventure. Wherever, in the old days, there was a crown to defend, a chivalrous course or a nation in arms, the Scot might be found among the men-at-arms or in the King's bodyguard or by the side of a man fighting for a throne and kingdom. They trooped over the border southward to London, and in spite of their broad Scots speech and the racial hostility of the English they helped to build up the trade of the city and the Empire. They followed the flag and carried to far colonies, as pioneers of exploration, as farmers, as backwoodsmen and ranchmen. In Australia and New Zealand and South Africa and Canada they kept their Scottish habits and Scottish speech and Scottish character, and scattered the Empire with their homesteads, and watered it with their blood, and stiffened its backbone.

So this Scottish emigration is not a new tale. It goes back to the unfolding of the modern world. Yet the tale now has reached a new and startling chapter. For during the past few years this tide of emigration from Scotland has swelled and broadened into a great, rushing, impetuous torrent. The sons of Scotland are leaving their native soil not singly, but in battalions. The new census returns reveal a desolated country with deserted villages and abandoned parishes. Even in the towns the artisans are leaving their factories and besieging the emigration offices, for cheap passages to Canada.

CANADA GETS 17,000 A YEAR

There are amazing figures which will strike sharp arrows into the hearts of Scotsmen who have pride in their country's history and a love for the soil. In ten years a quarter of a million people have been drained from a population of five millions. Canada absorbs Scotsmen at the rate of 17,000 a year, and this year will see a large increase above this figure. Even in East Lothian, the most prosperous and fertile Province in Scotland, there are decreases in population in half the towns and villages. In more barren districts depopulation has been more swift and more tragic. It is true to say that only the old people and the infirm and the very poor have been left behind in villages which ten, twenty years ago were full of life and lusty manhood.

The voice of the Canadian advertiser calls loudly in the ears of the Scottish people. He goes everywhere pasting his richly colored pictures of the Golden West upon every boarding. He plucks the artisan by the sleeve, and says, "Canada and a rich life are waiting for you." He leans over the gate of the peasant-farmer and says, "Why scratch and scrape at barren soil? Come away to the fat lands of the Far West."

CANADA A SECOND SCOTLAND

By young and active and ambitious men these flaming pictures, this incessant voice, cannot be ignored. They gaze across the purple moor, and give a heavy sigh, for they are loath to leave old Scotland; but one day they walk round to the shipping office, and at last say good-bye to the mother who is too brave to bid them be stay-at-homes. So Scotland is being drained of its life blood, and Canada welcomes with wide embracing arms the men whom she needs so much, the men who will fill up her great gaps of loneliness with the industry and the solid character and the strong, brave spirit of the Scottish race.

Canada already is a transplanted Scotland. It is the Scotland of the American continent. Its map is strewn with Scottish place-names. The pioneers and settlers have given to the mountain passes the names of Highland glens, and in the great farmsteads of the West, in its great orchards, on its cattle ranches, in its factories, in its city offices, men speak in the tongue of Aberdeen, of Glasgow, of the Highlands and Lowlands. They have gone away from the old soil, but always these exiles remember the country of their birth or of their forefathers wish on enduring love as deep as that of the Irishman for the Emerald Isle, deeper, perhaps than the English Colonist for the Mother Country.—Toronto Telegram.

POSSIBLE SOLUTION OF NAVAL QUESTION

Ottawa, Oct. 31.—The government is now considering the proposal to have Canadian passenger steamers to be constructed in future so equipped that they can serve as cruisers in time of war. Hon. J. D. Hazen, minister of marine and fisheries, will go to England to confer with the Admiralty in regard to the matter. This will probably be the Borden government's solution of the naval question. Custom receipts for the Dominion show an increase at the rate of one million dollars per month for the last six months. For October alone the receipts were $7,698,123, an increase of $1,885,711 over October of last year.

WINNIPEG ELEC.

Winnipeg, Man., Oct. 27.—According to Hugh Sutherland, one of the directors of the Winnipeg Electric Railway Company, there is no truth in the report that New York interests which are contemplating purchasing Winnipeg Electric have come to any definite decision in favor of buying. "Interests concerned," said Mr. Sutherland, "obtained an option for a period long enough to enable them to thoroughly examine the property. Until option expires it would be foolish to prophesy anything at all and to say that the interest concerned have decided to purchase the property is pure moonshine."

When asked when the next meeting of directors would be held Mr. Sutherland stated that it would be called as soon as several members out of the city would return. Sir William Mackenzie who arrives here Monday wires deal is on.

CLASSIC DANCING DELIGHTED AUDIENCE LAST EVENING

A fairly large audience was at the City Opera House Monday night to see Countess Thamar de Swirsky the Russian interpretative dancer. The performance deserved a much larger attendance and delighted those who were present. The dancing of the Countess was a revelation and not the least enjoyable part of the performance was the music of the symphony orchestra under the leadership of W. F. Kraff. Her interpretation of the music which was both her inspiration and her accompaniment, is poetic and artistic to a degree difficult to describe. What the work of a master musician is to the hearing, her dancing is to the eye. The spirit of the music translated by the poetry of motion, but freely describes her performance. The grace of her every motion makes her seem less like an ordinary human being than like a fairy at play.

Following the music with fidelity, the countess expresses in her movements and postures almost every emotion. In the lighter pieces she was like an irresponsible child in the freedom of her gaiety and in one or two of the more serious works she showed tremendous dramatic power. In accordance with the classic ideal, the dancer did not hamper the gracefulness of her movements by the stiff artificiality of modern clothing. The frankness and simplicity of her manner disarm conventionality and leave the impression of modesty and refinement.

The programme covered a wide range, and the difference with which each item was interpreted showed the great versatility of the artist.

Beginning with national dances, Hungarian and Russian, the program gradually developed.

The pantomime and Tzigane dance which called for unusual powers for the expression of the varied emotions was next in order. It was followed by a rather weird Egyptian ballet. The last series included some stately Greek dances, a very bright and charming floral dance, and closed with the Baccanal, a triumph of gay abandon.

One of the cleverest touches was the attitude of utter exhaustion which proved her mute apology for refusing an encore to the thunderous applause which marked the close of the programme.
