BERLIN EXCITED OVER SIR EDWARD'S SPEECH

At the outset Sir Edward told the house that Herr Von Kiderlin Waechter's disclosed the conventions which had been taken place between the German ambassador and himself had taken him by surprise.

In diplomatic procedure it was most unusual to make public any such conversation without consulting the other party and he knew nothing whatever of Herr Von Kiderlin Waechter's intention until he read the published account.

He did not make any complaint, however, as he understood that the exigencies of the situation in Germany precluded any such consultation.

Herr Von Kiderlin Waechter's statement was not complete so that he (Sir Edward Grey) was under no necessity of putting the part taken by the British foreign office before the house of commons in a fuller manner.

Chancellor of the Exchequer Lloyd George's speech which roused such anger in Germany was delivered after consultation with Sir Edward Grey and Premier Asquith.

"Its purport was that where British interests are affected we must not be treated as if we are of no account. If the time ever comes when this cannot be said we shall have ceased to exist—at any rate as a great power," was Sir Edward Grey's comment.

Four days later Count De Wolf Metternich presented to Sir Edward a communication complaining of Mr. Lloyd George's speech.

"It was exceedingly stiff in tone," said Sir Edward, "and I feel it necessary to say that the fact that it created surprise in Germany was in itself a justification for the speech."

"I felt the tone of the communication made it inconsistent without dignity to give any explanations of the speech."

BREAK IN THE CLOUDS.

On July 27 came a break in the clouds. Count Wolf Metternich presented a note full of good will hoping that Sir Edward Grey would find an opportunity of reassuring the public in regard to Germany's intentions, acknowledging the British foreign secretary's desire for a Franco-German agreement reiterating that British interests would not be touched, and pointing out how Great Britain could forward a settlement by calming the public opinion of France.

"The House will observe," said Sir Edward, "that the tone of this communication was friendly all round, to France as well as to ourselves. I at once expressed appreciation of the friendly tone in which it was couched. I expressed the hope that it might be taken as a new starting place and that we need not return to things which must lead to mutual recriminations."

Sir Edward Grey also told Count Wolf Metternich on that occasion that the British government knew that a reclassification of the Congo frontier was proposed as the basis of a settlement between Germany and France and said he thought the matter might be arranged on such a basis without affecting British interests.

DIPLOMATIC BUT POINTED.

"We shall be very glad if this happens and in the hope that it would happen we have hitherto stood on one side," Sir Edward Grey said to the ambassador, and continued, "but I had been made anxious by the news regarding the demands which the German government had made from the French government, which in effect meant a cession of the French Congo and which it was obviously impossible for the French government to concede. I pointed out that the Germans were in the closed port of Agadir, that they were landing and negotiating with the tribes, and for all we knew might be acquiring concessions. It might also be that the German flag had been hoisted at Agadir which is the most suitable port on that coast for a naval base."

Sir Edward pointed out to Count Wolf Metternich that in the event of the negotiations with France failing, Great Britain would be obliged to take some steps in order to protect British interests.

The German ambassador was not in a position to impart any information to the British foreign office, but he depreciated the assumption of possible damage to British interests and said he was sure that his government had no intention of acquiring commercial monopolies.

The communication made to the British foreign office by the German ambassador, Count Paul Wolf-Metternich on July 1, in regard to the despatch of the German gunboat Panther to Agadir in southern Morocco and the ambassador's explanation in regard to that matter, continued Sir Edward Grey, made it clear that Germany regarded a return to the status quo in Morocco as impossible and Germany's real objective was a definite solution of the whole Moroccan question.

MADE IT PLAIN

On July 3, Sir Edward Grey informed the German ambassador that the situation created by the despatch of the Panther to Agadir was so serious and important that it must be discussed at a cabinet council, and on July 4, he told Count Wolf-Metternich that Great Britain was not able to take up a disinterested attitude concerning Morocco nor to recognize any new arrangement come to without her consent.

A long silence followed and the next conversation between Sir Edward Grey and Count Wolf-Metternich took place on July 21 when the British foreign secretary told the German ambassador that the British government adhered to his statement made on July 4.

Thence forward there were no further difficulties. "A good deal of misunderstanding could have been avoided," remarked Sir Edward, "if Germany had been more clear about July 4 that she had no intention of taking any part of Morocco."

Alluding to the policy of isolation, Sir Edward Grey thought it would be a disastrous policy for Great Britain to allow it to be understood that she would under no circumstances give her friends assistance if attacked. That will deprive her of all her friends in Europe and she will soon be building warships against the rest of the world. If on the other hand England continually interfered with international affairs of other nations as had been proposed by some members of the house of commons, the consequences would be an expenditure

PROVINCIAL BY-ELECTIONS.

Nomination will be held on Thursday, Dec. 7, election on Dec. 12 and declaration on Dec. 15. A writ has also been issued for the by-election in Sunbury county to fill the vacancy in the provincial legislature caused by the resignation of the Hon. J. D. Hazen. The date of nomination is fixed for Thursday, Dec. 7th, and polling for the following Thursday, Dec. 14th. A call has been issued by the supporters of the provincial government for a convention of the party to be held at the Court House at Burton on Tuesday, Dec. 5th, for nomination of a candidate.

on armaments even greater than at present and the peace which the people desired to preserve would soon topple over. "Let us make new friendships by all means, but not at the expense of those we have."

ATTITUDE OF GERMAN EMPEROR

I desire to improve our relations with Germany and intend to maintain our relations unimpaired. The German imperial chancellor recently made two speeches which were inspired with the hope of seeing his country strong but not aggressive. It that is the spirit of German policy, then within two or three years the talk of a great European war will have gone. The effect of the Moroccan settlement must be to relax the tension and to remove a great obstacle from the path of European progress. For years the question of Morocco has been a discomfort to diplomats. It has been settled without breaking the peace of Europe and the part his majesty's government has taken has contributed materially to the result."

Bonar Law, leader of the Unionists in a speech strongly supporting Sir Edward Grey, said that the foreign secretary's statement had convinced him that every step taken was with a sole regard for British interest.
