ADVISE FOR BORDEN

The Montreal Star which was an important factor in bringing about a change of government and which evidently intends to keep a sharp eye on Mr. Borden's movements tenders him a lot of free advice in a recent issue. It says that Mr. Borden has a big majority which means a free hand. That being so he can choose his ministers when he will; and if the choice be unworthy of the occasion, he cannot saddle the blame upon such worn scape-goats as party expediency or the necessity of placating this or that cabal. This gentle hint is of course thrown out for the benefit of such men as Hon. Geo. E. Foster and Mr. Fowler, whom The Star admires very much, and it will be interesting to wait and see how much heed is paid to it by Mr. Borden.

Referring to the matter of government advertising and printing the Star says: "There are newspapers supporting every government to whom this contribution from Ottawa is an important part of their yearly revenue. That being true how can we possibly expect independent and fair comment on the actions of the Government from journals which live by its bounty? The fact is, of course, that we do not expect it and that we do not get it."

In this connection The Star points out that its custom for years past has been to publish government advertisements as news matter, "and we propose" it says "to continue this policy. Where a government advertisement is of interest to our readers we will put it in our paper. For this service we will not accept a penny of public money."

The Star can well afford to take high ground. It is owned by a millionaire and philanthropist, who will probably be rewarded with the Canadian high commissionership or some other fat job. Other and less fortunate Tory newspaper men, however, will probably be willing to accept all the government advertising and printing that comes their way, and they will be foolish if they permit the Montreal Star to run the whole show.

DEMETRIUS THE VICTOR

The action of the great moneyed interests of Canada in fighting reciprocity is thus splendidly summed-up by Sir Richard Cartwright:

These gentlemen want precedents. Sir, I will give them one! About 2,000 years ago there resided in Ephesus a certain advanced Liberal-Conservative protectionist of the name of Demetrius. A gentleman asks him to define what an advanced Liberal-Conservative may be. Sir, all that I can say is that in my experience of the animal, an advanced Liberal-Conservative is the exact opposite of what a genuine Conservative should be. And here, Sir, let me say that I have always entertained a profound respect for genuine Conservatives of every class and creed, and that I hold that no nation is likely to attain real greatness unless it is strongly Conservative in many important ways. But as for the Canadian description of advanced Liberal-Conservative, I may say that he is a person who possesses no fixed convictions, and would not know what to do with them if he had them. What he possesses are certain instincts, one to feather his own nest by any means fair or foul, preferably the latter, and another to give the Grits.

Fortunately, we possess a remarkably accurate record of the proceedings of this Demetrius. He seemed to have called his brother craftsmen together and addressed them as follows:

Friends, I observe that a certain pestilent Hebrew by the name of Paul has arrived in Ephesus and is preaching to the people that there are no gods made with hands. I do not know and I do not care whether this doctrine of Paul's be true or false, but I do know that if he induces the majority of the people to believe in our craft it is danger. Let us call a mass meeting without delay, and let us accuse this Paul of being a disloyal man and a blasphemer. So said, so done.

A mass meeting was called accordingly, and it is on record that though the most of them knew not for what purpose it was called, they howled all the same until the police magistrate of Ephesus, who seems to have been a person of superior intelligence to some officers of that description of whom he had heard, admonished the meeting that if they did not stop the noise, they would bring the Roman garrison down upon them.

In the present case, however, Demetrius, the moneyed monopolist, won out by frightening and buying judge, jury and magistrate. But the momentary madness of the people will soon pass away, and Mr. Demetrius may find reason to regret his stand at this time.

The letter of Rev. Dr. Smith, in another part of this issue, criticizing some features of the exhibition, will repay a careful perusal. The Rev. doctor calls attention to some features in connection with the recent exhibition which he considers objectionable from the standpoint of morality. In doing this he is merely performing what he feels to be his duty as a Christian worker, and is not actuated by any spirit of fault finding. If what Dr. Smith says is true, it would be well for the exhibition management in future to keep a more watchful eye over those who secure the right to conduct side shows on the grounds.

Those who went about the country during the recent campaign making use of the ne temere decree and the encharistic congress as canvasses against the government should feel heartily ashamed of themselves in view of the hearty support which Mr. Borden received from Roman Catholics in many sections of the country.

It is said that Mr. George Black, a former Frederictonian is likely to be the next governor of the Yukon. Mr. Black was for many years a resident of Dawson city and was an unsuccessful candidate for parliament in the Conservative interest three years ago.

It is said that the man who wrote Rule Britannia was responsible for the defeat of the Laurier government. He had an able assistant in the author of the ne temere decree.

Mr. George W. Fowler's majority in Kings by 369, and Albert gave his Kings by 369, and Albert gave his opponent 27 majority.

Hon. H. R. Emmerson was yesterday declared elected in Westmorland by a majority of sixty-nine.

The official returns in Northumberland give Mr. W. S. Loggie a majority of 392.

OTTAWA WELCOMES

THE NEW PREMIER

Ottawa, Sept. 26.—Ottawa's Conservative enthusiasm, pent up for fifteen long years, found spectacular vent tonight. The elaborate public demonstration arranged by the Ottawa Conservative Association in honor of the victorious Conservative leader, made ample amends for the disappointments of the preceding four elections and rivalled the most enthusiastic outburst of acclaim ever given Sir Wilfrid Laurier on his return to the capital when he was victor instead of vanquished.

It was the first real chance the capital has had to really cheer Mr. Borden and full advantage was taken of it. His personal popularity in the city, where he has been a resident for the past eleven years, is almost as great as that of Sir Wilfrid. This combined with the great victory of the Conservative party in the Dominion on Thursday last, the fact that both Conservative candidates in Ottawa were among the victors, good weather and ample time for preparation made conditions ideal for a record-breaking demonstration so far as the capital is concerned.

Fully 20,000 people lined the route of the procession which escorted Mr. Borden, Mr. Perley and the two local members elect, Messrs. Frapp and Chabot, through the principal streets of the city. Some 10,000 people were in the triumphant parade of flag bedecked motors, carriages and supporters mounted on or foot. The parade was a mile long and took forty minutes in passing. For nearly two hours street car traffic was practically at a standstill and the

AMERICAN PRESS COMMENT ON CANADIAN ELECTIONS

(New York Tribune)

Though Canada has temporarily refused to sanction a compact intended to expand American-Canadian commerce, the United States will not alter its attitude of friendliness or cease to hope that another agreement aiming at the same results as the Taft-Laurier compact will some day be approved by both nations.

(New York Herald)

The effect on the future of Canada of this election must be watched with interest. The new Government will go into office committed to a protective tariff. It also opposes the naval policy adopted by the Liberals. It remains to be seen, however, how agricultural Canada, responsible for the defeat of reciprocity will like the deal it has made for itself.

(Baltimore American)

The rejection of reciprocity will prove a disappointment to President Taft and to other American statesmen, who regarded it as a measure that would improve the tax between both lands and remove the friction that so frequently arises over boundary problems. Negotiations for reciprocity may some time be resumed, but after this ungracious act of Canada, the United States will be slow to make further advances to the Dominion.

(Washington Post)

Possibly the relations between Canada and the United States will not be improved by the rejection of reciprocity, but fair-minded Americans will not cherish resentment against the Canadians for their decision. The reciprocity arrangement would not have been worth a straw if it had not been a fair and free proposal, to be accepted or rejected by either country in the light of its own interests.

THE MARCHIONESS OF DONEGALL

(Regina Leader)

Regina, Sept. 21.—Regina had a distinguished visitor yesterday in the person of the exceptionally pretty and charming Marchioness of Donegall, formerly Miss Violet Twining of Fredericton, who is on a tour through Canada and was the guest while in town of Mrs. E. D. McCallum. Last night Mrs. McCallum gave a dinner in honor of the Marchioness, lovely pink roses adorning the table of ten covers laid in the private dining room of the King's Hotel.—Yesterday afternoon a luncheon was given at government House in honor of the Marchioness of Donegall.

Air was filled with the music of brass bands, the cheers of the jubilant Conservatives, the tooting of horns and the noise of fire crackers.

At the end of his residence, the premier elect, thanked the demonstrators saying: "This is a wonderful demonstration, perhaps the greatest in Ottawa, or in fact, the Dominion, and it is right that it should be so, in the capital city, for gentlemen, the 21st of September will go down in history of the country, as one of the most important and notable dates since confederation. This is not so much a demonstration of the triumph of one political party over another, this demonstration is because the people of Canada have spoken and have said that the country will march in the old path, the path that leads to Canadian unity, Canadian nationhood and British connections, Canada has said: 'Now and for all time in the future, that there is no parting of the ways.'"

(New York Post)

Yesterday's general election in Canada is one of those political events which bulk large on the instant and of which the far-reaching significance grows as one reflects upon them. That it was the voice of the Canadian nation which spoke at the polls, there can be no question. No mere partisan management, no amount of artificial clamor, no effort by special interests, can account for such a startling political upheaval. Wholly unexpected, in any such magnitude, by the press or by news-gatherers or by the politicians of either party, it witnesses to a deep and pervasive feeling among the great masses of Canadian citizens who said very little but who voted in such decisive fashion. Nor is there any mistaking the nature of this feeling. It is that of national pride and national self-sufficiency. To all the evidences of this which Canada has given in recent years, she has now added the crowning demonstration to work out her own destinies for herself, and to hold herself proudly aloof from anything which might even appear an entangling dependence upon her powerful neighbor to the south. Whether we like it or not, whether we think it a mistake or not, there stands the fact that the electors of 8,000,000 people yesterday declared the national will.

First of all, we should read in this rebuff by the Canadian people a severe censure of the Administrations which have been in power in the United States for the past fifteen years, for having neglected the great opportunity to promote closer trade relations with Canada. Her representatives again and again approached the Washington authorities, but were steadily sent away empty handed.

SIR MAX AITKEN

IN PARLIAMENT

The Empire Magazine (London) for September, contains the following complimentary reference to a Montrealer's first Parliamentary speech.

Quite the feature of the month was the speech by Sir W. M. Aitken, the young Canadian millionaire, who at the last election captured Ashton-under-Lyne for the Unionist party. The romance of commerce has played a big part in Sir Max's thirty-two years of life. He was "discovered" politically by Mr. Bonar Law. "Why not stand for Parliament?" said his friend. Sir Max Aitken turned the idea over in his mind very quickly. He was not a politician in the ordinary sense of the word; but was heart and soul an Empire man. He was not a practised speaker, but he had something to say. Rather later in the day he started his campaign and just talked in a friendly, conversational way upon the Imperial matters which were near his heart and which he thoroughly understood. He won.

At Westminster he is a little bit shy. He does not eagerly embrace chances for self-advertisement. But the subject of Colonial Preference debated with the Colonial Secretary in the middle of the Treasury Bench could not fail to fetch him "up." He made a thoughtful and suggestive speech, distinguished rather for matter than for manner.

Effectively he pointed out how the United States Government had developed its Colonial system by Imperial—or rather Republican—Preference during the last six years. All the time Great Britain was, in this respect, standing still. Gravely he uttered a warning which is worthy of consideration, from a man who knows what he is talking about; he also uttered a prophecy. After the United States had completed the reciprocity agreement with Canada, he said they would make overtures to Newfoundland and afterwards to the West Indies; and unless Great Britain took some steps in the matter, it was absolutely certain the West Indies would have to accept the situation.

MET AT BANQUET

Ottawa, Sept. 26.—At a dinner given last night at the Rideau Club, Sir Wilfrid Laurier and R. L. Borden met for the first time since the elections. Sir Wilfrid extended his hearty congratulations to the man who had at last succeeded in defeating him at the polls. The two rivals grasped each other's hands cordially. Mr. Borden who expressed pleasure that he had won was touched by the cordiality of Sir Wilfrid's congratulations.

The dinner to Earl Grey was a fare well one, given by the members of the club. His Excellency sat to the right of the chairman, and Sir Wilfrid to his left. Mr. Borden sat at the right of his excellency.

Both the premier and the premier-elect paid high tributes to the services rendered by Earl Grey to Canada. Mr. Borden wore the customary suit dress, while Sir Wilfrid wore the uniform of an Imperial privy councillor with an array of orders.

Mr. A. J. Gross of St. John, arrived in the city last night.

Mr. J. Fred Payne of Lincoln, is at the Queen.

Mr. J. W. Hoyt of McAdam, is in the city.

It is a refreshing feature of this Parliament that includes men who have studied Empire problems intimately at first hand; but the trouble is that one does not hear enough of them.
