INTERESTING GOSSIP ON FADS AND FASHIONS

New York, July 31.—Some fashion authorities have expressed the opinion that the coming autumn will bring many important changes of fashions. They say that the prosperity of the manufacturers and dealers in dress goods demands a decided change in the fashionable silhouette. It is claimed that only by such a radical change can the business be made profitable again. The depression in the business of the manufacturers and dealers was due not only to the fact that the fashionable dresses required an unusually small amount of material, but also to the fact that owing to the retention of the slender silhouette for a number of seasons women were enabled to wear their old frocks for several seasons without being actually out of style.

The same authorities admit that a sudden radical change of the silhouette is not probable, as the women seem to like the present style with its straight and narrow lines. The designers have been experimenting lately with introducing certain modifications of the prevailing style which will eventually lead to a change of the silhouette. Here and there one has seen a skirt with a trifle more amplitude than the majority, a noticeably smart frock with the natural waistline defined. Flounces and plaitings have crept into use, though so flat and limp are they that they do not seem aggressive.

The Marie Antoinette fichu has been used upon the narrow, scant, high-waisted models of 1911 but perhaps it may be an entering wedge for the long waist and skirt amplitude of its own period. The revival of taffeta and the trimmings of the early Victorian period, ruchings, shirred cords, puffing, etc., may be another opening wedge, though now all this is set in tune with the silhouette of last spring.

The fashion struggle of the autumn will undoubtedly rage most hotly around the sleeves and skirts, though coat lengths are a burning topic at present. The general opinion seems to be that the kimono sleeve went, but the law of probabilities seems to be in favor of carrying out the decree this time. It is safe to predict that the autumn will bring a change in the sleeves, but how radical that change will be there is no telling.

Just what the popular sleeve will be remains to be seen, but it would not be advisable to have a new frock intended for autumn use, made on the kimono lines which dominate summer costumes. It is also true that the very high waist line, though seen everywhere, is undoubtedly losing prestige, and it seems likely that the modish line will be found, that is at the natural waist line, even if it does not, as some rumors gave it, elongate itself still further.

Summer cloaks and wraps of all kinds are more than usually good this year, and they run the gamut from the severest and most conventional of tailored dust coats to the to the most fantastic of little mantles and short coats. The reversible coat, which was an unusual thing at the beginning of the season, is often seen now both in satin and in wool and has its practical value. The woollen models are invariably of two-faced cloth, such materials being supplied in great variety and beauty by the foreign manufacturers. The reversible coat of satin is made both in the double faced satin and in satin of one color lined with satin of contrasting color, the latter being, of course, considerably the warmer of the two and therefore less satisfactory for hot weather purposes.

Velvet appears upon many of the coats in satin, marquisette, chiffon, etc., but it is as a rule used sparingly merely to give effective relief. The white double-faced satin with soft collar on the under side, makes up into delightful coats, the big collars and cuffs showing the colored side and touches of black velvet or heavy lace serving as additional trimming.

Double-faced fine broadcloth is lively too in white and color. In place of black satin, which used to be extremely fashionable for long coats, French makers now often use various shades of night blue, taupe, bronze green, raisin, etc.

Semi-transparent long coats of colored marquisette or chiffon, embroidered in self color or bordered by self-colored satin or velvet are good looking when worn over white or harmonizing colors, and one of the novelties of the season is the lingerie long coat, whose fine foundation is usually almost hidden by insect laces and embroidery.

Some of the summer wraps touch the floor, while others are diminutive affairs that are merely thrown over the shoulders. Usually the material is transparent, or, if not transparent so soft, thin and limp that it gives the suggestion of transparency.

Tawny brown is a favorite color for handsome wraps for wear over smart afternoon frocks. Last summer brown was as dead as last year's fashion magazine. Brown linens and foulards could be picked up for a song. Brown in a garment costing over three figures was unheard of. But now all the brown shades are back in high favor and the choice ranges from buff down through mustard, tobacco and wood browns to a rich, deep seal.

What in the springtime promised to be a fad has developed into a fashion. This is the taffeta coat which is worn with plain and striped skirts. It is usually of a vivid color either solid or iridescent. The skirt is usually of white serge or lingette, pongee or rajah. Usually the plain white is chosen, but often there is a stripe in it. The coats are in all the fruit reds, the purple of the plums in leaf greens and tobacco brown. It is an attractive idea for the woman who has a separate white skirt and does not wish to get a short coat that can be worn only as a part of a suit.

The tunics are becoming longer as the season advances, and in some cases very nearly reach the hem of the underskirt. Beneath these tunics at times a kind of quaint cuirass of old-time lace may be desired, with the upper portion of the corsage and enveloping hip piece of similar lace. Sleeves to the elbow are finished with a trio of silken muslin bias folds of three shades or different colors matching those of the dress, or they are turned back with a reverse of lace and edged with a narrow line of velvet.

There is a decided preference for evening gowns of gray, the shades being, of course, those that are at their best under artificial light. Stone gray is not favored, though combined with cerise in various ways and embroidered in silver it has found some admirers.

The wide Japanese sash is a piquant and charming finish for dainty summer frocks. It is fastened high in the back, has enormous loops or bows and is usually of some contrasting deeper colored silk or satin than the gown itself.

Many of the new parasols are in bordered effects—pongee silks with bands of Persian or Dresden satins or perhaps a border of plain colored taffets.

Girls are showing again a fancy for low-neck dresses completed with second empire collars of muslin or embroidery.
