REV. J. J. COLTER DISCUSSES TEMPERANCE QUESTION

Once to every tribe and nation, Comes the moment to decide, In the strife twixt truth and error For the good or evil side. Some great cause, God's new Messiah Offering each the bloom or blight, Puts the goats upon the left side And the sheep upon the right. And the choice goes by forever. For that darkness or that light.

Such a moment has come to us in connection with the approaching civic election. On the one side are the candidates for good government. They should have the support of all law-abiding citizens, since they are making sacrifices to ameliorate the condition of the drunkard and his family as well as that of the idle young men who stand at our street corners, waiting for some one to treat them. They will strive to save our city from the blight of the drink demon. In their candidature they will have the prayer of God's people. No one who in any way supports the iniquitous liquor traffic can consistently pray, Thy kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. St. John writes, We know that we have the petitions we desired of Him because we keep His commandments and do the things that are pleasing in His sight. Is any one so blinded that he believes the liquor traffic with all its horrors is pleasing to God. Archbishop Ireland said, that as he walked the streets of New York and saw the names of so many of his countrymen over the doors of the saloons he was ashamed of his country. Could we believe that he would pray for the success of candidates who would favor them.

What about those who call themselves the citizens' candidates? On which side are they in this struggle? There can only be one answer to that question. Is not the liquor interest of the city behind them as well as that of St. John, where it is said a large sum was raised to bribe the electors and an organizer sent up to see that it was laid out to the best advantage. If they are elected will there not be rejoicing all over our Dominion on the part of those who are engaged in the liquor traffic? These men have a powerful combination in their favor. One of them is a prominent Orangeman and it is expected his brethren will support him. They include the organizer of both political parties. They are also counting on another strong factor in addition to the liquor interest. But there was a very strong combination at Calvary and it had an apparent victory, yet that victory was its leath-knell. Should these men have a momentary victory, history will repeat itself. If this becomes again a rum sodden city, drunkards, their wives and children will suffer, but the guilt will lie at the door of the rum-seller and those who aid him in his unholy work.

I once heard a man, filled with shame and remorse after a drunken debauch, say, The fathers have eaten sour grapes, &c. His father sold liquor and neither he nor his family escaped the consequence. Sin and punishment are inseparable.

But these men will tell us there is as much liquor sold here as ever there was. If such is the case, why do the liquor men of this city and St. John put forth such efforts to defeat the candidates of the good government? Strong drink no longer flaunts itself in our faces, nor does it appeal to our senses as we walk our streets. It is under the law's ban and sneaks into low dens and out of the way places, where self-respecting persons are ashamed to go. A commercial traveller said to Dr. Moore, secretary of temperance and moral reform: I transact my business as quickly as possible in license places and if possible spend the night in dry towns like Fredericton. He confessed that he had been a drunkard, and on one occasion when under the influence of drink, he turned his wife and little daughter out of doors and the little one took a cold that caused her death. This was to him a life-long sorrow. Drink is responsible for many such tragedies. Let us make our city a safe and desirable place to live in. We are encouraging manufacturers to come and establish their plants here. Will they not be more apt to do so if their operators are not tempted by open saloons? It is in the interest of the city that as many students as possible should attend our educational institutions. Will parents be more likely to send their sons to us if there is danger of their becoming drunkards. A lady whose son attended College in this city and learned to drink, rum being sold at that time without let or hindrance, said to me recently: I have another son who will soon be ready for College and I will send him to Sackville. Everywhere those who sell liquor are regarded by all right-thinking persons as the worst assets of the country in which they live. Recently Dr. Moore, who advocates temperance and moral reform all over the Dominion, was met by a woman who kissed him and, when the father asked what that meant, she replied: "Dad, I am proud of you and will spend my life in making ours the best country in the world." That son who is only twenty-two, is on the staff of one of the leading literary journals of Canada. In several respects we take the lead now. We have the best Lord's Day act, and the best criminal code in the world. We use less than one-half as much liquor per head as is used in the United States, and only a little more than one-half as much as in the Mother Country. Let us do nothing to sully our record. Some say that they do not believe in prohibition and would like to have license substituted for it. A person who was fighting for the repeal of the Scott Act was asked if his party succeeded, would he apply for high license, he replied that he would, and when asked if he would prosecute those who sold without license, replied with an oath, "No, but I would sell to them." Would such a state of things be an improvement? The trend of public opinion is toward prohibition. Nova Scotia, with the exception of the city of Halifax, has it. In the Southern States, three-quarters of the territory is under it. Georgia and Alabama have locked their doors absolutely against the traffic, and there is throughout the whole country an almost unanimous sentiment in favor of the abolition of alcohol. A large portion of the Northern States has prohibition. In almost three-quarters of Ontario there is prohibition. The government of Great Britain has attacked the traffic and greatly reduced the number of saloons. Let us not be guilty of a retrograde movement. The signs of the times indicate that the days of the saloon will soon be ended.

Some object to the prejudice that is occasioned by the Scott Act. A good man will neither lie nor pre-judge himself. If the liquor traffic has so demoralized witnesses that they will be guilty of both these sins, let us destroy it.

Some contend that there are other interests besides prohibition at stake. That is true, but in comparison with it they are very insignificant, and they would be very safe in the hands of the temperance candidates.

The objection I have to the so-called citizen candidates is that they are connected with a cause that promotes poverty, immorality, vice, ignorance, sin and shame. I visit poor families in this town who suffer from cold and want and their houses are inferior to the stables of some of our candidates, and there is so much overcrowding that you wonder how purity is possible and it is stated that nine-tenths of this poverty is the result of drinking. Take that away and the remaining tenth could easily be relieved by the benevolent associations of the city.

When about to deposit your ballot remember that the hand that was pierced will receive it, and if it is for Him, you may hope one day to hear Him say, "Inasmuch as you did it in the interests of these suffering ones, you did it unto Me."

NORMAL STUDENT DIED OF RHEUMATIC FEVER

Edwin Little, son of J. Albert Little of Coburn, died at his home there Monday morning after more than a month's illness from rheumatic fever. He was taken ill while attending the Normal School here. At times it seemed that he would recover under the skillful treatment he received but the disease proved too strong for him. He was a bright and clever young man and gave promise of a useful career for which he was diligently preparing himself at Normal School where he was entered for first class and his early death is greatly deplored not only by the people of his native place but also by those of this city with whom he was acquainted.

Dr. H. V. B. Bridges, principal of the Provincial Normal School, this morning informed the students of that institution of the death of their fellow-student. The announcement was received with general regret.

SERIOUS FIRE AVERTED BY A PLUCKY NURSE

(Canadian Press)

Toronto, Ont., March 7.—Fire broke out in the infectious ward on the fourth floor of the hospital for sick children last night, but was extinguished with slight damage. The ward in which the fire started was hermetically sealed and in the course of fumigation, nurse C. Strong, who is in charge of the infectious ward, suspecting the seat of the fire, burst into the sealed room, dragging the house hose after her. The door opened, dense volumes of smoke rolled out, but the plucky nurse pushed the hose into the room and turned the water on.

CHATHAM, ONT., EXCITED OVER MYSTERIOUS AIRSHIP

Toronto, Ont., March 7.—The town of Chatham is excited over the appearance of a mysterious air craft. Most of the town was on the streets last night for the greater part of the night and in the villages nearby, there is also great excitement. The mysterious conveyance travels without apparent planes and seems capable of staying up for days without alighting. During the past three days it has been sighted from several villages round about, but it has never been known to alight. Last night it was seen by parties in Chatham township when it was brilliant with lights. For a time it floated about 100 feet from the earth's surface, then suddenly with a great whirling, it rose to a higher altitude and soon disappeared in the distance.
