EARL GREY LOUD IN HIS PRAISES OF CANADA

Continuing Earl Grey said: "In justice to Sir Wilfrid Laurier, my affection and admiration for that distinguished statesman requires me to say that he and his government were actuated by no annexationist sentiment in the policy they adopted at the polls. Sir Wilfrid Laurier was fully persuaded that his policy, if adopted would strengthen both Canada and the Crown. To secure free entry for the products of the farm and fisheries into a protected market of nearly a hundred millions by the purchase of reciprocal admission to products from the United States and by a trifling reduction in duties on agricultural implements which had been energetically demanded by the agricultural interests, appeared to Sir Wilfrid Laurier to be an economic advantage which he was bound to accept for his country when an unexpected opportunity placed it within his reach. It was certainly in no sense a policy of dislike to closer connection with the Mother Country.

PEOPLE SNIFFED DANGER

"The people of Canada, however, sniffed a great danger in these proposals. (Cheers); rightly or wrongly it is not for me to say. Thousands of Liberals feared their adoption might lead them into the United States. Recollections of the past harsh treatment suffered from the hands of the United States and the present great and abounding prosperity of the Dominion, all combined to strengthen the national resolve to vote down a policy which, however advantageous to their material interests, was one in which they sensed a possible danger to fiscal independence and national atonity.

CANADA LOYAL

Canadians have shown that love of their country is superior to every consideration, thereby justifying their belief in the Empire and their coming greatness. To those who don't know the Canadian people as I know them the revelation afforded by the recent elections of the strength and vigor of the national sentiment in Canada must have been most welcome. It did not, however, require this new revelation of the traditional spirit of Canada to convince those and character of her people that already acquainted with the history attachment to national institutions and connection with the Empire were far too deeply rooted ever to be overthrown."

IMPERIALISM AND NATIONALISM

Earl Grey then made eloquent reference to the United Empire Loyalists and their sacrifices, and said: "Let us be clearly understood the Canadian people are not in sympathy with any form of imperialism which involves the idea of the subjection of self-governing people to authority outside of any form involving the idea of jingo aggressiveness or arrogance towards the rights of others, but now that it is recognized in Canada that true imperialism is the best authority for local nationalism, Canadians are all imperialists and all nationalists. It may be possible objected by some people that Quebec, and perhaps other provinces, are opposed to participation in the naval defence of the Empire for the moment. That is true, but I honestly believe it is for the moment only.

"It is my conviction that the reluctance of the French-descended citizens of Quebec is due not to any lack of appreciation of what the British Empire means to them, but solely to the lack of appreciation of what are the requirements of the Empire to an exaggerated idea of its omnipotence. To tell them that Empire requires the assistance of the habitants of Quebec seems to them absurd, but once let them grasp the true facts of the situation and I am confident that they will prove themselves as ready to do their duty to the flag as they were in the days of Montcalm on the field of Chateauguay. From the point of self interest there are none who stand today more from our naval supremacy than the habitants of Quebec. There is no part of the world where the Roman Catholic Church enjoys an equally great privilege as is guaranteed to Quebec by the British North America Act. All privileges are secured to the Roman Catholics of Quebec by the British North America Act."

SHOULD SEE CANADA

Lord Grey concluded by an earnest appeal to his distinguished audience to make it a point of honor to visit Canada. "Believe me," he said, "it is absolutely impossible, however vivid your imagination to understand Canada by remaining on this side of the Atlantic. I am satisfied that just as in the case of Canadians visiting the United Kingdom, so in the case of Englishmen visiting the Dominion, all will be back prodder than ever of their British citizenship and more confident in its bright and glorious future."

CANADA NEEDS HON. MR. FIELDING IN PARLIAMENT

It would be welcome news not only to the Liberal party everywhere, but also to the whole community, to learn that Mr. Fielding intends to remain in Parliament. The office of Minister of Finance, which he has administered for fifteen years continuously, without a single serious error of judgment, not to say suspicion of wrongdoing, is the key to the whole administrative service of the Dominion. All the revenue is raised by the Finance department, and all the disbursements are made by its order. The Minister of Finance is more than a mere accountant; he is the watchdog of the treasury. While he is personally charged, with responsibility for what goes on within his management, he is at the same time concurrently with his colleagues, responsible for the whole politico-financial policy of the country. In other words he must be a broadminded statesman besides being financier, a rare combination of aptitudes.

In one respect, Mr. Fielding has been the most successful Finance Minister Canada has ever had. During his whole term of office, he has never had a deficit on the year's financial operations to apologize for or explain. The sharp depression of three years ago brought the surplus perilously near the vanishing point; in two or three years it was of moderate dimensions; during most of the time it was within ten millions but several years it went beyond that sum.

It may be said—has been said—that Mr. Fielding held office in a fortunate time, and that sooner or later he would have suffered a reverse. This may be true enough, without involving any reflection upon him. The fortunate time in Canada has been unusually prolonged, but contemporary with it have been two depressions in the United States, which Canada hardly felt. It is not easy to explain this contrast without complimenting Mr. Fielding specially and the whole Laurier Ministry in general.

Mr. Fielding is one of the best Parliamentarians Canada has ever had. He acted always as Deputy leader in the Premier's absence, and in so doing he was alert without pettiness, critical without offence, and courteous without weakness. He was not only a gentleman among gentlemen, but a man among men. As a debater he had in the House of Commons no superior. A close reasoner and a ready speaker, he was a master-hand at budget statements, but he was always ready to intervene with an illuminative speech whenever one seemed to be called for. While Sir Wilfrid Laurier stood alone in his peculiar style, Mr. Fielding in a more ordinary manner was unsurpassed. They were perfectly complementary to one another and fortunately there was always between them the relationship of perfect and unclouded friendship.

Whoever the new Finance Minister may be, he can well afford to have opposite to him a past master of the part, who is above taking a petty, not to say a mean advantage. This was notoriously the kind of official friendship that subsisted between two British Chancellors of the Exchequer—Sir William Harcourt and Sir Michael Hicks-Beach. Any new Finance Minister would be a fool if he did not take advantage of Mr. Fielding's experience in a crisis.

He said as soon as the car arrived the whole party except himself jumped out and rushed to the house. Afterwards a man who he thought was D. C. McRae came running up with an axe and threatened to destroy the wheels unless he moved on which he did.

WAS FOUND GUILTY OF PERSONATION

Chatham, Ont. Oct. 26—Thomas Cooper charged with personation in Chatham at the federal election found guilty yesterday will be sentenced on Tuesday. Defence urged that the evidence failed to prove Cooper had applied for a ballot or represented to returning officer he was Johnson the man whom he was accused of impersonating, but it was shown that Cooper had given the name of Johnson to a Conservative scrutineer at whose request the returning officer administered the oath which Cooper refused to take. A decision against four non-residents who swore they were residents was reserved.
