A CHANGE OF HEART

If the speech of Mr. O. S. Crockett, delivered at the Woodstock banquet, was correctly reported by his newspaper organ, it is evident that a change has come over the spirit of the dreams of the member for York since September 21st. A few weeks ago he was going about the country telling the people that they should return the Tories to power, that reciprocity, as advocated by the wicked Grits, would destroy their fiscal independence, and that if they were wise in their day and generation, they would let well enough alone. He then labored under the belief that in the event of a change of government he would be a cabinet minister, which would be a sufficient recompense for any sacrifice of principle which he found it necessary to make in playing the game of politics. The electors in their wisdom decided in favor of a change of administration, and the leader of the victorious party, in looking about for cabinet timber, came to the conclusion that Mr. Crockett did not measure up to the standard, and he therefore, selected as the minister from New Brunswick one J. D. Hazen, who had fought at long range during the campaign, and in the opinion of Mr. Crockett and a great many others did not deserve to share in the spoils of victory. Mr. Crockett was turned down good and hard, and as a private member he is now able to speak his mind more freely than would have been the case had things turned out a little more to his liking. He has lately discovered that all is not well with the Maritime Provinces and that the time has arrived when the people, irrespective of politics, should assert their rights. Here is what he is reported by his newspaper organ to have said at the Woodstock banquet:

"Mr. Crockett declared that with the loss of further representation staring them in the face as the result of the last census, and with a premier from the Maritime Provinces and only one portfolio from the three provinces in the Dominion government, there should be sufficient cause to make the people of the Maritime Provinces wake up to the importance of the representation question and he was delighted that Mr. Flemming was the first to make a move. He was in absolute accord in this regard and it was up to the members of parliament, both Liberals and Conservatives, irrespective of party, to see that this injustice is remedied at this coming session. He promised that he would stand up for the rights of the Maritime Provinces on this question with respect to any political party."

The member for York has delivered a good many speeches both in and out of parliament during the past seven years, but no remarks of his which have appeared in print have contained so much truth and common sense as the paragraph quoted above. He frankly admits that conditions in the Maritime Provinces are not satisfactory but he might very well have gone a little further and given the reason for the regrettable state of affairs to which he saw fit to call attention. He might have pointed out that these provinces have suffered severely in all things material from the day they entered confederation until now. They have suffered from the fact that they have been compelled to force trade through unnatural channels, and they have suffered severely from the fact that the great markets of the New England States have been closed to them. No one knows better than Mr. Crockett that high tariff walls, both Canadian and American, have been ruinous to the Maritime Provinces. Yet never once during the seven years he occupied a seat in parliament did he lift a finger to bring about a change in this regard. He had a golden opportunity when the reciprocity agreement was brought down, but instead of taking advantage of it and heartily supporting this long delayed measure of justice to the people of the east we find him acting as the mouthpiece (against his better judgment no doubt, of the trusts and monopolists of the upper provinces and vigorously waving the old flag and using other means to throw dust in the eyes of the electorate. The Hon. W. S. Fielding is a brilliant son of the Maritime Provinces, who has been in public life much longer than Mr. Crockett. Anyone who is familiar with the noble record of Mr. Fielding knows that he never would have accepted the reciprocity agreement had he not been firmly convinced that it would be of the greatest benefit to the people of the Maritime Provinces. As before stated Mr. Crockett had his opportunity in January last when the agreement was brought down in parliament to "stand up for the rights of the Maritime Provinces irrespective of party," but failed to take advantage of it. Had he dropped party politics on that occasion and stood up manfully for the rights of New Brunswick he would not today be going about like a bear with a sore head.

There are men in this and other New Brunswick constituencies just as patriotic, just as high minded and just as interested in the welfare of the Maritime Provinces as Mr. Crockett, who, during the recent campaign, dropped party politics and stoutly advocated reciprocity because they honestly believed it to be a measure which, if carried out, would stop the exodus and other economic evils from which we have suffered. Mr. Crockett, however, chose to sacrifice his principles in the interests of his party and the speech which he delivered at Woodstock would seem to indicate that he is already in a repentant mood and anxious to make amends. If he will take a firm stand even at this late day for the rights of the people of the Maritime Provinces and against further encroachments on the part of the monied interests of Toronto and Montreal, there is still a chance for him to win honorable distinction. The cause of the Maritime Provinces is a just one and as Mr. Crockett well says, is deserving of the best efforts of both Liberals and Conservatives. We sincerely hope that Mr. Crockett will rally to the support of his native province and not allow himself to be further diverted from the path of duty by the cheap jack, flag-flapping devices of those who find cause for rejoicing in the fact that the cities of the upper provinces and western Canada are going ahead at the material expense and political detriment of the provinces by the sea.

The old government delayed issuing a certificate to the Banque Internationale on account of seventy per cent of the capital stock being held in Paris and their being some doubt as to whether or not under the laws of France the double liability could be collected in case of a smash. The Borden government settled matters by issuing the certificate right off the bat. Mr. Rodolph Forget, who carried two seats for the Tories in the late election is the president of the bank.

Montreal Herald—There is a great deal of news in Mr. Borden's Halifax speech. It tells us that the Conservatives gained about forty seats in the late election, and that Nova Scotia fish could be sent to the West by the aid of cold storage. It is revelations like these that make the public appearances of our rulers so intensely interesting.

At the Flemming banquet, according to a report in a Tory newspaper, Hon. Mr. Grimmer took occasion to emphasize the fact that he was the Premier's first lieutenant. That probably accounts for Provincial Secretary McLeod being "unexpectedly called away" during the progress of the banquet. The shock was too much for him.

Hon. W. C. H. Grimmer in his speech at the Woodstock banquet stated that he was proud to be Premier Flemming's first lieutenant. As the Attorney General is credited with having put up a stiff fight for the Premiership his pride must have had something in the way of a fall within the last few weeks.

Mr. O. J. Killam of Truro is in the city.

STOCK MARKET IS ACTIVE AND STRONG

(By direct wire to J. C. Mackintosh & Co., 604 Queen St. Fredericton, N. N.)

New York, Wall Street, Nov. 6.—While it is generally admitted that the recent advance in the market received its chief impulse from the virtual settlement of the Tobacco plan and the favorable quarterly statement of the Steel Corporation and that immediate effects of these developments had been largely discounted it is nevertheless, the opinion of close observers that these matters have served merely to focus a fundamental change for the better in the business and financial situation at large. Business on various lines has been so long surprised that stocks of merchandise throughout the country have dwindled to small proportions while prices of leading commodities have declined to near the cost of production. Meantime the banks of the country have not only accumulated a large stock of idle funds but have also become liberal lenders abroad. It is now becoming a question whether the usual disturbances attending a presidential campaign be potent enough to hold the business of the country longer in check. There can be little doubt that a revulsion of speculative and investment sentiment has taken place and there is more substantial grounds for expecting a still further improvement in the price of securities.

INTEREST IN THE ELECTIONS

Washington, D. C., Nov. 6.—Official Washington is displaying more than an ordinary amount of interest in tomorrow's elections for an off-year. The returns from Massachusetts and Rhode Island are anxiously anticipated, for national issues have figured most conspicuously in the contests in those two States, and as a consequence the results will be regarded as some indication of the drift of popular opinion concerning the parties. It is possible that these results may leave the outlook no clearer than it is at present, but of for any reason one party should show decided gains in the voting, the fact will be classified as an indicator of what may happen in the national election next year.

WASHINGTON'S ASSAULT CASE UP

New York, Nov. 6.—Many curious persons visited Part V of the Court of Special Sessions today in the expectation of hearing some interesting testimony when the case of Harry Ulrich, accused of assault on Booker T. Washington, the negro educator, was called for trial. The alleged assault occurred on the night of March 19 last, in front of Ulrich's house in West Sixty-third street. At the time of his arrest Ulrich said that he had mistaken Dr. Washington for a burglar and also that the negro had annoyed his wife. This Dr. Washington denied. He said that he was looking for the residence of the auditor of the Tuskegee Institute of which he is the head.

Auburn, Cal., Nov. 6.—Three bodies have been recovered from the wreckage of the Mountain Quarries Company bridges across the American River, the east span of which collapsed late Saturday night. Five workmen were injured. It is believed still more casualties will be discovered.
