THE FIRST DIVISION IN THE NEW PARLIAMENT

(Montreal Herald)

Ottawa, November 29—When the House opened today Sir Wilfrid was back in his place, and the last obstacle to an early division had been overcome. There were only two speeches, one by Mr. Boivin and the other by Mr. Murphy, and when Mr. Murphy, resumed his seat the whips went drumming up the few absent members.

Mr. Borden sat chatting with Mr. Monk and Mr. Foster, a couple of lawbooks on the desk before him. Sir Wilfrid had a chart of the House on his desk, and a list of the members. He would run his eye down the list, make a pencil mark against a name, find on the chart the location of the new man, and then take a good look at him. This went on for perhaps a quarter of an hour. It was very typical of the old chief, who has passed the best part of his life in the House of Commons and who has always taken a strong personal interest in every member of that House.

In the corner to the Speaker's right, along the west wall, some one intoned "O Canada" The refrain was taken up by the Quebec members on the speaker's left.

THE HOUSE IS YOUNGER

For the first time there was chance for a good look at the new House as a whole. It looks dreadfully young. The place wears the appearance of youth and a new beginning Sir Wilfrid, Mr. Foster and Mr. Haggart are there to link the present with the past. They are like lovely rocks around which surge the rising tides. Mr. Borden, Mr. Borden, who just the other day was a new man begins already to look old in his present company. The men who sit in the early middle age. The men who sit in the seats of power are in their early middle age. The men who sit around Sir Wilfrid are not yet out of the flush of their youth. Out behind, on both sides, are swarms of young, fresh-looking faces The House looks new, and one finds himself wondering what the new blood is going to do to its traditions.

MR. BORDEN GETS HIS MANDATE

In come the whips. The Speaker rises to request that every member will take the seat assigned to him, as otherwise the clerk might have difficulty there being so many strangers present." At this a roar of merriment went up. The Speaker read the motion and amendment. but his progress in his studies has not yet brought him to where he is willing to try the reading in French The clerk did that. The vote is called Sir Wilfrid rises and the left bursts into a cheer that is all but a yell. There is desk slamming as Mr. Charlton rises, for he is a new members, and he has captured Norfolk. More desk slamming as each new member's name is heard. There are not very many on the Liberal side. Cheering with the exultant note of victory ringing through greets Mr. Borden as he rises: generous cheers are given for Mr. Monk; equally generous cheers for Mr. White; Mr. Pelletier gets a fair hand; and when Mr. Blondin rises the habit carries on a goodly number, but some have held off, the noise dies suddenly as men pull themselves up, and on the instant the Liberals send up a jeer at their opponents' shamefacedness.

When Hon. Sam Hughes' turn comes the whole House is banging desks, the Liberals taking occasion to signify their opinion of Col. Hughes' alliance with the Nationalists. Presently, Mr. Fowler and Mr. Bennett, deskmates, are welcomed back. Then the host of Conservative newcomers is reached, and the dask slammings becomes one long persistent roll. The Liberals join in for Burnham, who is held to have 'put his foot in it alteady. The roll call stops. The clerks begin to count. A new member leaves his seat, which is almost sacrilege while a division is on, and the old members fall upon him with a yell that frightens him back to his place on the run. Mr. Flint reads the numbers, 121, to 77. Parliament has accepted the Borden ministry.

BANGING MR. BLONDIN

The address to the governor being disposed of Parliament is in position to do business. Mr. White makes the formal motions about considering a grant of supply to His Majesty, about the ways and means of affording a supply, and presents anew the estimates brought in last spring. Then Mr. Borden moves that Mr. Blondin, the member for Chaplain, be named Deputy Speaker. Mr. Pardee slips out into the aisle beside his desk, opens a volume of Hansard, and proceeds to argue that the position ought not to go to one who is on record as having made certain statements which the Liberal whip holds to be of treasonous import. Mr. Blondin denies having made the statements. Mr. Pardee, who can't help looking good natured grows quite fierce in denounciation, but Speaker comes to the rescue with a ruling. Col. Beattie, of London, who is understood not to love Nationalist alliance any too well, reminds Mr. Pardee that he has listened to statements from his own side of the House quite as objectionable withput protest. Then Mr. Borden, for all the world like a stately hen whose chicks is in danger, gets quite ruffled up and gives Mr. Blondin a certificate of character. The incident leaves rather a bad taste. So, however, does the fact of the Coalition. The one follows from the other. The militant Liberal wing from Ontario first had to have their say about the Sproule-Blondin pair-off, in justice to the memory of their comrades stain because Laurier was too French and not British enough.' As tactics, and on higher grounds, perhaps the usefulness of the move might be questioned; but as a satisfaction of the demands of over-raged human nature there is something to be said for it.

A BI-LINGUAL TRIUMPH

The debate on the Laurier amendment was brought to a close with two good speeches from the Liberal side, Mr. Boivin, the young French members from Shefford spoke in English, and his English is faultless. He has less trace of accent than any man of his race ever heard in the House, Sir Wilfrid, Mr. Lemieux and Mr. Bourassa included. Mr. Hazen who knows good English when he hears it, very soon reached for the chance to see who the youngster be. Others followed the example There was good stuff in the speech, too, deft exploring all the loose joints in the Coalition's armor. In some ways it was the most successful maiden speech of the debate.

BACK TO COMMON SENSE

Hon. Mr. Murphy made a profound impression upon the press gallery; where everything possible to say had been said over and over again he actually, in the last speech of all, gave a new turn to it. In one allusion he was particularly happy. Reading from Parkman, he showed that the Iroquois, much as they hated each other and fought each other found common purpose in destroying their enemies and sharing the plunder. This, he claimed to be the only known model for the present Coalition. Mt. Murphy's review of the navy question was more elaborate than any yet made, and with all the facts assembled as he assembled them, more suggestive of what we have to look for. He showed the part Mr. Rogers played to be quite as important as that of Mr. Monk or of Mr. Borden. And he brought it to the notice of the house that while Mr. Borden had tacitly supported Dr. Pickel's undertaking to repeal the present act, and while Mr. Hazen has cancelled the tenders for the constructions of ships, the present Government nevertheless goes on holding examinations for the entry of the boys to the Canadian navy and in the Canada Gazette announces that Canada's warships are to be of his majesty's Canadian navy. Mr. Rogers used to call consulting the Admiralty a time wasting operation. Now Mr. Hazen is to consult the admiralty while Pelletier presumably,is getting ready to consult the people. About what? About the proposals Mr. Hazen will make to the House in the name of the Admiralty, of Mr. Borden, of Messrs Monk Pelletier and Nantel? Anyone who followed the masterly presentation of evidence as Mr. Murphy submitted it must have felt that before long opinion on 'this navy matter will be sane again, that Mr. Borden and Mr. Foster will be back to where they were in the summer of 1909, that the 'Laurier navy act will endure, and that a Canadian navy, with some kind of ship will take form. Then what?

NO AMENDMENTS TO INSURANCE BILL

Loodon, Dec. 2.—According to The Daily Telegraph, the Unionist leaders in the House of Lords have decided to move no amendments to the Insurance bill, but to pass it as it stands. The House of Lords, however, will reject the naval prize bill in order to prevent the government from ratifying the declaration of London the international agreement governing prizes in naval warfare, which was approved by the imperial conference last June. This procedure according to The Daily Telegraph will delay the passage of the proposed bill for two years, and the declaratio of London cannot be ratified until the Prize bill has received the royal assent.

"SALT RHEUM"

Had It On Hands For Two Years.

ITCHED SO DID NOT KNOW WHAT TO DO.

Tried Three Doctors and Went to Hospital.

All skin diseases are more or less occasioned by a bad state of the blood, and no one can expect to be free from some form or other of skin trouble unless the blood is kept in good shape. All skin diseases can be very easily cured by the wonderful blood cleansing properties of Burdock Blood Bitters.

This is due to the unrivalled purifying action of Burdock Blood Bitters on the blood, coupled with the thorough manner in which it cleanses and expels the impurities from the body.

Mrs. Richard Coutine, White Head, Que., writes:—"I have been bothered with salt rheum, on my hands, for two years, and it itched so I did not know what to do. I tried three doctors, and even went to Montreal to the hospital without getting any relief. I was advised to try Burdock Blood Bitters, so I got three bottles, and before I had the second used I found a big change, and now to-day I am cured."

Burdock Blood Bitters has been on the market for about 35 years and is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

HON. MR. McKAY DEFIES TRADUCERS

Owen Sound, Ont., Dec.1—Hon. A. G. WacKay, former leader of the Ontario opposition and Liberal candidate in North Grey, addressed a large audience in the town hall here last nibht and dealt vigorously with the Haines writ, charging him with alienation of a wife's affections, which he said, was the outcome of a blackmailing conspiracy.

Mr. MacKay showed the absence of any foundation for a case against Hill, and created a sensation when he charged four Owen Sound men, whose names he withheld, as being instrumental in framing the blackmailing conspiracy to destroy his good name. He stated that he had taken steps to keep himself acquainted with every move they had made and was thoroughly aware of the use they were making of their statements to blacken his name in the townships of North Grey.

Displaying a number of papers he had dealing with the matter, Mr. MacKay declared that the Toronto end of the evidence it could be called, in the case, was a concoction of forgeries and lying statements pure and simple. In conclusion, he threw the gauntlet down by declaring that if anything more were heard of the case he would be perfectly willing to face the four Owen Sound men, and Haines if necessary, on the public platform.
