THE DOUBLE CROSS

"The place has affected your nerves, my son," the Don said.
"No, Don. It was that same sound I heard before—like the rustle of grave clothes."

He now put the torch still closer to my face and regarded me again with that strangely, unnecessarily sad look.

"And now, son," he repeated, "why have I brought you here? The Aztecs, Yaqui tells me, had planned to capture you last night and throw you into this place—my people at the time believing that there existed some mistake in your relations with my daughter."

He turned away from me and—was it a draft of air? Or did the Don himself blow out the torch? Anyway, we stood now in impenetrable darkness, with the dead regiment.

"What's happened, Don?" I asked huskily.

No answer.
But now again I heard that sound which I had heard twice before—the faintest rustle, as of the garment of some unseen person—or spirit.

And then:

"God! What's that!" I cried, in a low, horrified voice, as I felt a touch on my arm, the lightest of touches.
At the same time I put my hand to my arm and found—a warm human hand, which seized mine and held it tight. I threw out my other hand then and found—the warm body of a human being, a woman.

I felt her breath upon my cheek close to my ear, as from her lips came in faintest whisper the words: "The woman who loves you is here. Don't betray her presence to the Don. Move backward."

Even while she spoke she had stepped backward many paces, I was in step with her, thus to take our whispering out of reach of the Don's ears.

"Are you Felipa?" I whispered.

"Of course you are."

"I am the woman you love," she breathed.

"Then you're Felipa," I whispered. And I gathered the unseen forcibly in my arms.

She resisted me for a moment or two, then allowed me to hold her tight, as she whispered:

"Won't you please not—do this? You are deceiving yourself."

But even while she spoke my lips found hers. And I kissed her—a kiss that will forever linger in my memory as the most exquisite, most thrilling, of my whole life. I had kissed Felipa before to be sure; yet, somehow, this kiss seemed to be the first—the very first. I know not how long that rapturous touch of lips lasted; all I'm sure of is that, after a while I heard her say:

"Listen—dear, dear. The Don is the high magistrate of this district. In a magisterial sense he is subjecting you to a most terrifying form of third degree. He thinks you have something to confess and that this will bring that confession from you—he believing that you will become unswayed by this ordeal. But—tell him this is not necessary—that there is no mistake. He is waiting for you to speak. Tell him now."

"Don Justino," I cried. "Are you here?"

"What have you to say, my son?"

"Won't you light the torch?"

"Madre de Dios!" whispered the Unseen, quivering in my arms. "Not the torch—not yet."

"What have you to say, my son?"

The Don repeated.

"This is not necessary, Don. In my relations with your daughter there is no—mistake."

Then, prompted again and again by the voice of the Unseen breathing close to my ear, I went on:

"Don Justino, I cannot tell you all—not now. I can only assure you that, through me, you will at last learn what happened on the night Felipa was born, and that a great new happiness will come to the rest of your life. Meantime, I repeat, there is no—mistake—in my relations with your daughter. I shall marry none but the one who bears the sign of the cross."

"And tell him," whispered the Unseen, "that his daughter herself bears the sign of the cross."

"For your daughter herself, Don Justino," I repeated, "bears the sign of the cross."

As I said these words the Unseen slipped from my arms, then whispered the final astounding words:

"I warned you that you were deceiving yourself. My name is not Felipa."

I heard the receding rustle of her garments, and at the same time the Don cried, in sharp exclamations of distress:

"The Cross! Dios! Por Dios! What are you saying?"

As he spoke, he struck a match, and in its little flare I saw a figure in white, behind the Don—saw the figure stepping hurriedly out of the radius of light and moving toward the exit from the Chamber of Horrors. The sight of the figure in white lasted not longer than a flash of lightning, but it was sufficient for me to see her glossy black tresses and her beautiful face.

It was Felipa.

The Don had relighted the torch and now I looked at him, and saw that his face had taken on an ashen hue.

"In the name of the death that here stares at us," he pleaded, "tell me, my son, what you know of—the cross."

"I can add nothing just now to what I have already told you, Don Justino. I can only repeat once more—there is no mistake."

(To Be Continued.)

ALL YOU NEED IS A CASCARET TONIGHT

No Sick Headache, Bilious Stomach
Coated Tongue or Constipated
Bowels by Morning

Turn the rascals out—the headache, the biliousness, the indigestion, the sick, sour stomach and foul gases—turn them out tonight and keep them out with Cascarets.

Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then and never know the misery caused by a lazy liver, clogged bowels or an upset stomach.

Don't put in another day of distress. Let Cascarets cleanse and regulate your stomach; remove the sour, undigested and fermenting food and that misery-making gas; take the excess bile from your liver and carry out of the system all the decomposed waste matter and poison in the intestines and bowels. Then you will feel great.

A Cascaret tonight will surely straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep. A 10-cent box from any drug store means a clear head and cheerfulness for months. Children love to take Cascarets because they taste good—never gripe or sicken.

RECIPROCITY SURE TO CARRY

(Winnipeg Free Press.)

In every constituency in Western Canada Conservatives who favor Reciprocity are being pleaded with to vote for the party candidate on the ground that, as Reciprocity is bound to come anyway, they might as well maintain their party regularity.

The appeal which is being made to insurgent Conservatives by Conservative candidates and canvassers is in some such terms as these:

"Don't worry about Reciprocity. It is sure to carry. The vote of this constituency will not decide the question, anyway. The thing to do here is to all stand together and beat the Grit candidate."

It is not only in Western Canada that this appeal is made. Oliver Wilcox, the Conservative candidate for North Essex, has been making it from the platform. No doubt it is being made all over the Dominion wherever it is thought to be effective.

There should be food for thought in these words for Halifax people, who should be sure to have two representatives supporting the government at Ottawa.

JEALOUS LOVER ENDED HIS LIFE

Montreal, Que., Sept. 16.—"I die for you," cried Ferdinand Rhéaume, to Emile Fanville, last night, after he had poured down his throat the entire contents of a bottle of carbolic acid and as he fell writhing in death agony almost at the feet of the woman to whom he was passionately devoted. The tragedy occurred in Wong King's cafe in Chinatown directly at the conclusion of supper in the dining room. Jealousy is supposed to have been the cause of the young man's suicide. The girl told the police that the man had frequently sworn that he would end his life, if she accepted attentions from other men.

Why will the producer and consumer both benefit? Every man who has a little intelligence can see it knocks off two duties at once and not one.

A. MURRAY & COMPANY

LAKEVILLE CORNER.

Sept. 9.—The farmers of this section are making good progress with their harvesting, being benefited with the fine weather. The grain crops are smaller than previous years, potatoes yielding about an average one.

The season for duck shooting has opened and is being taken advantage of by St. John and local sportsmen, who report them very plentiful.

A meeting was held here in the Hall in the interests of the Conservative candidate, the speakers being H. F. McLeod, W. S. Tompkins and H. W. Woods. The attendance was very small, and it was also made noteworthy by the total absence of applause, which must have been very disconcerting to these, such windy gentlemen, to waste their eloquence on empty benches.

A meeting was also held in the interests of the Liberal candidate, McLean and Reciprocity will sweep Sunbury and Queens. Liberals are confident and Tories in this part of the country do not hesitate to say our bread and butter is more to us than loyalty. The arguments used in past elections that we will get as much from one party as another has lost its force. Reciprocity is of vital importance to every man woman and child. Its meat and drink, dollars and cents and with but one side that no polished language can gloss the weakness of tongue or pen attempting to justify opposition. Col. McLean has been able to do much for the countries he has represented and hide bound partisans who danced to Conservative music during the long lean years preceded the advent of the Liberal Government and prosperity are beginning to realize that promises are not nearly so good as actions and hid bound adherence to a party who only promises is a mistake. The local situation emphasizes this probably no counties in the province will reap greater benefits from this great measure! The fisheries will be so stimulated that once the toilers of the deep realize the full benefit it means to them good bye to the conservative party along the rivers and lakes so closely connected are the interest of the shores and the farmers along the rivers and lakes and the interior of the counties that the good bye will extend from border to border and find a resting place in all New Brunswick it will be a sweep. A weak candidate and a weaker battle cry will swamp obstruction bury Toryism.

INTIMIDATION IN FACTORIES

(Montreal Witness.)

"This firm is opposed to Reciprocity or any measure that will injure the British connection or the industries and farming interests of Canada."

The above is printed in the form of a shop notice, and is being supplied to employing firms, who are to put it up in their factory rooms and such places. The British connection part of it is mere frosting for the cake. That is not what 'this firm' is bothering about. The notice does not constitute legal intimidation, and this is perhaps well, as employers can put it up without fear of the law, and it will probably win many votes for the Liberal cause. Had the notice threatened to question how the men voted and to treat them accordingly, it would have been legal intimidation, and could have been severely punished. As it is, the employee can draw his own conclusions. His conclusion will certainly be that this is intended to tell him how to vote, and he will say to himself and to his fellows that his vote is his own.

President Taft said "It is to our own interest that Canada remain outside the republic and within the Empire the power of America is the power of the United States and Canada, plus Britain." Why don't they quote that?

SIFTON FAVORED RECIPROCITY

In a newspaper report of a speech delivered by Hon. Clifford Sifton at St. Paul, Jan. 10, 1903, he is reported to have said: "On the subject of reciprocity Mr. Sifton spoke freely. He endorsed all that Mr. Hill had said on the subject, and expressed himself in favor of any treaty that would give the citizens of both countries equal advantage. He had no sympathy, he said, with those Canadians who expected the United States to give something for nothing, and he thought as title of the Americans who expected the Canadian to do the same thing. The Canadians expect to give one hundred cents for every dollar they get."
