THE ROMANTIC CAREER OF BUFFALO BILL

(Toronto Saturday Night)

It is announced that William Frederick Cody (Buffalo Bill) has retired to private life. He says that he will spend his remaining years in the Big Horn country of Wyoming where he helped make American history.

Like the buffalo and the elk, Bill Cody is a part of a passing generation. His life we will never see again for he is about the last of those hard fighting, hard riding pioneers who made history, and picturesque history it was, in the early days of the American West. As a United States soldier, as a government scout as an Indian fighter, and as a pony express rider Buffalo Bill saw all there was to see and experienced all there was to experience in that then scarcely known country lying between Missouri and the Pacific Ocean. He was a Davy Crockett of the far western plains.

It was back in 1860 that Cody, then a boy of fourteen, began his romantic and perilous career. It was in that year that he was first heard of as a rider of the pony express, carrying the mails from St. Joseph, Missouri to Sacramento, California, a distance of 1,950 miles; and nearly every foot of it through an Indian country, filled with hostile savages ever ready to pillage, murder and burn. Young Bill Cody was but a year at this work (the pony express service being discontinued in 1861) owing to the completion of telegraph lines through to the coast) but the hair-raising experiences which he went through in that twelve months; the rides he took, some of them standing today as records for human endurance, would of themselves fill a volume. The pony express rider who did his "stunt" in that wild country with its savage behind every ant hill gringing his mail and himself through safely was every inch a man and a resourceful one as well, for none other survived.

After his experience in the express service Cody joined the United States army as scout and guide. In 1863 he enlisted in the 7th Kansas Cavalry and fought for the Union until the close of the Civil War. The year 1867 found Cody again on the plains. This time he entered the employ of the Kansas Pacific Railway, killing buffalo for the consumption of the men and keeping the Sioux Indians at arm's length. In those days the plains were filled with buffalo, and it was Bill Cody's business to see to it that the large railway construction gangs had furnished them the necessary amount of buffalo meat. It was this circumstance which attached to Cody through his life the name of "Buffalo Bill."

In 1868 Cody again entered the service of the United States government as scout and guide, serving against the Sioux and Cheyennes, the two great warrior tribes of the Middle West. In 1872 Cody quit the government service for a time and entered the political arena, being elected a representative for the Nebraska House of Representatives. However, by 1876 Cody again felt the call of the wild, and when the Sioux-Cheyenne war opened it found him acting as chief of scouts against the most aggressive, wily, savage warriors that the world has ever known.

It was in this war at the battle of Indian Creek, that Buffalo Bill killed the great Cheyenne chief, Yellow Hand, in single combat. And this was perhaps the most thrilling and dramatic incident in the history of this modern Sir Galahad.

Imagine if you can a dry river bed with the land gently sloping up from it on either side. On the top of the ridge on one side lay the United States army, on the other the flower of the Sioux and Cheyenne nations. Between them was this level, grassy plain without one stick of timber, without even a boulder of any size. These two armies lay on their rifles, their horses tethered each watching the other. The war whoop of the Indians could be barely distinguished in the silent, sullen, waiting camp of the whites.

Of a sudden, a horseman appeared, moving out from the lines of waiting savages. He rode on and on in silent dignity to the centre of the plain. He rode on until his beautiful buckskin horse had negotiated half the distance between the two armies, and his headpiece of eagles' feathers and trappings announced him as the greatest Indian warrior of his day, Yellow Hand, the Cheyenne.

Then it was that Yellow Hand rode the air with his battle cry and challenge. And it said: "Is there a white dog who dares come forth and fight Yellow Hand single handed?"

Down the hill opposite the waiting chief rode Buffalo Bill, astride his favorite horse. Here was the answer to the challenge. Resting easily over Buffalo Bill's arm was his Winchester in his holster his trusty colts. The pace was a gentle canter as if on parade, and Cody's long hair flew out over the shoulders of his buckskin coat as he moved along. He was silent as Yellow Hand was noisy. He was silent and relentless as grim death itself. On they rode toward each other. Yellow Hand circled and then fired. At the flash Cody ducked. Yellow Hand had missed. A movement of Cody's horse, a word of command and his horse stood like a statue. Up went Cody's rifle, ping sped the bullet and Yellow Hand paused. He fired again and Yellow Hand reeled from the saddle a corpse.

Nothing more dramatic than this combat between this prince of plainsmen and this Indian chief enters into the annals of nation building on this Continent and some day perhaps a writer will arise to the occasion and properly describe for our children and our children's children these events.

A little Danderine now will immediately double the beauty of your hair—No difference how dull, faded, brittle and scraggy, just moisten a cloth with Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair taking one small strand at a time. The effect is immediate and amazing—your hair will be light, fluffy and wavy and have an appearance of abundance; an incomparable lustre, softness and luxuriance, the beauty and shimmer of true hair health.

Try as you will after an application of Danderine, you cannot find a single trace of dandruff or a loose or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use when you will actually see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—sprouting all over the scalp.

Danderine is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them. Its life-producing properties cause the hair to grow abundantly long, strong and beautiful.

Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter and prove to yourself tonight—now—that your hair is as pretty and soft as any—that it has been neglected or injured by careless treatment—that's all—you surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it, if you will just try a little Danderine. Real surprise awaits you.

OSLER RIGHT; YOUTH SUCCEEDS AGE

Gray Hair is First Sign of Age, Harmless Remedy Restores to Natural Color

Osler isn't the only man who turns down old age. In the business world the "young man" is always the one who picks the plums. It is an age of "new thought," "new talent," etc., and the old man is passed by in the race.

One of the first signs of coming age is the appearance of gray hairs. When you see them act promptly. Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy will correct this sign, which so often deceives people into thinking that age is really upon them. It is a well-known fact that Sage and Sulphur will darken the hair, Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur combines these old-time remedies with other agents, which remove dandruff and promote the growth of the hair.

The manufacturers of this remedy authorize the druggists to sell it under guarantee that the money will be refunded if it fails to do exactly as represented. Don't look old before your time. Get a bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur today, and see what an improvement it will make in the appearance of your hair. This preparation is offered to the public at fifty cents a bottle, and is recommended and sold by all druggists.

NOBE'S LIEUTENANT WAS FOUND GUILTY

Halifax, Nov. 15—Lieutenant, Lord Allister Graham was today found guilty by court martial of causing, or suffering to be caused the stranding of H.M.C.S. Niobe on July 10 last on the dangerous ledges of Cape Sable. He was sentenced to be reprimanded. Lord Allister Graham was officer of the watch up to fifteen or twenty minutes of the time the cruiser went ashore.

The proceedings began at 9.30 this morning and lasted until 6.30 this evening. The witnesses included Commander W. B. MacDonald of the Niobe and the navigating Lieutenant James White, both of whom are charged with the same offence as Lieutenant Graham.

While the evidence seemed to show an absence of any deliberate negligence on the part of the accused, it developed the fact that he had not been as attentive to duty as he should have been.

He was well aware of the existence of the Cape Sable lights and the time they should be discernible from the ship, but when this passed and the lights were not seen he did not immediately report the fact to Commander MacDonald or the navigating officer.

Lieutenant Lord Allister Graham, in representing his defence maintained that it was unfair to hold him responsible for the stranding of the ship when he had been relieved of the watch about twenty minutes before the accident occurred.

Lieutenant Graham's reprimand means nothing more than a black mark for him. Nevertheless he feels keenly his position in the matter for up to the present he has held an enviable record as an officer.

Immediately on the conclusion of the first case, that against Lieutenant White, navigating officer was called, but was adjourned until tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock. This case will likely occupy a whole day also, as will the case of Commander MacDonald, which follows.

Really modern couples are just as apt to be truly mated as the old-fashioned sort of which we read about in the romances. A young Cleveland who is often described as a "man about town" became engaged not long ago, and he spoke as follows to the lady who had honored him:

"I don't want to have anything that I must hide after we are married, dear. So I may as well tell you that I play poker I smoke cigarettes, I drink, I stay out late and fight on the races."

"I'm glad to hear you say so," said the up-to-date girl, brightly. "I was so afraid that you and I wouldn't be perfect companions!" Cleveland Plain Dealer.
