MR. BOURASSA'S PLAN FOR NAVAL REFERENDUM

(Montreal Herald.)

"There are three ways of settling the navy question, which can never be settled definitely without a direct mandate from the people. Three questions should be asked: Do Canadians want to maintain their strict autonomy as a loyal dependency of Great Britain and spend their money developing their great resources? They can be asked, secondly, if they want to make a direct contribution to the British navy, and, thirdly, do they want to build a navy, which will be Canadian in time of peace and imperial in time of war. Mr. Borden, Col. Sam Hughes, Dr. Sproule and their friends had adhered to the policy of a plebiscite in supporting Mr. Monk's resolution in parliament, and he believed that the present prime minister was too honorable a man to disengage himself from that undertaking. Mr. Bourassa found it singular that Mr. Borden was being criticized very severely by the so-called Liberal newspapers of this province for having taken Col. Sam Hughes into his cabinet and announcing good old Dr. Sproule as speaker of the House of Commons. These men, the Soleil and Virgil alleged, were the enemies of the French race and the Roman Catholic religion. This was remarkable reasoning from the friends of a government which had readily accepted the support of Col. Sam Hughes and Dr. Sproule every time an attempt was made by that government to violate French-Canadian rights and to attack the Roman Catholic church. Mr. Bourassa proceeded to assure Hon. Mr. Borden that so long as he gave this country an upright and honest and economical administration so long would the new government have his support and that of his friends. He wanted a fearless investigation of the several departments at Ottawa and he wanted punishment meted out to those who had violated their trust. He did not want a man dismissed simply to give place to the friends of the powers that be, but that justice to all should be given by the new government. In race question, both English and French, Protestant and Catholic, Mr. Bourassa proclaimed, he stood on the same platform today as he did five or ten years ago.

"We are the one group," he said, "which has refrained from making an appeal to race and religious prejudice. And if Canada is to remain a vigorous, prosperous and progressive part of the empire, this Canada must be governed on lines of justice and equality to all."

Speaking at Chambly Canton on Sunday at a demonstration in honor of the Nationalist member-elect, Mr. J. H. Ragnville, Mr. Bourassa made his first political utterance since the elections. He said that he was not sufficiently intimate with the new ministry to say much regarding their policy. The group, however, which he had the honor to lead would occupy the same position in the face of the new government as of the old. The Borden administration would be judged by its acts.

Mr. Bourassa suggested a form of questions for the referendum on Canadian naval defence. Canadians can be asked, he said, firstly, whether they want to maintain their strict autonomy as a loyal dependency of Great Britain and spend their money developing their great resources? They can be asked, secondly, if they want to make a direct contribution to the British navy, and, thirdly, do they

FROM TEXAS

Some Tea and Coffee Facts from the Lone Star State

From a beautiful farm down in Texas, where gushing springs unite to form babbling brooks that wind their sparkling way through flowery meads, comes a note of gratitude for delivery from the coffee habit.

"When my baby boy came to me five years ago, I began to drink Postum, having a feeling that it would be better for him and me than the old kind of drug-laden coffee. I was not disappointed in it, it enabled me, a small delicate woman, to nurse a bouncing, healthy baby 14 months.

"I have since continued the use of Postum for I have grown fond of it, and have discovered to my joy that it has entirely relieved me of a bilious habit which used to prostrate me two or three times a year, causing much discomfort to my family and suffering to myself.

"My brother-in-law was cured of chronic constipation by leaving off coffee and using Postum. He has become even more fond of it than he was of the old coffee.

"In fact the entire family, from the latest arrival, (a 2-year-old who always calls for his 'potie' first thing in the morning) up to the head of the house, think there is no drink so good or so wholesome as Postum."

Name given by the Canadian Postum Co., Windsor, Ontario.

CONCILIATION BOARD

SUBMITS A REPORT

Ottawa, Ont., Oct. 24.—The board of conciliation in the dispute between the Grand Trunk Railway Company and its machinists, has made its report which says:

"Owing to the system of payment which prevails in the Grand Trunk and which has been fully explained us, the majority of the board do not see how it is possible for the board to lay down any schedule of minimum rate without desecrating the system which has as its basis the payment according to the merits and qualifications of the individual workman based upon the judgment of his foreman. The evidence, however, satisfies us, that owing to the increased cost of living since 1907 the increases which have been granted by the Grand Trunk since that time in the rates of pay of the men have not in a number of instances kept pace with the necessities of the men, while in other instances the rates of pay seem to be fair and reasonable.

It is urged that if individual cases be immediately taken up and the employees representative on the board Mr. O'Donoghue is of the opinion that the men are entitled to have their grievances presented through a committee and that a minimum rate on a par with that in force on other Canadian roads, should be established. This would give to the men an increase of wages that would in some measure, compensate for the increased cost of living. He is also of the opinion that double time should be paid for over-time from midnight to 6 a. m. and that apprentice should share in the increase.

EXPERTS TO HOLD AUTOPSY

town, near Haverhill, Mass., comes another engagement story, and this time a feminine trio also figures. Richeson preached at a revival service there, and he is reported to have paid some attention to reviving the love in the hearts of some of the feminine members of the flock. One of the girls that caught the eye of the clergyman was Miss Alice F. Howe, the daughter of a deputy sheriff. It was reported that they became engaged. The preacher had boarded at the sheriff's house and he gave Miss Howe several presents. Then it became known that he was engaged to two other girls of the town, one of whom was Miss Alfreda Chase, and the other was Miss Alice F. Howe. Richeson rendered a bill for the presents he had given to the girl and Howe retorted with a counter bill for a month's board and nursing that he had received while receiving medical treatment.

Richeson showered attentions upon a third girl, a member of his parish in Cambridge, even after the announcement of his engagement to Miss Edmonds had been made. The girl is Ethel Craig. She lived with an aunt in Green Street and she is employed as a salesgirl in a department store. Her home is less than a mile from the abode of the pastor. Last year she was baptized by Richeson. For two months subsequent to her baptism he paid her assiduous attention. At church affairs she was singled out by Richeson for special notice. In return she gave him no encouragement and is very reluctant to admit that she had ever been a friend of the pastor. She confessed that she did not know whether Richeson loved her or not. While she admired him as a minister and liked him as a friend, she said she did not hold a warmer regard for him and never had.

The Rev. George W. Holt, Baptist clergyman of Jamestown, R.I., is engaged to marry Miss Rose Edmonds, sister of Miss Violet Edmonds. He met his fiancée in much the same way that her sister Violet met Richeson. Both men were students at the Newton Theological Seminary, and it was there that Miss Rose first became acquainted with the man she is engaged to marry.

Their engagement was announced before it was known that her sister Violet had become attached to Richeson. When the latter engagement was announced it became known that the two young ministers were not very good friends.

Mr. Holt objected to the engagement of the sister of his fiancée to Richeson. Whatever his objections were they evidently had little weight and only were recalled by the present position in which the Edmonds family has been placed.
