NO DECISION ABOUT. ONTARIO ELECTIONS

Toronto, Ont., Oct. 5—"We are not in a position yet to make any announcement concerning the provincial bye-elections," said Sir James Whitney at the conclusion of the meeting of the cabinet yesterday. The delay in making public the government's intention is attributed to reluctance to forestall Mr. Borden's announcing the composition of his cabinet. Wm. Hearst of Sault Ste. Marie, Hon. Frank Cochran's prospective successor as minister of mines attended the meeting of the cabinet yesterday.

CENTRAL WATERVILLE.

Oct. 3.—As we have not seen any items from this place for some time we thought we would write a few. The farmers are about done digging their potatoes. They have had a very wet season for digging. Most of the young men of this place and some of the old men have gone to the woods. Mrs. T. Barrow and little granddaughter have gone to Houlton to visit her daughter, Mrs. J. Russell. Percy Fox has purchased a valuable farm from Zera Fox. Mr. and Mrs. Amos Thornton attended the exhibition at Fredericton. They were well pleased with their trip. Our school is progressing rapidly under the skillful management of our teacher, Miss Price. A large number from this place attended the exhibition at Woodstock. They reported a dull time. Mrs. Jones of Woodstock, has moved down with her daughter, Mrs. Emelious Cole, of this place. Jack McIntosh was the guest of Miss Bessie Harris one day last week. Mr. William Thornton purchased a fine driving horse from Percy Fox. Our brother, Thomas Stairs, holds meetings here every Sunday evening. We are pleased to have him with us. Mr. and Mrs. C. Manzer of Temperance Vale, were the guests of Mrs. Manzer's parents at this place last Sunday. Miss Myrtle Harris is staying at Clarence McParlane's, East Waterville. Eddie Price and Mrs. Hart of Hartfield, were the guests of Mrs. Samuel Barrow Sunday. Samuel Barrow cut his foot, but not very bad. Miss Bessie Harris one day last week. Mrs. Richard Fox. We are glad to see Mrs. Frank Harris around again. William Whitney and sister, Mrs. McGuire, have returned home after visiting old friends in this place. We were all pleased to see them again. Some of the farmers are very busy hauling their potatoes to Milville. Richard Fox is doing a rushing business around these parts these days.

MCKENZIE KING AND HIS FUTURE

(Ottawa Free Press)
Mackenzie King, "the boy statesman," passed into oblivion in the full vigor of his young manhood.—Vancouver Province.

Not by a jugful. It will take more than one election to relegate Mackenzie King to oblivion. Instead of his public career being finished it has only just begun. Whether as boy or man, Mackenzie is a statesman. His reputation is international.

A young man who can command the respect and admiration of ex-President Roosevelt, of ex-President Eliot of Harvard, of Premier Asquith of Mr. Edward Grey, of Lloyd-George of John Burns must have something in him more than egoism. A young man who can make himself worthy of a position in the cabinet of Sir Wilfrid Laurier must have some brains. A young man who can create legislation dealing with the labor problem that is the envy of the world must have ability. A young man who can conduct such an election campaign as that which he put up in western Ontario against great odds must have British stuff in him.

The Liberal party needs Mackenzie King in Parliament. We believe he will be there before long. And when he is there he will have still greater chance for the display of his talents in Opposition than he had as a Minister of the Crown. Mackenzie King in the Commons would be a worker; and the Liberal party will need workers. Oblivion! Not much, We invite The Vancouver Province to watch Mackenzie King.

At the last session of the Trades' Union Congress of England the following was unanimously adopted: "That the time has now arrived when every man must be a member of a union of his trade and when the date is fixed, no one will work after that time without non-union men."

JOHN REDMOND ON HOME RULE

(Toronto Globe)
The opponents of home rule are neither logical nor consistent, writes John Redmond in Reynolds' Newspaper. In one breath they say that so intense is the desire of the Irish for home rule that nothing less than total separation will satisfy them, while in the next they say that Ireland does not really want home rule which is merely a cry got up by interested agitators, and that all the Irish want to make them happy and contented is the settlement of the land question. Now, a very little acquaintance with the facts of Irish history (once the act of union makes it clear beyond the possibility of a doubt that, great, pressing and urgent as were the questions of Catholic Emancipation, of the tithe system of the Protestant establishment, of university education, of municipal and Parliamentary enfranchisement, of local government and of the land, no other Irish question has been or is of such great and urgent and overwhelming importance as the question of home rule—the right of the Irish people to full self-government in all purely Irish affairs.

The settlement, or partial settlement of all these older questions has not in the smallest degree altered the character of the demand for home rule, or lessened the intensity of the devotion of the masses of the people to their national ideal. In fact, the opposite is the case. As the material prosperity of the people has increased, and as education has spread, their insistence upon home rule has become, if possible, stronger year by year. Never was there so insistent and consistent demand made by a nation generation after generation. The reason is that the demand for home rule does not rest merely upon grievances, but upon the sentiment of nationality. Ireland is not a British province, nor an English shire, but a nation strongly marked individually, differentiating it from England, Scotland or Wales, and which it is impossible to suppress or to ignore. Home rule means the recognition of Ireland's nationality, and a recession of the national sentiment of the country.

But, apart from the sentiment of nationality, the home rule argument based upon grievances is overwhelming. Home rule is a practical question for Irishmen, because of foreign rule has meant home ruin for Ireland. Even if Ireland were as prosperous and contented under the union as she is the reverse she would still be entitled to, and would demand, home rule, for as Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman wisely said: "Good government is no substitute for self-government." If the parliament at Westminster had all the knowledge necessary for the good government of Ireland, instead of being made up of men the overwhelming majority of whom never laid foot in the country or studied her history or her problems—if in addition to this parliament were animated by sincere determination to remedy every Irish grievance, neither the knowledge, or the good-will would avail for aught because of the simplest of all reasons—the want of time. The amount of work which the Imperial parliament is supposed to do and of course does not do is appalling. The necessary result is the work is not done, because it cannot be done. Three days a year only as a maximum, and sometimes, in times of stress, one day or no day at all constitute the provision for discussion of all the revenue and expenditure of Ireland, amounting to many millions, and covering the whole field of administration and government. It is ludicrous, but it is also criminal. It has led to the wholesale robbery of a poor nation tied up in partnership with a rich empire, of whose every need and extravagance she is forced to pay a share.
