UNIVERSITY OF VERMONT
INSTALS NEW PRESIDENT

Burlington, Vt., Oct. 6—Burlington in all her history never saw such an assemblage of distinguished men and women as was here today to attend the inauguration of Dr. Guy Potter Benton as president of University of Vermont. One hundred or more of the prominent colleges of the United States and Canada sent their representative scholars to do honor to the man selected to succeed the late President M. H. Buckham and to carry the policies of that distinguished educator to their supreme fulfillment, some of the foremost scientific and learned societies of America sent distinguished delegates; alumni, who have made their mark in business and professional circles, returned once again to bid good-speed to alma mater on the academic journey she is about to make under a new guiding hand. Altogether it was a most memorable day in the annals of a historic town and a historic university.

The programme for the day began this morning with an address of welcome by Mayor Robert Roberts, followed by the presentation of messages of greeting from the many educational institutions represented. When these formalities were concluded the assemblage listened to brief addresses delivered by a number of the noted educators present. Prof. Norman W. DeWitt, of the University of Toronto spoke for the foreign universities, and President William O. Thompson, of Ohio State University, presented the greeting of the State universities. Among other prominent speakers were the following: President Arthur T. Hadley, of Yale, for the Association of American Universities; W. W. Jordan, for the agricultural and mechanical colleges and experiment stations; Dr. Andrew F. West of Princeton, for the universities of the east; President Edmund J. James of the University of Illinois, for the universities of the West; President John N. Tillman of the University of Arkansas, for the universities of the South; President William A. Shanklin of Wesleyan University, for the universities of New England; President John H. Finley of the college of the City of New York, for city colleges and universities; President Mary A. Woolley of Mount Holyoke, for the women's colleges, and President L. H. Murlin of Boston University, for denominational colleges, and universities.

Other speakers were heard in behalf of the United States Bureau of Education, the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Learning, the educational and religious press and the public schools of Vermont. Baker University, Upper Iowa University and Miami University, three of the institutions with which Dr. Benton has been associated in his career as and educator, were specially represented.

The inauguration exercises proper took place this afternoon in Strong Theatre, with Hon. Elias Lyman, who has been acting president of the university, presiding. An academic procession across the campus preceded the exercises. The Bishop of Vermont opened the ceremonies with prayer. Vice President Sherman delivered an address in behalf of the Nation, and Darwin P. Kingley of New York spoke for the board of trustees. Other speakers represented the alumni, the faculty and the student body. Governor Mead administered the oath of office, following which the new president delivered his inaugural address.

Dr. Guy Potter Benton, who has become president of the University, which is now in its 120th year, was born in Kenton, Ohio, in 1865. He was educated in the Ohio Northern University, Baker University and the Ohio Wesleyan University and later pursued special studies in Europe. When twenty-five years old he was superintendent of schools in Fort Scott, Kansas, which position he held five years. Next he became assistant superintendent of public institutions in Kansas. In 1899 he was appointed president of Upper Iowa University, holding that position until 1902. In that year he accepted the presidency of Miami University, where he remained until his recent election as president of the university of Vermont.
