RECIPROCITY SENTIMENT STRONG AT SASKATOON

(Special Correspondence of the Toronto Star)

Saskatoon, Sask., July 13.—The more you see of that shy bird, the voter, the less do you know he is going to do. You think that, being an Englishman, you can depend on him to denounce the reciprocity agreement if you just shout "treason" at the top of your lungs, and behold, you find out that he has become so interested in the land of his adoption that he refuses to throw up his hat when you appeal to the flag, and laughs in your face when you try to persuade him that the Fielding-Knox pact is going to force him, against his will, under the folds of the starry flag.

Indeed, and truly, the last few meetings have been a sore test to the temper and patience of the leader of the Opposition and his trusty henchmen who are bumping about the endless prairie in their special train, which might well be christened "Good Hope."

ARGUMENT USELESS

The last leg of the triangle across the prairie began with the run out of Edmonton on Thursday. Vegreville, with its Ruthenians, its Poles, its Indians, and its generally motley population, was the first stop. There the zeal of the small knot of Conservatives almost made up for the stolid and uncomprehending indifference of most of the audience. It was a little like talking to a group of stones. Most of these people have the singular idea that the government which has given them free homes on fertile soil, and which sees to it that equal laws are equally enforced, is quite good enough to support. In view of this attitude, economic argument is of little avail.

Lloydminister and the Battlefords, therefore, remained the bright lights shining on the horizon. Surely a group of English immigrants would fall for the "old flag" stuff if anybody would. But the best laid plans of mice and men go wrong, and the former Barr colony around Lloydminister gave the visitors the rudest jolt they have received up to the present. They were not content to sit in glum silence while Mr. G. H. Perley did his turn. For some reason Mr. Perley raises about as much enthusiasm in a prairie audience as a free trader would at a banquet of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association. Usually they let him alone, evincing their disapprobation by a stony silence, but Lloydminister they had the temerity to ask questions, and, what was worse, to ask questions which Mr. Perley either could not answer, or which involved him in a mire of contradictions. His speech was a desolate failure, and Mr. Borden is not the man to switch a frosty audience over to warm enthusiasm. Some, too, had to answer questions.

DON'T FEAR ARGENTINE

For some reason the farmers out here cannot be brought to think that they have much to suffer from Argentine beef on the Canadian market. They profess to believe that a Newcastle coal dealer has about as much to fear from the Pennsylvania mines as they have from a producer five thousand miles away or so. When a speaker shifts his ground and tells them that they are in imminent peril of losing their foreign market for beef because of the activity of these same Argentine farmers, they laugh some more and get back with the remark that they wonder when the blow is going to fall. So far, they say, they have been able to hold their own in the undiscriminating English market, that they can sell far more wheat and beef than they can produce, and they politely invite Mr. Borden to think up something else. A man in the Edmonton audience neatly picked this bubble another way. The Conservative speakers are fond of telling their audience that the Argentine farmer pays his laborers only 62 cents a day, and of asking them how they would like to compete with that sort of labor.

"What's the cost of living in Argentine?" shouted this man, and the speaker, Dr. Roch, skated swiftly away.

The truth of the matter is that the western farmer has been spending a lot of time and study on the whole problem of markets, not with any predisposition for or against reciprocity and certainly without any party leanings, and as a consequence he is in a position to understand all questions pertaining to them in a way that would do credit to anybody. When the reciprocity agreement came along the average farmer out here sat down and figured out just what it would mean to him. It would not be fair to say that he is unanimous for the pact. Some very able men have been met with who do not approve of it. Some of them fear the competition of the United States stock raisers in the years to come, some have one reason, some another. But you do not meet any one who is willing to waste his time worrying about what the agreement will do to destroy the imperial tie. If any speaker presses that point too much there is a movement of impatience on the part of the audience, a badly concealed resentment of what they evidently regard as a reflection on their intelligence. Therefore, it is only in the cities and larger towns where the straight party lines are so closely drawn that we find the flag unfurled and thrown to the breeze.

LIBERALS PAID EXPENSES

The Battlefords, on their lovely sites above the great whirling Saskatchewan, met Mr. Borden with grave courtesy and listened to him with patience if without many fireworks. South Battleford was a fine example of a non-partisan meeting. Had the Liberals in the place refused from attending the meeting Mr. Borden would not have got a corporal's guard. Hen's teeth are plentiful as compared with Conservatives in South Battleford. So the Liberals turned out and helped the Conservatives out. It was the Liberal Association which bore the bulk of the expense of the reception and banquet that the Conservative leader received. It could hardly be expected that under these circumstances he would get rapturous applause for his strictures on the chief plank in the Liberal platform, but they gave him a good reception, nevertheless their political convictions for the moment forgotten in the duties of the host. Several gentlemen of a ruder sort resented Mr. Perley's efforts and even went so far as to remark "rot" to the resentment of the old guard. But that was just one of the little incidents that you meet when you persist in trying to make somebody believe something that he knows is wrong.

Politics broke through for a moment when A. J. Brokovski, one of the oldest residents of the town, and a life-long Conservative, entered up on a warm defence of A. Champagne, the Liberal federal member for the district. It appears that Mr. Champagne was the object of a red hot attack by the opposition because of his choice of a site for the post office on the ground that he had shown favoritism to a brother of his. Nothing daunted by the presence of the oppositionist leader, Mr. Brokovski turned up his war trumpet and blew a defiance. He put his foot in it with the few Conservatives present when he naively admitted that he did not expect to live to see the day when the Conservative party would be returned to power. It was a gay party for the Liberals, but a bit disconcerting for the leader of the opposition and his followers, especially when Mr. Borden found Sir Wilfrid Laurier's name coupled with his own in the response to the toast of Our Guests. He got around it with a few graceful and tactful words of praise to Sir Wilfrid that a smaller man would not have said, and that waked a warm glow in the breasts of his political opponents.

AN ANTI-CLIMAX

The last few days have been a bit of an anti-climax to the fine receptions given up the line, at Calgary and Edmonton, to the would-be premier. They have been small places that we have visited since we left the most northerly capital, and it is the small place, where the farmers congregate in their scores, instead of the city men in their hundreds, that are showing Mr. Borden just what the west is thinking about the reciprocity agreement.

ORANGEMEN

AT ST. STEPHEN

St. Stephen, N.B., July 13.—The Twelfth was celebrated here yesterday. There were probably 4,000 people in town. The country teams from all sections began to pour in from an early hour this morning. There were excursions from all parts of the county. The first to arrive was by steamer Viking, from Deer Island and other down-river points; then by Connors Bros.' steamer from Back Bay and adjacent places, and steamer Grand Manan from the Island of Grand Manan and intermediate points, all bringing goodly numbers bent upon enjoying the glorious Twelfth.

At 11.30 an excursion train of ten coaches arrived from Woodstock. Then there were two extra coaches attached to the regular express which arrived about one hour later. The special trains from Fredericton and St. John had eleven coaches, and the Shore Line brought in its quota, so that there were no doubt, over 2,000 visitors from outside points. Although the True Blues furnished dinner in the rink, the hotels were well patronized. It was an orderly crowd and the absence of inebriants was very noticeable as the mayor and council had taken precautionary measures to see that all places for dispensing the "ardent" were closed.

The Orangemen assembled in the Agricultural hall and on the grounds, and at 2.45 o'clock formed a procession which, when extended, was fully a mile long. The streets were lined with spectators, many of whom were Orangemen in regalia who would have been seen to better advantage in the procession. There were six bands in attendance.

The order of procession was: Carleton band, County Master Ira Brown, as King William; Prentice Boys, Carleton No. 141, Marysville band, York county lodges, Fredericton Junction band, Carleton county lodges, Maple Leaf band, Charlotte county lodges, Frontier band.

The procession returned to the Agricultural hall, where interesting addresses were delivered. Survey General Grimmer, as ex-mayor, in the absence of the mayor, extended a cordial welcome to the Orangemen and trusted they would be well repaid for their visit to our pretty town. He urged them to stand true to the tenets of their order, which would certainly bring to them peace and happiness.

Rev. L. B. Gibson, pastor of the Presbyterian church, in a stirring address, gave the history and origin of Orangeism and made a strong appeal to every Orangeman to live up to the principles of the order. Interesting addresses were also delivered by the organizer of the Zrentice Boys' Association and by Past Grand Master Thomas of Fredericton.

Last evening the Orangemen enjoyed a beautiful moonlight sail on the steamer Grand Manan to St. Andrews.
