WHY THE RUSSIAN ADVANCE THUS FAR HAS BEEN EASY

The long struggle of the Polish populations of Prussia to avoid being Germanized will doubtless be remembered by them to the advantage of the Russian invader as he marches through their territory on his way to Berlin. In the eastern section of Prussia there are over three million Poles, living chiefly in the provinces of West Prussia, Posen and southeastern Silesia, the former two of which lie directly in the Russian path. In all these districts, and to a less extent in northeast Prussia, the scene of Russian victories, they form the bulk of the rural communities. Other elements likely to sympathize with the invasion are the remnants of the Slavic peoples who occupied this territory from a very early period. A considerable portion of them have completely adopted the German language, but Czech is still spoken by about ten thousand people in the environs of Glatz Moravia by fifty thousand in the district of Ratibor and Leobschütz. The Poles especially have been in frequent conflict with the German authorities in regard to their lingual and electoral rights. One source of trouble in East Prussia has been the "three class system" of choosing members to the lower house of the Prussian Landtag, permitting a small minority of the voters control two-thirds of the electors, and thus giving an undue advantage to wealth.

ROBT. DONALDSON

the right leg was also severely mangled. There was a slight bruise on his right forehead.

The deceased was an old trainman and was superannuated by the Canadian Pacific Railway about ten years ago after having served thirty-two years as a fireman and engineer on the branch railway between Fredericton Junction and this city. He was a faithful employee and had a most creditable record as a locomotive engineer.

The late Mr. Donaldson was 77 of age and is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Warton of Boston, Mass., and Mrs. Harry McClary of Springfield with whom he had made his home. Three brothers, William of Boston, Alfred of Chatham, and Lee of McAdam Junction, also survive. The deceased was a member of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and of Graham Lodge, N. 20, Loyal Orange Association.

The funeral will take place at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon from the home of his daughter, Mrs. Harry McClary at Springfield. Rev. Dr. W. H. Smith will conduct the services assisted by Rev. Mr. Shewan and interment will be made at the Rural Cemetery.

KING'S FAVORED TENANTS

Some Queer Rents Collected by King George

Some of the rents which are King George's due from certain of his loyal subjects are "more honored in the breach than in the observance." It would certainly surprise King George and Queen Mary if the Lord of the Manor of Addington, in Surrey should suddenly appear and plunk down on the Royal breakfast table the bowl of porridge which constitutes his yearly rent in acknowledgment of his Sovereign's overlordship.

Whether the present owner of the Foulis Estates in Scotland regularly pays his rent we cannot say, or whether the King, as is likely, shuts his eyes to the omission of the bucketful of snow which is his rightful due. As the estates are near Ben Nevis there would certainly be no difficulty in obtaining a trainload of snow once a year, and probably even a bucketful in summer; but, as the King has little use for snow, probably the rent is never paid.

Quite a different and much more desirable rent is the one which has been charged to the tenant of Crenodon, in Buckinghamshire, from time immemorial. The rent consists of a garland of roses every June, and, needless to say, the garland is duly forwarded, and is a thing of beauty as it ought to be.

In September every year two faggots are paid at the Law Courts by the City Remembrancer as rent for lands held by the City Corporation from His Majesty the King. This official not only has to deliver the two faggots, but has to see that they are properly received and accept a duly signed and witnessed receipt for them which is filed in the City's archives.

The authorities of the Isle of Port land make a queer sort of collection every November on behalf of His Majesty. It is called the "King's Halfpenny"; but, as a matter of fact every cottager on the island pays a farthing, every cottage with a garden a halfpenny, and every man with an acre of land or more three pence. This is called "quit rent."

When the King lately went across the Channel to pay his State visit to Paris, he ought to have been attended across the briny ocean by the present representative of Solomon Atfield, to whom King John gave his lands on condition that, whenever he or any of his successors crossed the Channel the said Solomon or his heirs should be in attendance to hold up the King's head when he was seasick.

His title was the Royal Head-holder. However, as the last monarch to call for this service was Edward I., and especially as his present Majesty is a sailor, it is very unlikely that the existing Solomon was called upon to perform his functions. Nevertheless there is no doubt that if the King so desired he could call upon the tenants of the Atfield estates to do the service by which they hold the tenure of their land.

If the King should pay a visit to Aylesbury—where the ducks come from—the inhabitants are supposed to supply him with three eels if it is winter, and with two fat geese if it is summer. If the King should visit Chichester, by ancient usage he ought immediately to demand a string for his crossbow; and if the King should be engaged in war and riding at the head of his troops, it would be incumbent upon the successors to the Corbet Estates, in Shropshire to provide him with a fitch of bacon every day!
