PROPER HANDLING OF FRESH EGGS

Consumers Should Demand Strictly
Fresh Article

We have frequently had occasion to observe the detrimental influence of dirt and moisture on the keeping qualities of eggs, says a bulletin from Storrs Experimental Station. Of a large number of eggs which were stored in an ordinary refrigerator all were found, after three or four weeks, to be permeated with moulds. In other instances we have found bacteria, under similar conditions. In a crate filled with eggs which had been placed in a damp, dark basement, and which had remained there for several weeks, all of the eggs were in an advanced state of rotting when brought to light and examined. These eggs had come from the same hens the eggs of which had been tested constantly and found as a rule, to be free from bacteria.

It is a well known fact that eggs which have been incubated under hens, and which failed to hatch, are usually foul. We have observed this again and again, especially during the warm summer months. It is quite probable that the hen which is incubating the eggs is responsible for the rotting, in that the eggs become more or less soiled by her; and, furthermore, the hen imparts a certain amount of moisture to the eggs, especially during warm weather, which aids the bacteria which are on the soiled shell to gain an entrance into the egg. On the other hand, eggs which are incubated artificially remain uncomposed, with very few exceptions, for at least two or three weeks, and undoubtedly much longer, providing they are clean, fresh eggs when they are put into the incubator.

It is of the greatest importance that a general campaign be waged to secure eggs for consumption, and especially when they are to be preserved in cold storage, which are clean and perfectly fresh. The solution of this problem rests with both the producer and the buyer. In the first place, the gathering of eggs from the nests soon after they are laid cannot be urged too strongly. They should be collected at least once a day, and whenever possible two or three times. This is usually done on large plants where trap-nests are used; but on the smaller plants, and especially on regular farms where poultry-raising is but one of many pursuits in the making of a livelihood, there is often no system in the poultry management. Eggs are frequently left in the nests two or three days, and under broody hens. Furthermore, many eggs enter the market which have been under setting hens for several days in so-called "stolen nests."

The movement which is on foot in parts of this country to purchase and pay for eggs according to their quality or soundness, rather than by mere weight or numbers, should meet with hearty support. In many instances this has been done, but the practice should become general. Producers would then be brought face to face with the necessity of keeping nests in sanitary condition, and of gathering eggs soon after they are laid.

The handling and keeping of eggs should also receive much consideration. It is necessary that the eggs be kept clean, dry and reasonably cool. They should be transported under the best conditions of sanitation, and when placed in cold storage the rooms in which they are kept should be dry.

PSYCHIC POWERS TO BE DIS-

"The wonderful power of Personal Influence, Magnetism, Fascination, Mind Control, call it what you will, can surely be acquired by everyone, no matter how unattractive or unsuccessful," says Mr. Elmer Ellsworth Knowles, author of the new book entitled: "The Key to the Development of the Inner Forces." The book lays bare many astounding facts concerning the practices of the Eastern Yogis, and describes a simple though effective system of controlling the thoughts and acts of others; how one may gain the love and friendship of those who might otherwise remain indifferent; how to quickly and accurately judge the character and disposition of an individual; how to cure the most obstinate diseases and habits without drugs or medicines, even the complex subject of projecting thoughts (telepathy) is explained. Miss Josephine Davis, the popular stage favourite, whose portrait appears herewith, declares that Prof. Knowles' book opens the door to success, health and happiness to every mortal, no matter what his or her position in life. She believes that Prof. Knowles has discovered principles which, if universally adopted, will revolutionise the mental status of the human race.

The book, which is being distributed broadcast free of charge, is full of photographic reproductions showing how these unseen forces are being used all over the world, and how thousands upon thousands have developed powers which they little dreamed they possessed. The free distribution of the 100,000 copies is being conducted by a large London institution, and a copy will be sent post free to anyone interested. No money need be sent, but those who wish to do so may enclose 5 cents (stamps of your own country) to cover postage etc. All requests for the free book should be addressed to: National Institute of Sciences, Free Distribution Dept. 1532 B, No. 258 Westminster Bridge Road, London, S. E., England. Simply say you would like a copy of "The Key to the Development of the Inner Forces," and mention The Fredericton Mail.
