ANOTHER BREEZY LETTER FROM MR. JOHN T. KAY

To the Editor of The Daily Mail:

Dear Sir—I have been reading a report of Dr. A. S. Grant's address to the Presbyterian General Assembly wherein he speaks of the foreigners and expresses the opinion that they would not be a menace to us. Now, Mr. Editor, if the learned gentleman had been with me last Sunday he might have learned a lesson that would have done him some good and for his benefit and it may benefit others, I will tell you just word for word what one foreigner thinks of us and no doubt they all think as he does. There has been for some time a crew of Italians working on the railroad here. They were here last summer and for several years past they have been working along the line. One young fellow that was born here in this vicinity was gazing the Italian. He asked him if he had a railroad in Italy and a lot of other foolish questions.

The Italian stood it for a time and then he opened up. He asked the young man who discovered wireless telegraphy and then said:

"Young man, you think you are better than an Italian. Well, I am going to tell you something," and he said this in his talk, as near as I can remember:

"Well, you are not. In the first place, we have sixty-five men here and if you can find one louse on any of us or on our bedding I will give you all my money and I have $2.00 with me. Your country is all right, as God made it, but you are fools. You have no roads and lots of your schools are closed. Your road machines are rusting in the ditches because you have not brains enough to use them. I have been in this country nine years and work in the lumber woods in winter, both in Canada and the United States and I have always found the camp so full of lice that a man could not rest nights because you people are too lazy to wash your clothes. Our clothes may be patched but they are clean.

"Now, young man, you people are all right, some of you. Some of you have no brains and don't mind your own business. If you did we would not be here for there are lots of able-bodied loafers hanging round the towns and country places doing nothing but sponging on their women. They are able to do all the work that we are doing and if they did it you could keep your money home. We get good wages here and we save our money to get us a home for our old

HORSES "WALK PLANK"

They Cross a Deep Ravine on a Single Log

The surefootedness of the mule is proverbial, but the feats of this animal are rivalled by those of the pack-horses used in the wild timbered regions of northern Canada and the Rocky Mountains. Laden though they are with "grub," as the surveyor terms provisions, these horses can swim wide rivers, ford shallow ones, or follow the men of the party over a single log, often no more than a foot in diameter, which bridges a deep narrow mountain gorge where a fall would mean instant death or worse. They can even follow the foresters through the sloughs, muskegs and wind-thrown brush characteristic of this northern forest, which is saying a good deal for a mere horse, for as one of the forest surveyors writes from the primeval forest near Lesser Slave Lake, "A forester needs to be here, besides all other professional titles, a real bushman, an axe-man and a jumper."

There were eight forest survey parties engaged in demarking forest and agricultural lands in the far west last summer, and their reports contain accounts of actual adventures which rival the most fictitious. The total area examined was about 11,000,000 acres, some on the rough slopes of the Rockies, some in the rocky areas of Manitoba and Saskatchewan and some in the low-lying and musky region of northern Alberta. Very little land was found fit for agriculture in these regions, and most of it is recommended as forest reserves. The present area of the Dominion Forest Reserves is 23,017,504 acres, or nearly 36,000 square miles. In comparison, the National Forests of the United States cover an area of 257,855 square miles, yet Canada is larger than the United States and contain larger land areas fit only for tree growth.

Cocoanuts in Ceylon

The natives of Ceylon eat one and a half million cocoanuts a day. There are sixty million cocoanut trees on this island, and the surplus production of nuts is chiefly used to make copra, the dried "meat" of the nut, which is a valuable source of vegetable oils. It is estimated that there are produced yearly 600,000 to 700,000 tons of copra, valued at sixty-five million dollars. One-quarter of the world's production comes from the Philippine Islands.

Edible Snails

So much greater is the demand for edible snails in France that the supply that artificial snails have been invented, the only genuine portions of which are the shells.

Measuring Spoons

For the housewife there has been invented a set of three measuring spoons of different sizes, fastened together at the handles with a rivet.

No Orphan Asylums

Australia avoids orphan asylums by sending parentless children to private families, which are paid for their care until they are 14 years old.

Push Button

An ordinary electric push button can be used as a floor push by mounting it under a floor and using a long nail through the floor to press it.

Without a Brain

Two eminent German physicians have reported the case of a child that lived until its fourth year without a brain.

MEETING OF STAMP MANUFACTURERS

Toronto, Ont., June 19—Three hundred and fifty members of the International Stamp Manufacturers' Association who met in the early part of the week in Buffalo, arrived in Toronto today to conclude the sessions of their annual convention. The membership of the association embraces representative dealers in rubber stamps, seals, etc., in the United States, Canada, Great Britain and Australia. During their two-day stay in Toronto the visitors are to be entertained by the Stamp Manufacturers' Association of Canada.
