CONFERENCE ELECTS ITS OFFICERS

Chatham, N.B. June 11—At the New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island Methodist Conference here today, most of the time of the morning session was taken up with the preliminary draft of the station sheet. Rev. F. A. Wightman of Bathurst was elected president, Rev. D. R. Chowen was re-elected secretary and Rev. E. H. Thomas was appointed journal secretary.

Mr. Wightman, the new president, was at one time pastor of the Carmarthen street church, in St. John. During the afternoon there was a session which was occupied mostly with the organization of committees and reception of reports. D.M. Johnson of Turro submitted a report on the work of the Wesleyan, the official paper of the conference, and F. W. Mosher of Halifax, presented an interesting report dealing with the affairs of the publishing office and book room at Halifax. In the evening a delegation representing the city council accompanied by a brass band, serenaded the conference, and Mayor F. M. Tweed addressed the gathering extending a welcome to the members of the conference on behalf of the town. Fitting replies were made by the new president, and Rev. Dean Sprague of Mount Allison University. Afterwards Rev. J. R. Atup, of Toronto, associate secretary of foreign missions, and Rev. W. J. Smith of Montreal, field secretary of the Temperance and Moral Reform Department, gave interesting addresses to the conference, dealing with the work of their departments. Today delegates to the coming general conference will be elected.

IRISH MAY GMI HARP ON BANN.R

(WASHINGTON HERALD)
What flag shall Ireland fly? This is a question that is again being discussed by Irish-Americans here.

Probably no country has had more national flags than Ireland, so that of old-time flags the range of choice is by no means restricted. The most ancient, without doubt is the "Spear and Serpent," said to commemorate the curing by Moses of an ancestor of Milesius, who had been bitten by a snake. Then there is the golden sunburst upon a blue ground, emblem of Fionn MacCunhall's Fenians' militia. Blue was always Ireland's national color until 1798, when the United Irishmen, to signify the blending of north and south, employed a national color of their own formed by the amalgamation of blue and orange—namely green.

Another flag is that which Cromwell's soldiers are reputed to have seen when fighting the Kernes, a red cross upon a golden ground. Opinions as to whether such was ever a national emblem or not are divided, many people believing it to have been the arms of an insurgent commander.

The three golden crowns upon a blue ground is another emblem which has not been overlooked. The design appears today in the arms of Munster, and the three crowns are said to typify the triple kingdoms of Desmond, Thomond and Ormond. Anyway this flag was the emblem of Ireland from 1170 until 1547, when Henry VIII. of England substituted the harp for the three crowns, the reason being that Henry was anxious not to be confused with the triple tiara of the Pope, with whom at that juncture Henry was not upon the best of terms.

Thus it comes about that the harp which is deemed so typically Irish, was imposed upon Ireland by an English King; but had not the United Irishman, although they decried the harp in 1798, adopted it as their emblem and Grattan's Parliament recognized the harp, although they they did not the green ground, it is hardly likely that the average Irishman of today would regard it as other than an upstart burgee.

Still another national device to be considered is the "Lam's Dearg Eirinn," the Red Hand of Ireland, which, upon a white ground, was borne by Shane and Hugh O'Neill's armies that defeated Queen Elizabeth's generals.

The early hours of the 19th century saw Ireland inflicted with the St. Patrick's cross, a red saltire upon a white ground. What St. Patrick had to do with it nobody can say, but some emblem or other had got to be incorporated in the British flag upon the passing of the act of union, and so the heralds did the rest. Wherever they got the red saltire is not known, but there is reason to believe that it was borrowed from the arms of Trinity College, Dublin, which had in turn borrowed it from the Fitzgerald family.

In all probability Ireland will a do not the sunburst upon a blue ground, the chief reasons being its antiquity, its symbolism of Ireland rising to take her proper place among the nations.

But, come what may, the ground of the new flag is going to be blue. The Sinn Feiners are resolved upon that, and that the flags material shall not be silk or cotton but good Irish linen.
