RECIPROCITY DOMINANT ISSUE IN SASKATCHEWAN

"I do not think it can again be said that the election result is a telling blow affecting the prestige of Hon. Robert Rogers and the Ottawa government. It shows that Conservative tenure at Ottawa is quite insecure. It insures the question of wider markets as the main issue in the next federal contest. Obtain for that question a hearing on its merits, divorced from silly annexation or flag sentiment, and the result will be a foregone conclusion."

Toronto, July 14—Discussing the great Liberal victory in Saskatchewan the Globe of this city says editorially: "Mr. Rogers has his answer. Months ago the Conservative leaders at Ottawa delegated to their most unscrupulous colleague the task of proving that reciprocity was dead by carrying Saskatchewan for Borden and Haultain. The plans of Rogers were laid with his customary cunning. Every agency that could be enlisted was impressed into the service. The country was overrun with election workers who had graduated in the Manitoba school of electoral crookedness. The Conservative papers of the East were used to sound the alarm. On Thursday, May 9, the Toronto News correspondent in the West declared that 'more depends upon this election than the average man in the East imagines. As now goes Saskatchewan so will it go at the next Federal election.'"

Similar statements were made from time to time in other government organs. It was recognized that a victory for Haultain would be a victory for Borden, and that a victory for Scott would be an endorsement of the Laurier policy of larger markets. On election day before the results were known the London Free Press said: "A Liberal victory in Saskatchewan today will place the Liberal party of Canada under obligation to fight for reciprocity." The Hamilton Herald, an independent Conservative paper, said: "We suppose that the question whether reciprocity is dead or alive cannot be answered until the returns from Saskatchewan are received."

On the other side, of politics, the Manitoba Free Press, the leading Liberal paper in the West, pointed out that "The Saskatchewan election is vital to the Liberals because it is fought on the tariff issue. A Liberal victory will mean that the radical, low-tariff element of the party, which since the defeat of last September has been growing in power, will take full command of the party and challenge the Conservative party to battle on the issue of lower taxation and wider markets, with special emphasis on the desirability of access to the markets to the South. . . . The battle in Saskatchewan in reality is between the dominion government and the Western Liberal party. The Borden government is in danger from two points of attack; one in Quebec, the other in the Canadian West. In Quebec the battle has already gone against the government. If, now, Saskatchewan should show the West to be irreconcilable in its hostility to the new government, the whole political situation in Canada would be unsettled. The outcome of the next dominion election would at once be rendered doubtful."

The Saskatchewan election, as the Free Press indicated it would, renders the outcome of the next dominion election doubtful. It proves that the West regards larger markets as vital. It increases the probability of the overturn, of the Roblin government when next it appeals to the people, and its replacement by a government in harmony with the progressive thought of the West. The Toronto World seems to anticipate something of the sort for in its comment on the result in Saskatchewan it says: "That Mr. Haultain and Mr. Rogers did not win the fight may have been in no small measure due to the latter's long association with the Roblin government. That government is now being widely advertised over the continent as exemplifying the evil effects of public ownership. As the World has more than once pointed out, the failure of government-owned elevators and government owned telephones in Manitoba reflects not upon the principle of public ownership, but upon the Roblin government. This was probably the view of the question taken by the people of Saskatchewan, and Mr. Rogers, long associated with Sir R. P. Roblin, may have handicapped the progressive campaign of the Conservatives in the Saskatchewan election, notwithstanding his great ability as a political organizer."

The Saskatchewan election and the nomination of Woodrow Wilson for the United States presidency by the Democrats on a platform that includes the retention of the reciprocity offer to Canada clarify the political situation in both countries. The fight for larger markets and against the taxation of foodstuffs is only begun. It will be the supreme issue in another general election.

LIBERALS CELEBRATE.

The Toronto Globe of Friday published the following despatch from Regina:

Regina, July 12—Saskatchewan has spoken. And the voice of the great prairie province has been emphatic. At one o'clock this morning, while the returns in the outlying districts were still far from complete, it was evident that the cause of larger markets and good government had again scored a signal triumph and that the notorious "Bob" Rogers-Haultain combination, with its elaborate electoral machine, has sustained a crushing defeat at the hands of the citizenship of Saskatchewan. Already the federal emissaries of Rogers have packed their grips and several availed themselves of the night to steal silently out of town. Their rout here was complete. Certain of them, however, were unable to join in the flitting, owing to the fact that they are held under arrest on serious charges of bribery, intimidation and attempted personation.

LIBERALS ARE JUBILANT.

Meanwhile the Liberals are celebrating as never before. Great cheering throngs are parading the thoroughfares. Farmers, who drove in for miles, marched behind an illuminated banner reading, "We Stand for Larger Markets." At the Liberal headquarters enthusiasm knew no bounds, while the lights went out at the Conservative offices early. There seems to be none but Liberals in the capital tonight. The crowds on the streets cheered for "Laurier and Scott."

FACE WAS LITERALLY COVERED WITH PIMPLES.

Four Different Doctors Did Her No Good.

Two Bottles of BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS Cured Her.

Bad blood is directly the cause of the face breaking out in pimples, and it is impossible to eradicate them unless you put your blood into good shape.

Burdock Blood Bitters is compounded from roots, herbs, barks and berries, and is without a doubt the best remedy procurable for the purpose of driving all the blood impurities out of the system.

Mr. Geo. E. Miller, Clavering, Ont., writes: "Last fall I was very much troubled with pimples. My face was literally covered with them. I went to four different doctors, but they could do me no good. One day a friend advised me to use Burdock Blood Bitters, so I got two bottles, and before I had taken all the first one, the pimples had nearly all disappeared, and by the time I had taken all the second one the pimples had disappeared completely, thanks to Burdock Blood Bitters. I would advise anybody who is troubled with any blood trouble to use Burdock Blood Bitters."

SUPPOSED TRAMP HAS BEEN IDENTIFIED

Halifax, N. S., July 14—When the Maritime Express was wrecked at Grand Lake last Wednesday, the body of an unknown man was found riding on the blind end of the postal car and was killed. At first he was thought to have been a tramp but afterwards it was learned that the body was that of a cultured and educated person. Two or three names were in a book found on his body. One was that of James Moore Irwin and another of Germain Ouellette of Lachine. Ouellette was wired to for information and a description sent.

A reply came that three weeks ago Ouellette had met a tramp on the steamer Belleville named James Moore Irwin, that the description tallied with that sent and that he was a student from Buffalo, aged 17 years. Then the Buffalo police were wired and the following reply was received today from Michael Regan, superintendent of police: "Irwin's folks notified and are on way to Halifax."

The funeral was to have taken place today but was postponed when this information came. Irwin's body has been at the undertaker's since Wednesday night. J. C. Mackintosh, a banker of this city, had purchased a lot in Fairview cemetery where the body would have been buried at his expense.

LIBERALS TAKE SEAT FROM LABOR PARTY

Hanley, Eng., July 15—R. Louthwaite, Liberal, was returned to the House of Commons in the bye-election held today to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Enoch Edwards, laborite. He defeated the unionist candidate by 654 and the laborite by 4,953. The action of the liberals in contesting the seat is bitterly resented by the labor party and threatens to strain the alliance to the breaking point.

SHOT FACTORY WAS DESTROYED BY FIRE

Calais, Me., July 14—A serious fire occurred here early Sunday morning when the shot works of which Chas. W. Young of St. Stephen, is the principal shareholder, were destroyed, the loss being between $7,000 and $8,000. Although many reasons have been advanced as to the origin of the fire, it is thought by those who arrived at the scene first that incendiaries were responsible for the blaze.

The shot from these works are used in the granite mills and as there is but one other shot factory in the United States, and that in Ohio, the fire will greatly hinder the granite industry until the works can be rebuilt.
