VIOLENT BATTLE

considered as among the most modern and most impregnable in the world, but against them are being brought to bear the specimens of the gunmaker's skill. Something of the defences of this important city, which is liable to be invested by the Germans at any moment, is told by Major Piorkowski, an expert representative of the great Krupp gun works at Essen, Germany, in an article specially written for the war issue of The Scientific American of Oct. 3rd, in which he says:

"Antwerp has always been a fortress and its history is full of fighting and sieges. But now its fortifications count among the most modern and are considered an example of the present state of the military engineer's art and science. Their designer and builder, General A. H. Brialmont, the Belgian engineer and writer on fortifications, has made himself famous not only by his work for the strongholds of Antwerp, but by his planning and building the defences of Bucharest, the capital of Roumania, and of Liege and Namur. His close connection and friendship with Colonel Max Schumann of the Gruson Works of Magdeburg, Germany, enabled him to introduce iron and steel batteries and turrets into his fortifications, and these modern constructions probably will now have their first test in real warfare.

"I may say right here that modern ordnance and gunnery have made great progress in the last thirty years, since Antwerp's ramparts and forts were built, as they are now, so that it is quite doubtful whether they would prove formidable and make the siege a long one. The range and the power of penetration and accuracy of modern ordnance is far superior to what it was when the tests at Bucharest in 1883 and at Spezia, Italy, in 1886 spread the fame of the so-called Gruson turrets, which form the citadels of the Antwerp forts and which were then adopted by the military engineers of Germany, Austria, Italy, Belgium, Roumania, Switzerland and Holland."

RUSSIAN OFFICIAL STATEMENT.

Washington, Oct. 5.—Dispatches were received at the Russian Embassy here today from the Foreign Office in Petrograd, confirming reports of Russian victories over the German armies in Eastern Prussia. The latter are said to be in disorderly retreat before the Czar's millions. The Ambassador, in a statement epitomizing its information, gave out the following statement:

"The battle of Augustow ended on Oct. 3rd by our victory. The defeat of the Germans is complete and they are now retreating in disorder to Eastern Prussia. Our troops are pursuing the enemy, who is abandoning on his way guns, wagons and wounded. The battle of Augustow began on Sept. 25 by a bombardment by the German heavy artillery of the country around Hopchin and by an advance of the enemy on this position. At the same time the Germans attempted several times to pierce our lines on the Niemen at Drukeniki. The engagement took place on the banks of the Niemen River.

On Sept. 21st they also began an attack on the fortress of Ossowjetz. They were, however, repulsed everywhere and forced to retire. On Sept. 27th we took the offensive, which the Germans, in spite of their desperate efforts were unable to stop.

"At the present time the enemy is hurriedly evacuating our territory, in places the retreat assumes the character of a disorderly flight. The pursuit is vigorously pushed on."

POTATO EMBARGO

NOT YET RAISED

Ottawa, Oct. 6.—With regard to the report that the embargo on New Brunswick potatoes had been lifted by the Washington government, Hon. Martin Burrell, minister of agriculture, stated tonight that he was unable to confirm this but was expecting to hear at any time from Washington regarding the matter. Mr. Burrell explained, however, that it was not exactly an absolute embargo on New Brunswick potatoes in particular, although the conditions placed by the United States on the importation of potatoes were so stringent that they practically amounted to an embargo.

Early in the summer Mr. Burrell took the matter up with the Washington authorities in an effort to secure a modification of the regulations. He was promised that his request would receive the most careful consideration. He did not allow the question to remain at that, however, but made representations to the British ambassador at Washington, who also appealed to the United States government to make the restrictions less stringent so that Canadian growers would be able to export potatoes across the border. Time passed and finding that no result had been arrived at, Mr. Burrell recently telegraphed Washington that the matter was urgent and asked that it be dealt with immediately.

Therefore, although Mr. Burrell has had no official communication from Washington, he is disposed to think

"PAPA WILHELM"

For instance, many could have thought of a more diplomatic jape to drop on an English governess who was seeing her German princess pupil parade for the first time in the uniform of the Death's Head Hussars than this statement:

"She will ride at the head of the first regiment that invades England!" The rudeness of the remark was met by a very bright counter from Miss Topham (whom the Kaiser came to speak of as "our English dreadnaught"); but it remains one of those things that might very well have been put differently. Most of the Kaiser's outbursts of humor—and some of his utterances as statesman—are open to the same criticism.

Let it not be assumed from this that the Kaiser of Miss Topham's book and this visualization is an altogether a disagreeable person. Far from it. Not least just now, when England is fighting him for its life and for its conceptions of civilization would Englishmen overlook his many appreciations of aspects of English country and people. More than once he has paid tribute to the beauty and attraction of the English countryside; he has a poem of Kipling framed and hung in his room; his favorite book as a boy was "Frank Fairleigh," he likes Dickens; he buys his horses in England or Ireland; he sends to London for his tea; he worships Reynolds and Gainsborough and Nelson.

MANY ENGLISH PREFERENCES.

In fact, one could fill a column with his English preferences. That Englishmen are at war so very English a foreigner is one of life's largest ironies; yet they are at war with him (and he with them) more bitterly and tragically perhaps than they yet fully realize.

The Prussian spirit peeps out everywhere if one looks at Wilhelm II closely, despite the European gloss of gentlemanliness. When Queen Alexandra and the German Empress were driven in Berlin the horses were frightened by a salute of guns. The master of the horses was presented subsequently by the Kaiser to King Edward, who already knew the official very well. "Here's the man who made such a fearful bungle (hat sich blamiert) with his horses," said the Kaiser, in presenting his humble servant.

The schoolboyish side of the Kaiser altho it may at times embarrass needlessly the solemn and deserving person, one condemns less severely. Indeed, it is possible to be pleased by some of Miss Topham's stories of the mutual mischief of the Kaiser and his daughter. One day the princess shocked her governess by making the "pop" of a champagne cork with her lips and cheeks, and then imitating the gurgling of the wine as it runs into a glass.

"Whoever taught you these unladylike accomplishments!" asked the governess.

"S-s-h! It was papa!" came the gleeful answer. "He can go it splendidly." And she gurgled again in the hope of developing by long practice a talent equal to his.

"ONINHOW SIHL ONIDIGHM"

A very pretty wedding took place at St. Anne's Parish church at 6:30 o'clock this morning when Miss Helen Wiliston, of this city, was united in marriage to Mr. Russell Ferris of St. Marys. Bishop Richardson performed the ceremony and the couple were unattended. Mr. and Mrs. Ferris left for St. John on the Steamer Victoria this morning and after spending a few days at that place will take up their residence at Grand Lake.

Mr. and Mrs. D. deL. Clements of St. John, are guests at the Queen. Mr. F. B. Carvell, M.P., of Woodstock, is a guest at the Queen. Mr. G. F. Burt of Harland, is at the Queen today. Mrs. R. Balloch of St. John, is at the Queen.

that as a result of the efforts he has made on behalf of the Canadian potato growers the restrictions may have been made less stringent.
