SOUTHERN EDUCATIONISTS IN SESSION AT LOUISVILLE

Louisville, Ky., Feb. 25—Louisville is preparing to entertain early in April what promises to be the largest and most notable educational conference ever held in the south. The occasion will be the first joint convention ever held by the Southern Educational Association and the Conference for Education in the South.

The chief purpose of the joint meeting of the two bodies will be to secure a closer co-ordination of the educational forces in the south. The Southern Educational Association embraces in its membership hundreds of teachers throughout the south, representing every branch of educational activity, from the country school to the largest colleges and universities. The annual conventions of the association are devoted to the consideration of practical problems of teaching and school management.

The Conference for Education in the south, on the other hand, is not a teachers' association for the discussion of the technique of the school room. It is a coming together of the representatives of all classes who have at heart the welfare of the country, and who believe the largest factor in the production of this welfare is the right education of all the people for the duties and responsibilities of industrial, civic, social and religious life.

The meeting of the two bodies in conjunction is expected to attract not only a vast number of educators but also a host of statesmen, editors, lawyers, physicians, farmers, preachers, merchants, manufacturers, public spirited and thoughtful men and women of all professions and from all walks of life, who will meet to discuss in a broad, practical, non-technical way the fundamental problems of education and life in their application to conditions in the south.

Mr. Donald Munro M. P. P., of Woodstock arrived last evening for the session.

HOUSE PASSED THE ADDRESS AFTER BRIEF DISCUSSION

whenever occasion arose. This matter had occupied the attention of various administrations in this province but until now the justice of the claim had never been admitted. The fact that as a result of the efforts of the government a large sum of money would be paid into the provincial treasury must be very gratifying to the people of the province, and would form another substantial reason for the continuance of that confidence which the electorate had so generously bestowed heretofore.

The satisfactory progress made in railway development during the year was but one indication of the strides which the province was making toward greatly increased prosperity. The great increase in the production of the western prairies required that the attention of those in authority must soon be given to further railway construction. The great works now in progress in the City of St. John, with the completion of the St. John Valley Railway, would supply only in a small degree the demands made by the west for transportation facilities to the markets of the Old World.

The fact that the revenues of the province were substantially the same as those of previous years, carried with it the assurance that the public service would receive proper attention and that the roads and bridges of the province, which had been so greatly improved during the few years which the present government had held office, would be carried on still further toward the stage at which the farmers and others, who were compelled to use the public highways, would be provided with road facilities which would satisfy all requirements.

PREMIER FLEMING

Hon. Mr. Fleming said that before discussing the matters referred to in the speech, he would like to congratulate the mover and seconder of the address upon the very creditable manner in which they performed their duties. The gentleman who had moved it did himself great credit, he had spoken with an ease and freedom which gave great promise for his future as a speaker. It was the premier thought, highly commendable that young men should have courage to come forward and take up the difficult tasks that are to be met with in the course of daily life. Mr. Guthrie was a young man who had been born and brought up in the country, and he had done well in the face of considerable difficulties. He had obtained an education solely through his own efforts, and had subsequently attained an honorable position in his profession as a lawyer. He (premier) was glad to see such young men come forward willing to share in the responsibilities of public life, and the fact that young men were willing to do so argued well for the future of the country. In regard to the member of Charlotte, who had so ably seconded the address, members of the House could not have failed to have been impressed with the admirable way in which the speaker had dealt with the several matters under discussion. It was a good sign when men of business qualifications, such as the seconder of the address possessed, were willing to come forward and devote their time to the services of the country. The remarks which he had made showed very clearly that he was well qualified to discuss public matters, and they would be of considerable value to the members of the House.

GOVERNMENT CHANGES.

Since the House had last prorogued there had been some changes in the administration with regard to which it might be well for him to say a few words. Two members of the government had resigned; one of them, the Hon. Mr. McLeod had been elected to represent his County at Ottawa, where the broader field of federal politics offered a splendid opportunity for a man of his attainments. The other late member of the Government the Hon. Mr. Grimmer, who was first Surveyor General and latterly Attorney General had been promoted to a seat on the bench of the province. Knowing the gentleman as he did and the value of the work which they had done on behalf of the province, he could truthfully say that their removal from provincial government was a very serious loss, and they had left for their new positions with the best wishes for success, not only of their own colleagues, but he felt sure of all the members of the Legislature. The retirement of Mr. McLeod left vacant the position of Provincial Treasurer, and in looking for a successor it had afforded him the greatest pleasure to offer the position to a representative of the great section of the people, the French Acadians, in the person of Dr. Landry. He had been glad to do this for two reasons. First his experience of five years of Dr. Landry as a colleague had shown him that he possessed to the fullest degree the necessary qualifications for the post. He was careful and cautious in his methods, and would be prudent in regard to matters requiring expenditure. He was also happy to pay the compliment to the Acadian people; a people who had shown themselves to be among the most industrious, honorable and law abiding citizens of the province.

In the new Attorney-General everyone would, the premier felt sure, readily agree that the best selection possible had been made to fill the office. Mr. Clarke's position at the bar, his prominence as a lawyer and his business abilities and reputation were such that all would concur with him in feeling that the duties of the position would be carried out in all respects in a perfectly satisfactory manner.

When he (the speaker) was called upon in 1911 to form a government, he invited Mr. Murray to become a member of the Executive without office. In this intervening period he, the premier, had learned to appreciate Mr. Murray's sound qualities, and good judgment, and that he was a man on whom dependence could be placed, and when the time arrived it was with great pleasure that he was able to offer him promotion. The Agricultural department was second in importance to none. With the new work which is being undertaken, and the new duties being performed and new plans proposed, the department was one of great activity, and it needed a man of large views and varied experience, and one on whose judgment reliance could be placed to be in control, and if in years to come we attain the position we ought to, then we will require a man who is strong and persistent in his efforts. A large increase in the staff of the Department was a very gratifying feature and its work would be probably before the House during the coming session.

Three Mighty Forces Close Linked

Have you ever noted how an audience yawns in the face of an uninspired speaker?

On the other hand, have you noted how an audience will lean forward and grasp the chair arms when the speaker reveals enthusiasm?

Enthusiasm is the buoyant expression of truth. To impart belief in anything, a man must believe it deeply himself. We call such a man an enthusiast.

This applies to the written word also --- particularly to advertisements. When the manufacturer really believes in his wares, his enthusiasm will almost inevitably find expression in Advertising. And enthusiasm will be contagious—his audience—the readers of the newspaper—will, figuratively speaking, "lean forward and listen intently."

To be convincing an advertisement must convey an unmistakable impression of enthusiasm. This it will only do when the article advertised has inherent worth.

Thus we have:

Sincerity -- Enthusiasm -- Advertising:
Three mighty forces, close-linked.

If you are doing a local business talk over your advertising problems with the Advertising Department of this newspaper. If you are doing a provincial or national business it would be well for you to have the counsel and assistance of a good advertising agency. A list of these will be furnished, without cost or obligation, by the Secretary of Canadian Press Association, Room 503, Lumsden Building, Toronto.
