

GOING MAD FROM THE TERRIFIC PAIN

Prominent Merchant Thinks His Life Was Saved By "Fruit-a-tives".

DRYSDALE, ONT., JUNE 15th, 1913.

"I am a general storekeeper at the above address, and on account of the great good I have experienced from using 'Fruit-a-tives', I recommend them to my customers. They were a great boon to me, I can tell you, for about two years ago, I was laid up in bed with vomiting and a terrific pain at the base of my skull. The pain nearly drove me mad. Doctors feared it would turn to inflammation of the brain, but I took 'Fruit-a-tives' steadily until I was cured. I have gained fifteen pounds since taking 'Fruit-a-tives', and I verily believe they saved me from a disastrous illness."

HERE'S A RIVAL OF "TIPPERARY"

From Punch

While much has been written of the songs that inspire our own brave troops on the march, little is heard of those affected by our Allies.

Happily, Mr. Punch's, special eye-witness with general headquarters in the eastern area has been enabled to send us the words of a song which, set to an old Blak air, is rendered with immense élan by the gallant Russians, as they go into battle. It is as follows:

It's a hard nut is Cracow,

It's a hard nut to crack,

But it's not so hard to crack, oh!

When once you've got the knack.

Goodbye, Przemyśl!

Farewell, Lemberg (Lwów)

It's a hard, hard nut to crack is Cracow,

But we'll soon crack it now.

By the more cultured Russian regiments, i.e., those recruited in the neighborhood of the German frontier, the last line is rendered:

But we'll crack it right off, to rhyme with Lvoff—the correct pronunciation of Lwów, according to a contemporary.

BATTLESHIPS ARE IN HOURLY DANGER

Montreal, Dec. 12—While many letters have been published giving accounts of the experiences of the British soldiers in France, little has been heard of the moving adventures through which the British navy has been passing in the North Sea, says The Journal of Commerce.

The general conception of those at home is that the navy is drawn up in lines some distance removed from the actual scene of prospective hostilities.

That such is not the case is seen by the accompanying letter from the commander of one of His Majesty's battleships, who is alone responsible for twenty-two vessels of the line.

In this letter to a friend in Montreal the writer described how his ship is in almost hourly danger from floating mines:

"I am commanding officer of this vessel. She is fitted with powerful wireless—far more so than the Mauretania. We frequently pick up messages over two thousand miles away. We also have five guns.

Our adventures have been most numerous. I was appointed here on a Saturday, only arriving in London from Canada on the preceding day, when I was ordered to —, arriving at eleven-thirty a.m. and at noon was sent away as lieutenant in charge of this vessel.

On the Monday following a mine went up close alongside of us; it fairly made the ship stagger. All on board thought she was struck. I managed to keep control of the crew and assured them all was well; they were all reserve men. Almost immediately afterwards two more mines went up, these were also quite near, too. I was very pleased when we got away from that spot.

I first signalled the admiral and asked for instructions. He replied to leave them severely alone. I did not need telling twice.

The following day, after performing various duties as ordered, the admiral came alongside and complimented me on the way I had carried out his orders.

On the next day, which was a Wednesday, we had rather an exciting experience. Five mines went up in quick succession, throwing the sea eighty to one hundred feet high and giving a most tremendous report. A British destroyer heard these and saw the water thrown up some nine miles away. She at once raced to the spot and saw us.

We had our ship disguised and before we could explain who we were, she had signalled, 'Stop instantly or I will sink you'—quite a nice surprise on a fine afternoon, considering that all his whole broadside and bridge guns were trained upon us. However, I explained who we were and told him of these mines, giving the course back for him to steer, as he naively remarked that he did not wish to be blown up on his way back.

These are just a few of the experiences. Amongst them we must include the Yarmouth raid. We were in that but the Germans certainly acted atrociously. There was nothing that we could do to have injured them. They, of course, wished to get more mines overboard, and in this they succeeded.

As, about an hour afterwards, we were steaming to the eastward with two submarines, I had signalled them to be on the lookout for mines and had all my crew lining each side of the bow and on the bridge when bang went the one close to us.

D-5, she just lifted at slightly and down she went, throwing her bows quite clear of the sea before she disappeared. There were eight men got out but only four picked up—two officers and two seamen. The lieutenant commander was drowned. We picked up his coat, also a letter floating on the water close to it.

We went on and destroyed five mines before dark, when we anchored for safety.

The day after we destroyed three more mines.

The next day was one of the most exciting we had. It was really too heavy a sea to find mines. There was a group of sweepers of ten vessels, whilst we were attached to them for wireless purposes. After they had been sweeping for nearly an hour we were alongside abreast of the two leading ships when the one nearest to us struck a mine. The sea going over her mast and giving us a great shaking.

I at once wirelessed it through and went in amongst the wreckage to pick up any survivors. Seven, all told, were picked up, one of whom died on board. Whilst we were so engaged I spotted a mine in the hollow of a sea almost alongside. I was just quick enough to put the helm hard to starboard and full speed ahead. We just cleared it by, I think, less than two feet.

I am now and have been for the last two weeks in charge of twenty-two vessels, forming protective arrangements against submarines and mines for the warships. We are all connected up with nets—quite an elaborate scheme. I am responsible for these vessels maintaining their positions; also watering and provisioning them.

It is anything but a sinecure, especially in the winter in the North Sea. I have to go from one vessel to the other, pay them their wages, see any sick persons, get them re-mocked, give all kinds of instructions as regards their positions and really a two and one thing. But I am told that it will earn my promotion so that will be satisfactory, providing we do not get blown up.

But, oh, if the Germans would only come out and let's get it over. This kind of work is most trying to the nerves. I have not had my clothes off for about six weeks. Very frequently I get wet through and your clothes dry on you."

Marriages of the Deaf

An examination has been made of the records of 4,000 marriages of the deaf, and it has been found that, while taking the marriages of deaf persons as a whole, nearly 2 per cent. of the offspring are deaf, and contrasted with less than one-tenth of 1 per cent. of deaf children as a result of the marriages of normal persons; a very favorable result is obtained if it be found that the deaf parents had a trace of previous deafness in their families. Marriages of deaf persons without deaf relatives is no more likely to result in deaf children than any marriage in the community at large, while marriages of hearing persons who have deaf relatives is just as likely to result in deaf children as a marriage of the deaf.

Prolific Cattle Tick

A male and a female tick hatched in April may by Oct. 15 give rise to 8,750,000,000 descendants, about half of which, being females, will lay about 1,500 more eggs apiece immediately or the following spring.

Take the cattleman's point of view. A thoroughly, although not exceptionally infested cow may carry several hundred thousand ticks at one time, and, during one season, may be infested by four such broods. Now, 150 ticks, after having engorged themselves for three or four days, will weigh about a pound, this representing at most entirely the weight of the blood taken from the host. Thus the helpless beast may actually lose from 200 to 500 pounds of blood in a single season.

Little wonder that thousands of Southern calves never reach maturity; that the pitiful spectacle of valuable dairy or beef animals actually starving to death in the midst of rich, nutritious pasture is not a nightmare, but a terribly frequent reality.—World's Work.

Have You That TICKLING IN THE THROAT SENSATION?

This trouble is most distressing, and caused from a cold which has settled in the throat. How many people have lost a good night's sleep by that nasty, tickling, irritating sensation in the throat? The dry, hard cough keeps you awake, and when you get up in the morning you feel as if you had had no rest at all.

What you want to cure the cold is Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. This valuable preparation is composed of the most soothing and healing expectorant herbs and barks with which is combined the virtues of the world famous Norway pine tree.

Thousands of testimonials prove that what we claim is true. All we ask you is that when you ask for Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup see that you get "Dr. Wood's," and not some no-account substitute.

Mr. Charles S. Chase, Shelburne, N.S., writes: "Coming to Nova Scotia from the State of Maine, I caught a severe cold which persisted for many weeks, and was accompanied by a bad cough and a constant throat irritation. After trying many remedies, a friend handed me part of a bottle of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. It helped me so much I bought another bottle which completely cured the cough and allayed the irritation. It is certainly the best cough medicine I have ever tried."

The price of "Dr. Wood's" is 25c and 50c.

STRONGEST LINIMENT IN 100 YEARS BELT FOR EITHER MAN OR BEAST

Nothing for Family Use Can Compare With It.

RUB ON NERVILINE

When you have been exposed to wet and cold and your muscles are full of pain, nerves are jumping with neuralgia, then you should have ready at hand a bottle of Nerviline. It robs pain of its terrors, gives relief to all suffering, brings ease and comfort wherever used.

No care or expense has been spared to secure for Nerviline the purest and best materials. It is prepared with a single aim to restore the sick to health. This cannot be said of the preparation that an unscrupulous dealer may ask you to accept instead of Nerviline, so we warn you it is the extra profit made on inferior goods that tempts the substitutor. Of him beware.

Get Nerviline when you ask for it, then you are sure of a remedy that will cure all aches, strains, swellings, and the pains of rheumatism, neuralgia and lumbago.

In the last hundred years no liniment has been produced that can compare with Nerviline in strength, in penetrating power, or in curative ability.

For nearly forty years it has been Canada's household remedy and mothers will do well to follow the advice of Mrs. Jessie Beggs of Stella, P. O. Ont., who says:

"Very frequently there are ailments in the family that can be cut short if Nerviline is handy. When my children come in from play with a cough or bad cold, I rub Nerviline on their chests, and they are well almost at once. Nerviline is fine for earache, tooth ache, chest colds, lumbago stiffness, rheumatism or neuralgia. In fact there is scarcely a pain or ache in man or beast it won't cure quickly."

The large 50c. family size bottle is the most economical; trial size 25c. at all dealers, or the Catarhoxone Co. Kingston, Canada.
