Was Troubled With Choking Spells and Shortness of Breath.

When the heart becomes affected, there ensues a feeling of a choking sensation, a shortness of breath, palpitation, throbbing, irregular beating, smothering sensation, and dizziness and a weak, sinking, all-gone feeling of oppression and anxiety.

Many men and women drag along with weary step, and become worn out and haggard, when otherwise they could be strong and healthy if they would only pay some attention to the first signs of heart or nerve trouble. On the first sign of the heart becoming weakened or the nerves unstrung Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills should be given a fair trial and you will find that they will soon correct both these organs.

Mr. James Leard, Tryon, P.E.I., writes: "Just a few lines to let you know what Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have done for me. I had choking spells, and was troubled with weakness of the heart and shortness of breath. I tried three doctors but they all failed. A neighbor recommended me to try your pills, so I got a box and they helped me so much I have taken six boxes. I highly recommend them to all who are troubled with their heart and nerves. I was not able to do any work for over two years; now I can do quite a bit."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50 cents per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

OFFICER WRITES OF CHILEAN FIGHT

London, Dec. 16—The Times prints a letter from an officer aboard the Glasgow, dated November 9th, giving a vivid narrative of the naval fight off the Chilean coast. Describing the search of the British squadron up and down the coast for the enemy's warships, the writer says that although they could not locate them.

"We heard their secret and friendly wireless stations talking in code." Coming to the battle itself, the writer, describing the end of the fighting, says:

"The Good Hope held more and more out of line to the eastward, turning forward when suddenly an explosion occurred about her after funnel, blowing up debris and flames and the sparks some two hundred feet high, and so quite distinctly as to be heard from our deck. Some of our men thought it was the enemy's flagship, so near had she drifted toward them. Soon after we could see nothing of her and she never fired her guns again."

"The enemy now dropped slowly back and the armored cruisers directed their fire at us. We continued alone to reply, when possible, now at about 4,500 yards. Everybody was remarkably cool as if at practice. I cannot understand the miracle of our deliverance. None will ever. We were struck at the water line by in all five shells out of about six hundred, directed at us, but, strangely enough, not at vulnerable places, our coal sailing us on three occasions, as we are not armored and should not be in the battle line against an armored cruiser."

"The Monmouth, no longer firing, steamed off to the northwest and we stood by her, signalling. She fell off to the northeast when we asked her if she could steer northwest. She replied:

"I want to get stern to the sea as I am taking water badly forward."

"We followed close by. Shortly after I was on the flying bridge when I spotted the enemy approaching in a line abreast. They were then about six hundred yards off or so in the rain mist and darkness."

"I told the captain, who gave the orders to bring them astern and put on full speed so we could draw out of range. We went in a west-northwesterly direction, coming gradually around to the south, steering for the Magellan Straits in order to warn our battleship Canopus, who was coming up from the southward to turn and run. She was near two hundred miles away also, and we were some hours getting through to her because of continual jamming by the enemy's wireless. It would have been a heedless and useless sacrifice of our ship and our 371 odd lives to have remained and engaged the enemy's ships again. Luckily our engines and our boilers were intact and we were able to push through the heavy sea at 24 knots and get away to give an account of the action and warn the Canopus who, although she no doubt would have fought gallantly, could hardly hope to be successful in a fight with five ships."

SUBMARINE PAID MOST DARING OF EXPLOITS

New York, Dec. 16—Commenting on the daring feat of the British submarine B-11, which yesterday dived until five rows of mines in the Dardanelles and destroyed the Turkish Mesudieh, the naval correspondent of The New York Herald this morning says:

"The exploit of submarine B-11 is quite the most brilliant naval feat of the war so far, and will stand out as a signal demonstration of how this style of craft can get at battleships despite mines, guns and careful watching."

The New York World this morning says editorially:

"No more daring feat of seamanship was ever done in war than that of Lieutenant Commander Holbrook and the crew of the British submarine B-11 in blowing up the Mesudieh in the Dardanelles."

"The fortunes of war may not be much affected by the sinking of the old Mesudieh, but the British public will gladly hail the exploit as proof that British seamen still know how to dice with death at heavy odds for the prize of victory."

"Submarine honors no longer rest exclusively with the German U-9; in the B-11 she finds a splendid rival."

OLD CLASSES ARE USEFUL.

London, Dec. 16—The Chronicle's naval correspondent on the feat of the B-11, says:

"So long as the submarine could use her periscope, she would be able to direct her course by observation, but she had to remain submerged for long periods."

"We have to think of this handful of officers and men, perhaps twenty in number, being submerged on one occasion in their narrow quarters in parts of which a man could not stand upright for a period of nine hours and probably during a large part of that time blind through the necessity of withdrawing the submarine's periscope."

"The comparatively small size of the boat shows that our older classes are still quite effective, and would indeed be better fitted for work in narrow waters than large boats. It is now generally recognized that two classes of submarines are required, one of them for local use, as in the Dardanelles, and the other for long-range work."

"The Turks have now had fair warning of what may happen to their building navy in the Dardanelles, which, with their German guns, are not a barrier to daring British submarines."

The Times' naval correspondent writes:

"The effect of striking this blow at the Ottoman navy will be widely felt. It will not only impress the mind of the Turk, but it shows what our underwater craft, handled by adventurous and undaunted officers might achieve if German ships provided an equally fair target."

WOMAN'S BEST MEDICINE

Mrs. Kelly Advises all Women to Take "Fruit-a-Tives"

HAGERSVILLE, ONT., AUG. 26th, 1913.

"I can highly recommend 'Fruit-a-Tives' because they did me an awful lot of good and I cannot speak too highly about them. About four years ago, I commenced taking 'Fruit-a-Tives' for a general break-down and they did me a world of good. We bought a good many dollar's worth, but it was money well spent because they did all that you claim for them. Their action is so pleasant, compared with other laxatives, that I found only pleasure, as well as health, in taking them. They seemed to me to be particularly suited to women, on account of their mild and gentle action, and I trust that some other women may start taking 'Fruit-a-Tives' after reading my letter, and if they do, I am satisfied the results will be the same as in my own case."

connection with this fine feat of seamanship and courage is the negotiation of a mine field, five rows of which Lieut. Holbrook passed under in taking the B-11 to the place where she found her quarry.

"Underwater navigation of the Dardanelles is made most perilous and difficult by swift currents which pass through the Straits, and, straining various projecting points are turned into eddies and whirlpools."

FEW RELISH THE TASK.

"Under such conditions, to take a submarine, blind as she is, and feel the way along the bottom of the sea, evading the mooring of mines, is a task which few would care to attempt."

The Daily Telegraph's naval correspondent says:

"Why cannot such exploits be carried out in the Elbe, it may be asked?"

"There is an all-important difference. As the admiralty chart shows, right up to the Dardanelles there are thirty to forty fathoms of water. The Elbe river is very tortuous and very shallow. The North Sea sits upon the German side. We have the deep
