GEN. BOOTH WORLD'S GREATEST EVANGELIST DEAD

don, General Booth directed its affairs.

General Booth established "The War Cry" as a weekly gazette of the organization. The paper is now published in more than 20 languages and has a total weekly circulation exceeding 1,200,000. The army maintains Social Relief Institutions in various parts of the world, under the charge of nearly 3,000 officers and employees. About 7000 fallen women annually pass through the 116 rescue homes, and, according to the army's reports about 85 per cent of those are permanently restored to lives of virtue. There are 132 slum settlements in the slum districts of the great cities. The number of annual conversions in connection with the spiritual work is reported as averaging from 200,000 to 250,000 during the past ten years making a total of over 2,000,000 of whom not less than 200,000 were converted from lives of drunkenness.

In 1890 General Booth published a volume entitled "Darkest London," containing a scheme for the enlightenment and industrial support of the lower classes. The work attracted world-wide attention and was much commented upon. In its chief features the scheme of General Booth received the endorsement of many high churchmen. During the latter years of her life Queen Victoria made an annual contribution to the Salvation Army and it is understood that King Edward has also given the organization substantial encouragement. In 1903 the City of London Corporation conferred the freedom of the city on General Booth and also voted a considerable sum to the funds of the Salvation Army.

In the early career of the Salvation Army General Booth and his followers were the objects of much ridicule. The street meetings and the methods of the army in general were looked upon as sensational and often the forces were hard pressed by persecution or prejudice. But the organization persevered and when its aims and work became better known public sentiment underwent a change.

In his work General Booth was supported by his family. Mrs. Booth shared largely in all her husband's efforts and further explained their views in a number of written works. She died of cancer in 1890, after several years of painful illness. Until 1896 the general's chief-of-staff was his eldest son, Ballington Booth. In that year, however, a difference occurred between the two, due to the order of General Booth transferring his son from the command of the organization in the United States. Ballington Booth desired to remain in America. The difference in views resulted in the withdrawal of Ballington Booth and his wife from the Salvation Army and the inauguration of the Volunteers of America.

The direction of affairs in the United States was transferred to Commander Eva Booth, fourth daughter of the general. The second daughter, the wife of Booth-Tucker, was killed in a railroad wreck several years ago. She and her husband for a long time supervised the work of the army in India and later were transferred to the United States. A third daughter of General Booth for a long time conducted mass meetings in the chief English cities, so that each member of the family was actively engaged in some branch of the army's service.

General Booth made several trips around the world, visiting America, Australia and other parts and everywhere he was well received. On two occasions he visited Fredericton, addressing meetings in the Opera House. London, Aug. 21—Out of respect for the memory of the late General William Booth, commander-in-chief of the Salvation Army, who died at Hadley Wood, a suburb of London, last night, all the flags floating on Salvation Army headquarters throughout the country have been half masted. Despatches were received from kings and other royalties cabled from countries as diverse as Patagonia and Lapland at the headquarters today. The lying in state of the late general is to take place at the Salvation Congress Hall, Clapton, in the northwest of London, where the body will remain for a week. The funeral arrangements have not yet been completed.

On the day of the funeral 10,000 Salvation Army people will participate in a mass service in a large hall, which has not yet been decided on. The hiring of the Crystal Palace is in contemplation for the purpose. The name of the successor of General Booth as commander-in-chief of the Salvation Army will probably be announced in a day or two without ceremony according to the late general's wish. While he disliked publicity, he welcomed anything that kept the army in the public eye. A melodramatic notice posted in front of the Salvation Army headquarters says: "The General has laid down his sword, God is with us."

Maj. Perry of the Salvation Army said this morning that messages were coming from highland low, rich and poor, from all parts of the world.

DOMINION IRON CORPORATION FEATURE OF THE MARKET

(By direct private wires to J. C. Mackintosh & Co., Bankers and Brokers, 604 Queen Street, Fredericton, N. B.)

New York, Aug. 21—The market opening would have been more or less devoid of interest but for the expectation that Copper securities would continue their advance. Amal Copper was fractionally lower, in opening sale of 1900 shares. Anaconda was also 1/4 off. American Smelting, however furnished interest with an opening gain of 1/4 which speedily advanced to 1/2. American Car and Foundry showed strength with gain of 1/4 a point which on next sale increased to 1/2. Stock like Reading and Union Pacific were only nominally changed from closing.

STANDING OF VOTES IN LIBRARY CONTEST

The fourth weekly count of the votes in the Library Contest was taken last night. The Brunswick Street Baptist Church and the Victoria Hospital are still among the leaders but advanced gains have been made by the Presbyterian Sunday School and the latter is now recognized as a serious contender. A new name was entered in this count, viz, the Algonquin Club which polled over fifteen thousand votes and ranks in fourth position. The Parish Church Lending Library made material gains as did the Methodist Church. Many of those entered have not increased their count greatly but as the contest has four more months to run it is felt that they may be heard from before the close. The Library will be on exhibition at Stanger and Harrison's tailor store this week and will be changed about from time to time so that each merchant will have it on exhibition at his establishment.

Watch The Mail which has the exclusive right of announcing the result of the standing in the Contest. The standing will be published every week in these columns.

The Mail's Plaster Rock correspondent contributes the following:—The annual Sunday School Picnic of the St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Plaster Rock, was held on Aug. 16th, at Maple View, a distance of about five miles from Plaster Rock. By all who attend this picnic, it is reported to be one of the most enjoyable affairs ever held in this vicinity. The sporting program proved to be particularly attractive, having many features which had not before been introduced into the picnic here.

The Intermediates Boys' Jumping was particularly well contested, Percy Clark and Harry Sadler being but one notch behind the winner's limit.

During the afternoon ice cream and after supper the party, numbering between 75 and 100 started again for Plaster Rock arriving about 8.30 p. m., the boys and girls declaring that the "Picnic" was in full swing until they left the wagons.

Mr. and Mrs. Hedley G. Maxon of Portland, Oregon, who have been visiting friends here for some weeks return home this evening. They will travel via Providence, R. I., and New York City, completing their journey by C.P.R.
