THE STURDY FRUIT.

An Italian who kept a fruit stand was much annoyed by possible customers who made a practise of handling the fruit and pinching it, thereby leaving it softened and often spoiled. Exasperated beyond endurance, he finally put up a sign which read: "If you must pincha da fruit, pincha da cocoanut."—Tit-Bits.

NEWS FORECAST FOR COMING WEEK

Washington, D.C., May 16—The peace negotiations and other possible developments of the Mexican situation promise to monopolize public attention during the coming week.

Pennsylvania's spirited campaign for the nomination of candidates for United States senator, representatives in congress and governor and other state officers will end with the primary election Tuesday. The dominant feature of the campaign is the fight of United States Senator Boies Penrose for re-nomination.

Also of interest to the politicians will be the meeting of the Democratic convention of South Carolina, which is to assemble Wednesday in Columbia. The convention is expected to take action with reference to changes in the primary system, which will virtually decide whether Wilson D. Smith is to be re-elected to the United States senate or succeeded by Governor Cole L. Blease.

The English amateur champion, the principal golfing event in Europe, is to begin Monday on the links at Sandwich. The tournament will be followed with much interest on this side of the Atlantic because of the fact that the participants will include Francis Ouimet, open golf champion of the United States; Jerome D. Travers, the national amateur champion and several other noted American players.

The trial of Dr. W. T. Elam, physician of St. Joseph, Mo., charged with the murder of W. Putnam Cramer, a Chicago advertising solicitor, in a room in a Kansas City hotel last November, is scheduled to begin in Kansas City Monday.

The 126th General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, commonly known as the Presbyterian Church, North, will begin in Chicago Thursday. On the same day the general assembly of the Southern Presbyterians will meet in Kansas City and that of the Reformed Presbyterians in Cincinnati.

Other gatherings of the week will include the International Good Roads Congress in Montreal, the annual convention of the Interstate Cotton Seed Crushers' Association in New Orleans, the annual congress of the National Society, Sons of the American Revolution, in Syracuse, and the annual meeting of the American Federation of Arts in Chicago.

WILLING TO WAIT

Brown was a city man. He was just about as familiar with the gunning game as a blacksmith is with the mechanism of an eight-day clock. Brown was invited to the country home of a friend who is a great for true sport last fall and reached there just as a party was starting out for quail. He was given a gun and joined the jubilee.

Walking along with his host, Brown saw a quail running along the ground. Instantly his gun went to his shoulder.

"Hold on there! Hold on there!" cried the host in a restraining voice, "Don't shoot that bird while it is running!"

"I am not going so," was the prompt reply of Brown. "I'll wait until he stops, all right!"—Philadelphia Telegraph.

STRAWBERRY SHORTCAKE

Is there any one who does not like strawberry shortcake—not the sweet, sold under that name in restaurants, cake and strawberry mixture often but the home made variety, built up of rich, short, biscuit batter, rip berries and plenty of whipped cream?

Anyone who can make a good baking shortcake that can be served in many ways. It may be a foamy affair, composed of two layers, each layer having golden brown crispy crusts; or it may look equally tempting, but be made from a single, thicker loaf, which has been split in the middle after being baked, so there is much less crust. A shortcake may be made from individual serving, the latter being cut with a biscuit cutter and baked in small round shapes.

The batter may be baked in square sheets and the finished "cake" cut in slices, instead of in pie-shaped pieces. These have the strawberry filling more evenly distributed than the round loaves.

Strawberry shortcake is an inexpensive dessert, even when strawberries first come into market and are selling at high price. A single box used in the manner is sufficient for six persons.

The standard recipe for the biscuit dough bread to be used as the foundation of the shortcake is this: three level teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one-half a teaspoonful of salt, three tablespoonfuls of shortening, one cup of milk or of milk and water—half and half. The more quickly and deftly the flour is handled, the lighter will be the biscuit. Sift the flour with the salt and baking powder. Then, with the tops of the fingers, or with a spatula, rub in the shortening lightly. Do not rub it too fine. Keep a rather coarse texture. Then quickly stir in the milk, and unless you are in a hurry let the batter stand for five minutes. In this way the flour has a chance to swell and the batter can be more easily handled. Put it on a floured board, then spread or roll into shape. If making biscuits and want them to brown well, brush them over lightly with milk. Have the oven very hot when your shortcake goes in. If a slightly sweet saring bread is desired, you may add a level tablespoonful of sugar to the flour.

While the bread part is cooking, mash a box of strawberries. They need not be large sized berries. Squeeze them to taste, and soon as the bread comes out of the oven put in the layer of berries, and if you wish to reserve a few whole ones for the top, dot these in the whipped cream which you spread on top of the cake. Many people like whipped cream with strawberry shortcake, but some people prefer the plain cream.

The dough mixture as described above may be used for shortcake of any kind—apple, peach or rhubarb.

DO CORNS LEAD TO CANCER

As yet this has not been proved, but interested parties will find nothing better for corns than Putnam's Corn Extractor, 25c. at all dealers.

NO WONDER.

The difficulty of foreigners in mastering the English language is made twice as hard, possibly four times as hard, by the increasing use of slang by the American people. Such was the case of a Hindu girl, whom Gardner people have been teaching the English language.

She had been an apt student and her interest was such as if she heard a phrase or expression that seemed strange to her she would immediately look it up in her "Book of Phrases and Idioms."

One day her benefactor, attracted by her industrious perusal of the book and noticing the disappointed expression on her face each time she finished, ventured to ask why.

The little Hindu girl declared the English language a puzzle to her. She had looked for an English phrase for so long and it was not to be found.

"Well, what is the phrase?" she was questioned.

Her reply was startling to say the least.

"For the love of Mike," she answered.—Augusta Journal.

KNEW ALL ABOUT COURT.

Some time ago Uncle Rastus made the mistake of rambling around too long in the moonlight and on the following day he was arrested and haled into court on a charge of having appropriated a handful of fowl from a neighboring chicken roost.

"Just take the stand a minute, Uncle Rastus," severely observed the judge. "I want to ask you a question."

"Yessah, Jedge! Yessah!" responded Uncle Rastus, obediently shuffling forward.

"I want to impress on your mind," said the judge, "that you are in a court of law. Do you fully realize what a court is?"

"Yessah, Jedge! Yessah!" replied Uncle Rastus with an air of assurance. "A co't am a place where dey dispenses wid justice."—Philadelphia Telegraph.

The Gold Dust Twins' Philosophy

THE floors and doors appear to wait until the dust germs congregate; the housewife hails each dawning day with grim and harrowing dismay. Says she: "My work will NEVER end; o'er dusty stretches I must bend, until, with aching back and hands I finish what the day demands."

work and the endless doors, until when Hubby saw them, too, reflections said: "Why, howdy-do!"

"The Gold Dust Twins," said she, "I find, help leave the woes of dust behind. Each mark of sticky hands on doors, each tread of muddy feet on floors, all fade before the slightest touch of Gold Dust, and the work is such that, when the woodwork has been done, I find said work was only fun." This line of reasoning must show that those who've tried it OUGHT to know. If you, in one day's duties, find that there's a Grouch in ev'ry Grind, invite the Gold Dust Twins to share such tasks as tire and fret and wear.

Then Mrs. Jones, one afternoon, dropped in, at time most opportune. An optimist, she knew the wiles of household work—its sighs and smiles. She told of how she polished floors and woodwork and the endless doors, until when Hubby saw them, too, reflections said: "Why, howdy-do!"
