Notice

Fredericton, N. B.

April 3, 1914.

Whereas, the Building Laborers Union have made a demand for an increase of twenty five cents a day in their pay on and after the 1st day of May 1914, making a wage of $2.25 a day. Any feeling that the demand is a reasonable one, as we consider the wages of the majority of working people in this City are not in proportion to the cost of living, and that the amount asked for by the Building Laborers is as low as a man should be asked to work for.

Therefore Resolved: That we the Fredericton Labor Council endorse the action of the Building Laborers and will render them any assistance in our power.

HOW BORDEN GOVERNMENT SERVES THE INTERESTS

Finance Minister White Has Always been the Man Friday of the Privileged Classes ---Mr. Turiff Would Help the Manufacturers by Making the Farmers Prosperous

Ottawa, April 15—All his life Hon. W. T. White, minister of finance in the Borden government, has been the servant of the Big Interests. From the time when he entered as a young man into the employ of large corporate concerns he has been the Man Friday of the privileged classes. So long as Mr. White served them in his private capacity and placed his talents at their disposal for a stated remuneration, little exception could be taken to his course. But when Mr. W. T. White, manager of trust companies and other concerns, became Hon. W. T. White, custodian of the public treasury of the people of Canada, his responsibilities became far more extensive and his obligations were transferred to a larger and more cosmopolitan clientele. Mr. White became the trusted servant of his country and its citizenship. His efforts should have been transferred wholeheartedly and unreservedly to the advancement of the general public welfare.

How has Hon. W. T. White carried out his great trust? He has had grave and serious responsibilities. Synchronizing with the advent of the Borden government the period of good times and prosperity which characterized the progress and development of Canada under the Laurier regime, came suddenly to an end. Money stringency, increased cost of living, unemployment and the keen and bitter life of hard times came upon the Dominion. Mr. White argues that the Borden government was not to blame for this. He ascribes it all to the phenomena of recurring economic cycles—whatever that may actually mean—and talked learnedly about them. His budget speech was full of explanations, and apologies.

But progressive and virile Canadians, eager for the well-being of the country and its citizenship, anxious to see early betterment of conditions, keen for Canada to renew her onward march on the Laurier lines of progress and prosperity, expected more than explanations and apologies from the man who had been entrusted with the economic reins. They looked, Canadian-like, for action. They looked for the enunciation of a strong progressive policy along lines of betterment by a man whose talents and energies were presumably consecrated, for the time being to their service.

MISPLACED CONFIDENCE.

The confidence of Canadians has been misplaced. Hon. W. T. White, minister of finance, is still the Man Friday of the privileged Big Interests. His thought is still for them. His endeavor is still for their advantage. His concern is still for their aggrandisement. Toward the common people, the hewers of wood and drawers of water, the working Canadians, he evinces no responsibility and no concern. He makes no move to help them. He enunciates no legislation to better their condition. He has no inspiring message to encourage them to renewed endeavor. Hon. Mr. White still serves exclusively the protected and privileged classes. He is a manufacturers' budget.

Liberalism is not demagoguism. Canada is a cosmopolitan country, and Canadians are a cosmopolitan people. Mr. White has failed to live up to the high possibilities of his position as minister of finance, not because he has served the manufacturers but because he has served the manufacturers only. A minister of finance who faithfully served the public interests in this time of economic crisis would have devoted his efforts to the betterment of all. He would have legislated for the farmer and the mechanic as earnestly and as faithfully as he legislated for the manufacturer. He would have known only the national weal. He would have "played no favorites."

Canada is a young country. "Her future is before her." And it is essential to her continued development and prosperity that her diversified and cosmopolitan citizenship shall be linked together in cooperative camaraderie, free from the class distinctions and sectional differences which have proved the centuries—old drag upon the progress of the old world. The farmer can best prosper working with—and not against—his manufacturing fellow-citizen. The artisan can make most progress when he advances hand-in-hand with the yeoman. "Working-together" must be the key-note of Canada's national shipbooth.

Mr. J. G. Turiff, the out-spoken Liberal from the new western province of Saskatchewan, pointed out to parliament where Mr. White had erred in seeking to serve one class at the expense of the others.

"The way to help the manufacturers," Mr. Turiff told Mr. White, "is to do all that we can to make prosperous the farmers and other citizens of Canada. Put the farmer in a position to get value for his product and he will keep the factories busy. But so long as you keep him from getting value so long will you keep him poor and the factories will run on half-time while the manufacturers come to the minister of finance for more protection. You cannot remove depression by increasing the burdens on the people by means of tariffs. If you want to help the manufacturer, then put money in the pockets of the people and the manufacturer will have a rich market at home."

It was a realization of the sound economic good sense and splendid national results resultant from the practise of this doctrine of national cooperation and national camaraderie which enabled the Liberal regime under Sir Wilfrid Laurier to be one notable for prosperity and good times. Canada must return to such principles as if she is to come again into her own and renew her onward march along lines of progress and prosperity.

COST OF LIVING STILL SOARS.

Although Hon. W. T. White ignored the high cost of living problem in his budget statement, except in so far perhaps, as to give it another boost by increasing prices to the consumer by raising the tariff on the raw materials of manufacture, the public unfortunately, cannot ignore the fact that the cost of living is still going up. The March statement of the labor department, giving the index number of wholesale prices, shows that there has been another increase in the cost of living during the month. The index number now stands at 136.7 as compared with 136.1 in February and 136.0 in March of last year. The most important increases occurred in grains and fodder, animals and meat, canned salmon, vegetables, flour and oat meal. The Packers, the Cannars and the Millers along whom Mr. White was so solicitous, thus keep their protection for the consumer there is no consideration.

HOLIDAYING IN VIRGINIA.

Premier Borden, Colonel the Hon. Sam Hughes and Hon. Martin Burrell, the minister of agriculture are spending the Easter holidays in New York and Virginia. The problems and cares of government are laid aside while the care-free ministers have "truck and trade with the Yankees." During their absence a sub-committee of the cabinet will prepare the brief of the Canadian Northern aid proposals. When parliament re-assembles after Easter these proposals will be laid before the Conservative caucus for pro forma endorsement. Then they will be presented to parliament and probably put through under closure. Thus is the public served and the cause of good government goes on.

ANTISEPTICS IN AUSTRALIAN BLUE GUM PROVE A CURE FOR BRONCHIAL CATARRH

Bad Cold in the Head, Throat Weakness and Catarrh Cured Quickly

MEDICATED AIR A MARVEL!

Catarrhazone is far superior to any internal medicine.

Its relief is almost instantaneous—just takes long enough to breathe its healing vapor into the lungs to give wonderful soothing relief.

Catarrhazone goes right to the tiniest cells in the lungs, carrying healing, soothing balsams to the places that are tainted with Catarrhal inflammation. A sneezing cold is cured in ten minutes—throat is healed and restored in an hour or two—chronic bronchitis is soothed away and quickly disappears—catarrh of long standing is invariably cured because Catarrhazone kills the germs that cause the trouble.

As a cure for Asthma and a preventive of Grippe, every doctor is delighted with Catarrhazone. One eminent throat specialist says if Catarrhazone is used two or three times each day you will never suffer from any disease of the head, throat, nose or lungs. This is good news to many of our require a safe, sure and permanent cure for their colds and winter ills. Every good druggist sells Catarrhazone, large outfit, $1.00; small size 50c; trial size, 25c.

TO PROHIBIT THE IMPORTATION OF PLUMAGE

(Montreal Herald.)

In the House of Commons on Monday evening of last week, the Hon. W. T. White, minister of finance, announced that the government had decided to prohibit the entry of egret plumage into Canada. Under section 1212 of the tariff statement egret plumes, egret feathers, egret feathers and the skin or plumage of wild birds are prohibited for importation after the first of January, 1915. The prohibition does not apply to ostrich feathers, the feathers of the English pheasant or Indian peacock, the plumage of game birds or birds imported alive or to specimens for museums or educational purposes.

In this concession to humanity the government has followed the example of the United States, where a similar law is in force. The passage of these plumage bills is an instance of the efficacy of repeated agitation in a worthy cause. It is a good many years since humanitarian societies first began to direct public attention to the cruelty of egret hunting. The coveted beauty of the egret, which is a graceful species of white heron found in Florida and other places in the south, lies in the long silky filaments which form a flowing train from the bird's back. This beautiful snowy plumage is at its best in the mating and brooding season, and the hunters do their ghastly work when the parent birds can be taken because they will not go far from the nests of their young. The bird is either slaughtered or the plumage is so roughly torn away that the victim of the operation dies and the little nestlings are left to starve to death.

It has taken years and many repeated efforts to bring the facts home to the public understanding in order to gain legislation to prevent a traffic that cannot be carried on without cruelty.

A plumage bill is also being brought forward in England, and in support of this a correspondent of The London Spectator sends an extract from Browning's "The Lady and the Painter."

He—What clings, Half-savage-like about your hat She—Ah, do they please you? Wild-bird-wings! Next season—Paris prints assert— We must go feathered to the skirt. My modiste keeps on the alert.

He—Dare I speak plainly? She—Oh, I trust!

He—Then, Lady Blanche, it less would move In heart and soul of me disgust Did you strip off those spoils you wear, And stand—for thanks, not shillings—bare.

To help her like my model there You—clothed with murder of His best Of harmless beings—stand the test!

What is it you know! She—That you jest!

Women have been blamed for encouraging cruelty by wearing the egret feathers and paying high prices for them, and their certainly is a share of the responsibility. Queen Alexandra and other members of the royal family long ago refused to wear the plumage of the egret and this tended to restrict their use in the highest circles. But the beauty of the snowy plumage and the fact that their price kept them exclusive have continued to make egret feathers fashionable. Women who wore them refused, like Browning's Lady, to take the question of their obtaining seriously; their imagination failed to picture the grisly affects of the hunters' raid upon the colonies of the original wearers of the lovely plumage.

Other women, with means to purchase the desire of their eyes, simply gave the matter no thought at all; or, if they did, reflected that since the egret feathers were there, if they did not buy them some one else would. This is not a very conscientious or conclusive method of reasoning, but it places the blame, in the case of egret hunting, where it primarily belongs, at the door of those who try to make commercial profit by it. The supply oftentimes creates the demand, and for this reason the matter is one which rightly comes within the scope of legislation.

Starchy Food Necessary For Energy

But many persons cannot digest starch as found in ordinary food—hot biscuit, potatoes, white bread, etc.

In making

Grape-Nuts

FOOD from wheat and barley, the starch part of the grains, needed for body energy, is so thoroughly dextrinized by long baking [partially pre-digested] that the time of digestion is reduced—generally to about one hour.
