MR. SAMPSON DESCRIBES
STIRRING SCENES IN ENGLAND

thought we will return to London on Saturday and await events as to sailing from Glasgow next week.

FREDERICTORIANS DOING WELL

Our Fredericton party is standing together well, and while anxious respecting date of sailing, all are in good health and making best of rumors respecting risk of ocean transportation. Several of the lady teachers have left the party and have gone as nurses to the war. A few have accepted employment in the London schools, and these began work yesterday as the controlling powers shortened the city holidays on account of the war—whatever that signifies.

AT STRATFORD-ON-AVON

Shakespearean lectures, conferences and theatres, form their appointments each day our stay in Stratford-on-avon this week, so every moment is filled when we undertake sight-seeing in addition. We are guests at all these functions, and yesterday we were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Fowler at a garden party in their beautiful grounds. All were made to feel at home immediately, and the Mayor of the city welcomed us. Mr. Fowler was most hearty in his kind words about Mr. F. B. Benson, well known as the manager and actor of Shakespearean plays just captured the Canadians in a brilliant address.

Chas. A. Sampson.

CZAR READY TO GIVE AID TO ALLIES

London, Aug. 18—All the news from the land frontiers is good. It is true there has been no collision between the main armies as yet, and the preliminary movements settle nothing, but we should be fairly contented about the question of the land forces of the allies.

When the Russian advance begins it will gather weight certainly and possibly velocity as it proceeds. The resulting momentum will tell its tale in history of the campaign.

lutely nothing, from her superior Germany has gained nothing, absolute readiness. Neither has Austria.

STRONG ENOUGH NOW

Russia has completed her preparations without any interference on the part of the enemy, and though not so strong as she will be in a week or two, she is quite strong to make herself exceedingly unpleasant. Austria, with the Serbian army harassing her in the south with her detachments on the Rhine and with Italy growing daily more excited is not in a position to second Germany with all her forces.

This is the situation which Moltke always foresaw in the old days, and it prevented him from taking sanguine views of the assistance which Austria could render. No doubt the main Austrian army is in Galicia or within hail of it, but it is a most serious disadvantage that such a part of the Austro-Hungarian forces should be frittered away upon secondary operations.

The fact that the Russian offense has begun before the German armies in the west have done anything, is of capital importance and knocks the bottom out of the German planing by the German armies can relieve the situation, which will otherwise grow worse daily. With every week that passes, Russia will be able to do more.

SITUATION MORE FAVORABLE

The situation of the allies is more favorable. The attempt of the first and fourth German cavalry divisions to hustle the Belgian army met with marked failure. We must watch for a renewed effort to throw von Emmich's army across the river, but if this is the parallel battle so hateful to the German strategist, and to endeavor with heads down to burst through the living barriers on the Meuse between Verdun and Namur.

There cannot well be more than thirteen or fourteen German army corps (480,000 to 560,000) available for this operation. Of these, two, at least, must be left to face the Belgians on the Meuse, and there are two corps which have been severely hammered and probably are not yet reconstituted. With this mess the French-Belgians ought to be able to deal irrespective of any other help.

If the Germans remain long quiescent and on the defensive the allies will advance in search of them. There is no sign or word of German advance, but in the situation in which the main German mass finds itself there is nothing to be done but to call up every man and attack the enemy with the utmost energy and determination.

The French offensive campaign in Lorraine should occupy the attention of the German's First and the Bavarian's Fourteenth and Twenty-Fourth Corps and unless it is resisted in strength serious consequences for the Germans may supervene. Much of the weakness of the German position will disappear if bold offensive tactics break through the line of the allies upon the Meuse. There is good hope that the German attack may be successfully resisted.

DON'T USE THE KNIFE

That's the barbarous way of treating corns—dangerous too—any corn can be removed painlessly by Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor in twenty-four hours. Use only Putnam's Extractor, 25c. at all dealers.

ADMIRALS ALL

Eltham, Grenville, Raleigh, Drake, Here's to the bold and free! Benbow, Collingwood, Byron, Blake, Hail to the Kings of the Sea! Admirals all, for England's sake, Honor be yours and fame! And honor, as long as the waves shall break, To Nelson's peerless name!

Etsex was fretting in Cadiz Bay, With the galleons fair in sight; Howard at last, must give him his way,

And the word was passed to fight. Never was schoolboy gayer than he Since holihoys first began; He tossed his bonnet to wind and sea And under the guns he ran.

Drake nor devil nor Spaniard feared, Their cities he put to sack; He sang his Catholic Majesty's beard,

And harried his ships to wrack. He was playing at Plymouth a 'rubber of bowls

When the great Armada came; But he said, "They must wait their turn, poor souls," And he stopped and finished the game.

Fifteen sail were the Dutchmen bold, Duncan he had but two; But he anchored them fast where the Texel shoaled

And his colors aloft he flew. "I've taken the depth to a fathom" he cried,

"And I'll sink with a right good-will. "For I know when we're all of us under the tide. My flag will be fluttering still."

Splinters were flying above, below, When Nelson sailed the sound; "Mark you, I wouldn't be elsewhere now,"

Said he, "for a thousand pound!" The Admiral's signal bade him fly, But he wickedly wagged his head; He clapped the glass to his sightless eye.

And, "I'm damned if I see it," he said.

Admirals all, they said their say, (The echoes are ringing still); Admirals all, they went their way To the haven under the bill. But they left us a kingdom none can take.

The realm of the circling sea, To be ruled by the rightful sons of Blake

And the Rodneys yet to be.

Admirals all, for England's sake, Honor be yours and fame! And honor, as long as the waves shall break, To Nelson's peerless name. —Henry Newbolt.

NO TIPPING IN PARIS
AS WAITERS GO TO WAR

With the story of his flight from Germany and of being roughly treated by a mob in Paris, Louis Nethersole, brother of the English actress and European representative of Charles Dillingham, returned recently on the Red Star liner Finland. He described scenes in Paris after the mobilization orders were issued and told of many Americans in the city without funds.

"It is the general belief in London that the German mobilization began as early as the second week in July," he said. "About July fifteenth I saw a dozen boatloads of German troops on the Rhine. It was said they were bound for Coblenz, where a camp was being established. At Nancy, in France, a big French camp was full of activity."

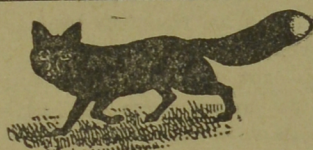

"I reached Paris late on that day and found the streets crowded with people shouting 'Vive la Russia,' and epithets against the Germans. I stopped at the Hotel Marlborough. The next day I went out and was mobbed by a crowd, who mistook me for a German. I was roughly treated and had to show my passports before I was released."

"Great excitement prevailed throughout the week and on Saturday the order went out that all strangers were to leave the city unless they wished to run the danger of siege. There was panic then among the strangers there. Pandemonium reigned at Cook's and it was next to impossible to get money. I walked the streets with a franc in my pocket all one day. I finally boarded a train for Dieppe to catch a Channel steamer, but it took us thirty-seven hours to make a trip usually done in eight. I had nothing to eat on the way and was in bad shape when I reached London."

"There was one thing unusual about getting out of Paris this time. All the help had gone to the war and it was unnecessary to give any tips. It was the first time this had ever happened to me."

War Food

Already the great European war is making itself felt right here at home. With production at a standstill abroad and prices of edibles here in America are going up by leaps and bounds.

Europe Calling for Food

The war has just begun
What will the end be?

There's one food that will not advance in price—a food Europe is now calling for--

Grape-Nuts

Made from wheat and barley, Grape-Nuts has for 20 years proved itself a dependable food for body and brain. It contains all the rich nutriment of the grain, including the invaluable mineral phosphates lacking in white bread, but but necessary for sturdy health--

A food for War and Peace

Grape-Nuts is every family's friend—delicious to taste, easily digested, richly nourishing, economical. Packed in sealed cartons—dust and germ proof—this food is always crisp and appetizing—and

Price Same As Always—everywhere

With Grape-Nuts food you can laugh at high prices and live well.
