TO MAKE ICING FOR CAKE.

Beat the whites of two small eggs to a high froth; then add to them quarter pound of white sugar, ground fine, like flour; flavor with lemon extract or vanilla; beat it until it is light and very white, but not quite as stiff as kiss mixture; the longer it is beaten the more firm it will become. No more sugar must be added to make it so. Beat the frosting until it may be spread smoothly on the cake. This quantity will ice quite a large cake over the top and sides.

MAPLE MOUSSE.

Whip one quart of cream until quite thick. Break the yolks of three eggs into another bowl, beat until light and add gradually one cup of maple syrup. When the two are well mixed, whip them gradually into the cream. Pour the whole into the freezer can without the dasher, cover, pack in ice and salt and let stand for three hours.

LESS EOWEL TROUBLE

IN FREDERICTON

Fredricton people have found out that A SINGLE DOSE of simple ouckthorn bark, glycerine, etc., as compounded in Adler-i-ka, the German bowel and stomach remedy, relieves constipation, sour stomach or gas on the stomach INSTANTLY. This simple mixture became famous by curing appendicitis and it draws off a surprising amount of old foul matter from the body. It is wonderful how QUICKLY it helps. Geo. Y. Dabble.

STARVING GERMANS

EAGER TO SURRENDER

London, Nov. 30.—The Times special correspondent at Petrograd cables:

"A graphic account of the fighting is telegraphed from Lodz by a correspondent. Amid the woods powdered with snow, among the leafless trees, wander masses of German soldiers isolated from their units, half-frozen and starving, surrendering willingly.

"Stories are told of entire companies and battalions which have been lost amid the fields. Their wretched appearance excites the pity of the peasantry, who constantly notify the Russians regarding the whereabouts of such groups desirous of surrendering. Nevertheless, in many regions the Germans fought splendidly, steadfastly repulsing the attacks and counter-attacks and defending themselves literally till the last gasp.

"The Russian cavalry daily arouses panic among the enemy with daring forays. Despite protracted marches in the cold weather it preserves all its destructive force, frequently surrounding the enemy's units cutting off their transports and enveloping their batteries in an iron ring.

"These conflicts sometimes surge from Kutno northwards, sometimes concentrate at Lodz at the intersection of the road to Warsaw, where whilst half surrounded, the scattered bodies of Germans are seeking safety and some outlet for flight. Everywhere the enemy is vainly endeavoring to pierce the Russian lines, directing sections of their infantry, at times destitute of artillery to caver to destroy them. Occasionally they succeed with the help of artillery in preparing temporary passages, but railways and main roads in an effort speedily the hesitation and dismemberment of the attachments can be observed. At the same time as the Germans are dispatching units without connections at most critical moments are projected remorseless headlong Russian assaults more and more completely detaching the enemy's columns from the central advancing forces.

"Among the forests and ravines German officers and men approach the Russian military automobiles and respond to armed threats with prayers and the touching request, 'Take us with you.'

WILLIE WONDERED.

One afternoon Willie was taken to a barber shop and whilst waiting his turn he thoughtfully sized up one of the hair choppers, who must have weighed at least three hundred lbs.

"Say, mamma," finally remarked the youngster, turning to his mother, "just look at that man! Ain't he some lump?"

"Hugh, dear!" responded the mother in a low voice. "He might bear you and be offended."

"Just look at him, mamma," said Willie again, after a few seconds. "Where do you suppose they ever got a skin big enough to fit him?"—Philadelphia Telegraph.

Was Troubled With Choking Spells and Shortness of Breath.

When the heart becomes affected, there ensues a feeling of a choking sensation, a shortness of breath, palpitation, throbbing, irregular beating, smothering sensation, and dizziness and a weak, sinking, all-gone feeling of oppression and anxiety.

Many men and women drag along with weary step, and become worn out and haggard, when otherwise they could be strong and healthy if they would only pay some attention to the first signs of heart or nerve trouble. On the first sign of the heart becoming weakened or the nerves unstrung Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills should be given a fair trial and you will find that they will soon correct both these organs.

Mr. James Leard, Tryon, P.E.I., writes: "Just a few lines to let you know what Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have done for me. I had choking spells, and was troubled with weakness of the heart and shortness of breath. I tried three doctors but they all failed. A neighbor recommended me to try your pills, so I got a box and they helped me so much I have taken six boxes. I highly recommend them to all who are troubled with their heart and nerves. I was not able to do any work for over two years; now I can do quite a bit."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50 cents per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

She ran down the steps. Jason followed to close the carriage door when she entered. As they moved away, Dorcas leaned out to glance at the home which had been hers since school days ended. She caught a glimpse of Enoch through the dusk. He was leaning from the library window. The room behind him gleamed white with a blaze of electricity. Before the mantel mirror stood a woman. Her arms reached above her head to pin back waves of shining yellow hair.

The cabman pulled up his horses and looked through a window in the roof. "You didn't tell me, lady, where you want to go."

"Drive me to the Gotham Theater," said Dorcas; "then I wish you to take this little boy to Harlem."

CHAPTER XX.

An Everyday Miracle.

That night, when the curtain fell upon the third act, Dorcas turned eagerly to Merry. "You are my friend?" she whispered.

"Miss Dorcas," the actor's voice was profoundly grave, but his eyes smiled. "I would bestride the whirlwind or set my foot upon a cyclone for you."

The girl lifted her eyes with a swift glance. She remembered the line—it was one the actor used to speak in "The King at Large."

"I believe you would." Her voice was low and impetuous. "I need a friend, a strong, patient, wise friend, as I never did in my life before."

"Miss Dorcas, you make me wish this moment that I were a Samson and a Solomon. I am not strong or very wise, but I am patient, and there is no task upon God's earth that I would not try to do for you. You believe me, don't you?"

The crimson blood flushed into her face.

"Yes." Her voice was scarcely audible. The curtain began to ascend for an encore. "Come to Mrs. Billerwell's tomorrow night. I am going there to stay with Alice over Sunday. I need your help."

He regarded her curiously for a moment.

"I will come," he answered gravely. Then he took her hand and led her down to the footlights.

On Sunday evening Dorcas sat staring down into a crowded street of Harlem. Under the vivid glare of electricity the city looked sordidly ugly. It was a strange contrast to her own home. The house at Waverly Place had retained much of its stately old-time dignity and its outlook upon the three-shaded square was quiet and pleasant. Upon Harlem's sidewalk throngs of children romped and shrieked in the midst of a city's din. A balmy wind had been blowing all day long and had driven a wintry chill from the air. Knots of women sat talking on doorsteps or they leaned out to gossip from adjacent windows. It was the hour for Sunday night suppers and a rush of business had begun in delicatessen stores. Strange odors crept in at the open window, a blend of garlic with stewed meats, pungent pickles, and cosmopolitan cheeses.

A gilt clock on the mantel struck seven. Dorcas rose, opened the door, and stood listening. On the lower floor she heard a door slam. She was trying to separate insistent noises of the street from everyday household bustle. She heard Mrs. Billerwell give an order to a servant, then Julia laughed merrily, and a light footstep sounded on the stair. On the other

Below the Standard.

How do you feel today?

Not quite right? Energy a little below standard—not strong enough to make much exertion?

Nyal's Cod Liver Compound is what you need.

Don't get frightened about these words "Cod Liver." You'd never know it from the taste.

It's a real tonic containing Cod liver extract, extract of malt, wild cherry and hypophosphites—a splendid combination.

The cod liver extract builds you up—so does the extract of malt. The wild cherry soothes the bronchial tract and the hypophosphites supply phosphorus to the nervous system—just the thing it needs.

And the taste is pleasant.

The price is one dollar.
