Thought She Would Go Mad WITH HEADACHE.

In all cases of headache the treatment should be directed to remove the cause, for with the cause removed the headache vanishes for all time. Headache powders just relieve for the time being, but what is necessary for a permanent cure is something that will go right to the seat of the trouble. For this purpose it is impossible to find a better remedy for headaches of all descriptions than Burdock Blood Bitters, acting as it does on every organ of the body to strengthen, purify and regulate the whole system.

Mrs. Althea Bowman, Hamilton, Ont., writes:—"I have suffered terribly with my head for weeks at a time till I thought I would go mad. A friend advised me to give Burdock Blood Bitters a trial, so I got a bottle and found relief. I have used four bottles in all and I am glad to say that I have had no more headaches since. I would advise all sufferers to give it a fair trial."

MR. CARNEGIE WOULD LOWER LIVING COST

Mr. Carnegie said that he had been considering seriously the problem of reducing the cost of living for the poor.

"I have heard of poor people buying coal in small quantities—by the bushel or scuttle," he said. "It costs them about three times as much as it does the consumer who is able to buy it by the wagonload. The same thing is true of other needed articles. Some day in the near future we shall have places where such necessities are sold at cost and not for profit."

"Will the government do this?" Mr. Carnegie was asked.

"No, not necessarily. Philanthropists will organize the stations and manage them."

Mr. Carnegie said that he did not believe that such a plan would be distasteful to persons of independent nature.

"People have brains enough to accept things in the spirit in which they are offered," he said, "especially when they come to know the kind of men behind such an enterprise."

Co-operative buying also he thought would reduce the high cost of living for working people.

"There is one such organization of consumers in Holland," he said "and its membership is very large and is constantly growing. Every one who has had an opportunity to observe its workings concludes that a wonderful difference has been made in the cost of goods to its members."

ECONOMIC REFORMS DOING MUCH FOR THE FARMER

(Toronto Globe.)

Amid all the discussion as to the best means of getting people back to the farm and keeping them there it is well to bear in mind that money is not everything to the farmer any more than to the town dweller. More and more the need for a fuller social side to farm life obtrudes itself. The boys and girls cannot be kept away from the "movies" and the dances, and the social intimacies of life in the towns, even by the prospect of saving more money on the farm than in the city. Youth, at all events, does not live by bread alone.

It is pleasant to see in a journal so close to the heart of the farming community as The Lucknow Sentinel, the statement that rural telephones, rural mail delivery and the parcels post—which do away with the happy experience of going for the mail or running into town in the middle of the week for a plug of tobacco or a few pounds of sugar—are not going to convert the country home into a sort of prison, but are likely to prove the salvation of rural life. The Sentinel puts the change that has come to the folk on the farm so neatly that its remarks are well worth quoting:

"All over the province," it says, "where the telephone has been installed, there have been or are being organized 'Good Times Clubs,' Literary Societies, Debating Societies or some such organization and the meetings of these societies are delightful, thoroughly enjoyable affairs, which cannot fail to be profitable in many ways. Until the rural telephone came it was impossible to keep such a society or club going in the country. If the weather was bad or the roads not just what they should be members felt that nobody would be there and it wouldn't be worth while going. Now the phone is called into use and it is quickly discovered that everybody is willing to go if there is going to be a good turnout. It is soon arranged that there will be a crowd and everybody goes unless the weather is positively boisterous or the roads impassable. In this way these rural societies are held together better than ever before. They persist throughout the fall and winter months and add immensely to the enjoyment of country life. No thought of imprisonment."

"Then the rural phone keeps the lonely farmer's wife posted on neighborhood news and there is society where none intrudes. To this is added the higher kind of information brought daily through the city papers by the rural mail, so that when either the young or the old meet there are endless up-to-date topics of conversation. There is not the slightest doubt of it, the telephone and the daily mail will put the farming population on a distinctly higher plane of intelligence, and they effect such economy in labor that there are better opportunities than ever before for the arrangement of drives and visits purely for pleasure."

That is a bright and inviting picture. The greatest drawback of farm life has not been the inadequacy of its rewards but the isolation of the rural population. There is need for betterment along economic lines. The farmer, in the form of tariff reform, bears too great a proportion of the national tax burden. The lack of cheap and readily available mechanical power has in the past forced him to do many things by manual labor that could be done at vastly less cost and much more quickly by machinery. On the economic side, however, as well as the social, conditions are rapidly mending. Radial railways to carry his less bulky products to market; electric power to operate the separator, chop the feed, cut the wood, pump water for sanitary services and light the house and the barn; a telephone and a daily newspaper to keep him in touch with the world's markets will do much for the farmer in saving his money and his energy. Some day, too, he may make up his mind about tariff issues and decide for freedom of trade in both buying and selling.

Economic reforms and improvements will do much for the farmer, but as a means of keeping the young folk on the farm the "Good Times Club," with the rural telephone at its service, will probably prove more effective than any merely financial inducements. The Lucknow Sentinel, has done a useful service in the publication of its heartening article on rural life in Ontario.

TYPHOID EPIDEMICS ARE NOT NECESSARY

Typhoid prophylactic is driving typhoid from the United States Navy. Up to June, 1913 about eighty thousand authentic cases of typhoid occurred in those who had received full treatment. Four of the cases were at one small tropical station and it has been determined that owing to conditions in transportation the vaccine had deteriorated. Mild symptoms and rapid convalescence characterized those who contracted typhoid after vaccination. A fact of the greatest military improvement is that no typhoid appeared among the men of any of the expeditionary forces in the field. It is true, also that ships have spent long periods of time in ports where typhoid was prevalent without a single case appearing on board. This immunity it is feared, will result in relaxation in the strict observance of sanitary precautions. This must not occur for two reasons. One is that the sanitary regulations are valuable safeguards against diseases other than typhoid. The other is that, as yet the strength or duration of the immunity produced in the individual has not been accurately gauged up to the present.
