SONFIRE OF BANK BILLS

Lee kept the money at the bottom of an old trunk in an upper room of his store on West Queen street. While holding a candle to search through the trunk, the Chinaman had the misfortune to drop the lighted candle. In a moment the whole of the trunk's contents was in flames, and although Lee made desperate efforts to save the money; he did not smother the flames before they had partially burned the small fortune reposing at the bottom. Only about half of the burned money was found 'o be redeemable, but according to the police officials the loss will not seriously affect the old Chinaman's finances

Evil Communication

When a golf caddie was charged at Willesden with theft, the magistrate said he considered the occupation of golf caddie the most demoralizing a boy could be engaged in, and he asked the court missionary to find some better employment for him.
