PERSISTENCY IN ADVERTISING

One stroke of a bell in a thick fog does not give a lasting impression of its location, but when followed by repeated strokes at regular intervals the densest fog, the darkest night can not long conceal its whereabouts. Likewise a single insertion of an advertisement—as compared with regular and systematic ADVERTISING—is in its effect not unlike a sound which, heard but faintly once is lost in space and soon forgot—

COLUMBIA LANDS

POUGHKEEPSIE

First Victory in Nineteen Years—
Pennsylvania and Cornell Crew
Follow

Poughkeepsie, N.Y., June 27—After nineteen years of "watchful waiting" and persistent effort, Columbia won the varsity boat race to the intercollegiate championships on the Hudson River all this city this afternoon.

Cornell had won both the junior varsity and freshman races in a manner that took all the sporting enthusiasm out of the spectators, but it remained for the final event of the day to furnish a real thriller. The race was replete with brilliant spurts and dashes. Columbia challenged Pennsylvania and Cornell, who had been disputing first place, in the last quarter.

There was nothing of the fluke about Columbia's win, for she was a close contender most of the time and never allowed the leaders, Pennsylvania and Cornell, a moment's respite. The prow of the Columbia shell always lapped the rivals and much of the time seasawed with first one and then the other pacemaker.

It was one of the greatest races ever rowed on this historical river, and, coming from behind in the last part of the race, the pupils of Coach Jimmy Rice electrified the spectators by slowly driving ahead and winning by three-quarters of a length.

FIRST VICTORY IN 19 YEARS.

Those conversant with Poughkeepsie regatta history recall the first contest rowed here in 1895, in which there was a general swamping of shells and the Columbia crew, captained by Hamilton Fish, won the big race.

Although Columbia has been the second crew in many races since and made racing worth seeing its efforts have never been crowned with a victory in the varsity race since that first regatta until today.

It was only natural that Columbia men went wild with delight for they had not been greatly encouraged by the performances of their other crews earlier in the day. The victory came to them like a thunderbolt out of a clear sky. Several times during the race it looked as though the Columbians were burning up, so intense was the battle.

Johnson Nasty Old Up Shoot Worrays Moran—Moran Thought He Did Pretty Well—Hundreds of Women Present—Johnson's White Wife Cheers For Her Black Hubby

Paris, June 27—"Jack" Johnson, still holds the heavyweight championship of the world. In a hard fought battle at Velodrome D'Hiver here tonight he defeated Frank Moran, of Pittsburgh, easily, on points in the twenty round contest. Moran was game and stubborn and stood up to the negro. He did most of the leading and made many friends.

The black man's superior skill and his effective uppercutting wore down his opponent and won the match, which at times seemed rather amateurish.

Terrific uppercuts, on which Johnson had relied in many of his previous battles, were again brought in to play on his young adversary, who was unable effectively to block them. They were repeatedly sent to Moran's jaw, when he least expected them, and several times which such force that the Pittsburgher was sent wobbling but there was not a single knock down, or anything that looked like a finishing blow. At the close Moran's face was bleeding from cuts on the nose and under the left eye; Johnson showed no marks.

• "JACK" JOHNSON.

Towards the middle of the contest it appeared as if Moran would not go the twenty rounds, but he showed courage and kept driving. Although he landed a number of times on the negro his blows lacked force and were comparatively ineffective. Now and then he tried to land hard on his adversary, and in so doing swung widely through space, Johnson being several feet away.

Moran took his punishment well, and during parts of rounds the negro toyed with him when he saw that he could do so without danger.

Towards the end Johnson had the Pittsburgher absolutely at his mercy. Moran apparently feared that he would be finished and clung to Johnson's body for support, trying at the same time to land but without success. His manner of fighting and holding in the latter part of the contest was the cause of unfavorable comment, as were the tactics of Johnson on several occasions, which brought a caution from the referee, as well as a storm of jeers from the crowd.

Many of the French spectators, who seemingly did not understand the fine points of boxing, voiced their objection to fighting but cheered any resounding harmless whacks.

The great amphitheatre presented a wonderful sight, for although there were some empty seats, the tiers were crowded with representatives of every element. The singular spectacle was presented, of several hundred women in handsome gowns applauding the two pugilists as they struggled up and down the ring, fainting and dodging and screaming each other. Among the women were those that bore such great names in French society as Baroness Henry De Rothschild, the younger Duchess D'Uzes, Countess Mathieu De Naolles, the poet Princess De Lucigne, the Duchess D Rohan, Princess Morouzieff, and Countess De Proumiers.

Johnson's white wife occupied a prominent position, wearing as many diamonds as most of the great ladies. She cried out shrilly from time to time: "Hit him daddy," "come along now," "now then Jack, let him have another."

Gloved hands joined in the applause that rang through the building as the two gladiators sweltered under the heat and struggled for supremacy, as in the days of ancient Rome.

Spencer Eddy, former American minister to Argentina, sat near the ringside. Three feet behind him sat the Duke of Westminster, while not far away the Earl of Sefton, Louis Barthou, former premier of France, the Marquis De Lafayette, the Duke D'Uzes, Marquis De Breteuil, Baron James De Rothschild, and Count Clary.

Here and there dark faces, some of them negroes from Senegal, Dahomey and the West Indies.

It was an amazing international crowd. Several hundred Americans were in the best seats. They included Mortimer Schiff, of New York; ex-Senator C. W. Watson of West Virginia; Richard Croker, Jr., Ogden Mills, Herman B. Duryea, Alfred Vanderbilt, D. A. Reid and E. H. Thomas, all of New York.

After the fight Johnson took the place of his age ever defended the title appeared a little the worse for the Tom Keane has signed a contract to coach the Syracuse track team for another year and will also act as trainer of the football eleven.

Jack Moakley, the Cornell coach and trainer, will be in town for several days the first of next week, prior to spending a well earned vacation at Falmouth Heights. Sportsman is not in a position to know that Moakley would accept the appointment to train the American Olympic team in 1916, and at this early date he would perhaps not be in a position to accept positively; but he has won the place, if any one has, and there is no doubt that he would seriously consider an acceptance if the position should be tendered to him.
