THE HUSBAND AND WIFE

One of the problems raised by women's emergence into the workaday world is that of the relations between the dependant husband and his wife. Many a man has refused to marry a rich woman by whom he was attracted because of the fear that in time their relations would develop into those of a patroness and the object of her bounty. In cases where wealth is not inherited but is obtained by the exercise of the superior talent of the wife the danger is not so great, for the woman who goes out into the world to make her living usually learns self-repression and the odiousness of money that talks. The dependant husband of such a wife may hope to escape the humiliations that often come upon the husband of the woman who inherits riches.

Not many women have the tact to put the case so nicely as Margaret Anglin did a short time ago, when under examination as to her husband's income. Mr. Hull's motor-car had hit a colored woman and his wife was giving testimony during a bankruptcy hearing following upon a verdict of $2,000 damages.

"My husband," she said, "has not found it necessary to earn any money since we have been married. I have supplied all his needs in that direction."

"But, has he earned nothing at all?" queried Mr. De Graffenried.

"Nothing," replied the actress, "absolutely nothing. In fact, the only money I ever knew him to earn was $100 that I paid him before we were married."

"Tell us about it please," ordered Mr. De Graffenried.

"Well," stated the actress as she settled back in her chair and cast a look at Hull, "it was this way. I engaged Mr. Hull to play a part in my company but he proved such a poor actor that I discharged him after only one night's work."

As she said this Miss Anglin cast another glance at her husband, and then leaning toward him, said tenderly:

"Pardon me, Howard dear, but you know it's the truth."

"Nevertheless you married him shortly afterwards," broke in Mr. De Graffenried.

"Yes, I married him, although I knew that he had nothing but his wearing apparel. Being a poor actor and a good sweetheart are two different things, you know," answered the famous star. "He has had nothing since, for that matter, for the jewelry that you have seen him wearing—a watch and a stick-pin—is mine."

"A poor actor and a good sweetheart," Mr. Hull must take the bitter with the pleasant. That is inevitable when a man is only the husband of his wife. More and more as the women of exceptional talent emerge into the world where wealth and fame reward them, we shall have cases where shrewd business sense and womanly affection wage war upon each other and the good sweetheart will win out after the poor actor has been dismissed.

THE EFFECTS OF WAR

The Canadian Journal of Commerce has this to say:

There is no likelihood that the Montreal and Toronto Stock Exchanges will be opened for several days and possibly it will be weeks before they resume business. Exporters find that it is impossible to get insurance on trans-atlantic cargoes, while steamship men are forced to cancel sailings and find their business seriously interfered with. Up to the present time, the bank have not felt any serious inconvenience from the war but are taking precautionary measures in order to meet any problem which may arise. The Government announces that they are ready to increase their note issue, which is a wise precaution to take.

The probability is that prices of food stuffs in Canada will show a marked advance, especially if the war should prove to be a long drawn out affair. Great Britain and the European countries engaged in the struggle will require immense quantities of grain and other food stuff and will look to Canada and the Argentine as their chief sources of supply. The transporting of food stuffs from Canada to Great Britain will depend very largely upon the result of a conflict in the North Sea. In the last analysis everything depends upon the success of the British navy.

The war shows above all else the dependence of nations upon one another. One nation, even an obscure one cannot go to war with another without upsetting the economical relations of the whole world. War is wasteful and the slight stimulus given to trade in various quarters is an artificial one. War cannot be anything but hurtful.

Montreal Herald: A few days ago we asked, "What is Mr. Flemming waiting for?" He is still waiting and in the meantime the evidence is piling up. A. R. Gould, president of the Quebec and St. John Railway Company, was asked by Mr. Carvell, "Did you pay Mr. Flemming any money?" He hesitated, and then answered, "Not out of railway funds." The question was repeated. "I don't think I should be required to answer that question," he replied. He made the same answer when asked if he had paid money to New Brunswick's Prime Minister out of any funds derived from sale of bonds. In the absence of an answer to these questions Mr. Flemming should resign. What is he waiting for?

Woodstock Sentinel: Willard Hale Berry has been gazetted Provisional Lieutenant 1st Brighton Field Company. Mr. Berry is at present sojourning in the United States and would perhaps be available for foreign service, but he has not volunteered for home duty. A telegram from Premier Flemming might induce Lieut. Berry to return under the protection of an escort.

If the Flemming government wants to equip a regiment for service in the European war it can easily find the wherewithal. It has only to commandeer the timber fund collected by the

Jersey Farmers'

ANNUAL DIP

Manassan, N.J., Aug. 6.—This was "big sea day," the annual salt water bathing day for the rural population of a big section of New Jersey. The celebration is one of ancient origin. Farmers of Monmouth and adjoining counties have been meeting on the sea beach the second Saturday of August since long before the civil war. At first only a few neighbors gathered to enjoy themselves on the bay but the idea spread and the crowd grew each year, until now the "Jersey Wash Day" is a tremendous affair. For many years Sea Girt was the scene of the largest of these gatherings. But when Sea Girt began to hold her head high and put on airs, the farmers decided that they were no longer welcome. So they abandoned Sea Girt to the fashionable and came themselves to Manassan, where the gatherings have now been held for several years.

It is estimated that the attendance today numbered nearly five thousand persons from the farming districts, some having come as far as thirty miles. They came in trains, wagons and horseback, but the old-fashioned country wagon, with room for a dozen, seemed to have the call. There were hundreds of such vehicles and the roads were unbroken lines of laughing, shouting and singing country folk.

COMMISSION HEARS

tacitly told Berry to go ahead and put the seal of his approbation upon every act which Berry was going to do before he did it. But he took care to find a treasurer, for he could not trust the others to handle so large a sum. He did not allow Berry to get the money but he said:

"Go ahead but you must not handle it. E. R. Teed is the only man I can trust to handle it."

"It may be a hard matter for Mr. Flemming but I have no alternative and it is not my concern but from the evidence I cannot conceive how it will be possible to bring in a report other than that these changes have been proved from the beginning to the very end."

The chairman then announced that the commission would adjourn until Friday next at ten o'clock.

The chairman asked if the evidence in the Valley Railway case would take up much time. Mr. Carvell replied that there had not been any attempt made to get the books of the company. It was, he said, a pretty hard thing to say, but he did not believe any one of the other side when they said they could not get the books. He would like to see Mr. Gould brought back and ask him why.

"Let us get an adjournment long enough," added Mr. Carvell, with some warmth. "Let the government of this country do its duty and order the books to be brought here, and we will close the argument in one day. This is no play. I mean business. If we get the books here I know you will get something on the question of diversion which will startle you. I have no hesitation in making the statement. It is evident that there is something there which ought to be here."

Com. Fisher—Well, the government knows the views of the commission.

Mr. Carvell—I will tell you that the other side have no intention of bringing the books here. They have been laughing up their sleeve. They don't intend to and they will not bring the books here until the commission makes a demand for them. It has got beyond the time for soft words. Here is a company handling between $5,000,000 and $6,000,000 of the province's money and they take the books to New York. It is a disgrace and an insult which no counsel has a right to offer to the people of New Brunswick. The government of the province can get the books if they do their duty. The government now own a majority of the company's stock and the people are entitled to a strict account.

Chairman—We will resume on Friday next at ten o'clock.

Mr. Carvell—Then I give notice that I will persist in refusing to argue the case until these books are here.

Mr. Teed—Are we to understand that the case will not be closed until the books arrive?

Mr. Carvell—I am not prepared to argue without them. I have been hoodwinked long enough.

Mr. Teed repeated that he did not think that if the books were produced they would offer anything.

Chairman—And I think you feel that they should be here.

Commission then adjourned.
