SIR EDWARD GREY AN OUTSTANDING FIGURE

London, Aug. 8.—The efforts of Sir Edward Grey to preserve the peace of Europe have made the English foreign minister the great outstanding figure of the day. There are other remarkable figures in the foreign offices of Europe but none of greater ability than he who presides over the British foreign office.

The name of Sir Edward Grey has been on every tongue during the past ten days and no man in all Britain has been more in the limelight. And yet, strange to say, there is no man in public life today who is so little known personally. A potent, a mysterious and uncertain figure, known to few, understood by fewer. Cool, self-possessed and showing no trace whatever of the crisis through which he has been passing.

The grandson of Sir George Grey, who was several times home secretary, and the grand-nephew of Earl Grey of reform bill fame, Sir Edward whose father was equerry to King Edward when the latter was Prince of Wales, inherited political instincts and talent. He had scarcely attained his majority when he became private secretary of Sir Evelyn Baring, (Lord Cromer) and he acted in the same capacity to Mr. Childers at the time the latter was chancellor of the exchequer.

Entering parliament at the age of twenty-three years, Sir Edward made some stir at an early period of his career by his independence on the question of Irish land purchase. He was only thirty when Mr. Gladstone appointed him, in 1892, under secretary for foreign affairs. As his chief was in the House of Lords, his position was important and it became particularly delicate when Lord Roseberry succeeded to the premiership. Sir Edward Grey had to expound a policy with which it was suspected Lord Roseberry's principal colleague did not always sympathize. He did the work which then fell to his hand with courage as well as with propriety.

Even those who have had no special opportunity of testing Sir Edward's capacity are impressed by the appearance which he gives of reserve power. Behind that long, thin face, with the high cheek bones, they think there must be deep forces. Instead of thrusting himself forward, he has had to be pushed. Competent observers long ago discerned that he possessed the qualities of a leader. Fifteen years and more ago there were many who predicted that some day, if his ambition burned brightly enough, Sir Edward would take the chief place on the green benches.

Sir Edward Grey has two very peculiar mannerisms, one of gesture, the other of speech. The gesture is to put his right hand behind his neck and to scratch his head. The mannerism of speech is that he repeats frequently the same words when he comes to the end of a sentence. Although his style is restrained, his speeches are usually impressive and effective. Once he was announced to address a meeting of northern miners who were keen Radicals. Instead of giving them a slashing harangue, Sir Edward spoke sedately on foreign affairs, yet his manner was such that the audience listened with deep interest.

TRAMPS ARRESTED.

Sam Hughes, advising him that he had been selected as commander of the New Brunswick contingent."

teachers, who are qualifying as cadet instructors, came to an abrupt close last evening when orders were received for the instructors of the class to proceed at once to St. John. In pursuance of this order Sergt. Major J. J. Good, Q. M. Sergt. Instructor Hobkirk and Q. M. Sergt. Instructor Warren left for St. John by C.P.R. last evening. It is expected that they will be sent farther than St. John.

Major A. B. Snow, organizer and administrator of Cadet Corps for New Brunswick, today wired for instructions regarding the class which is left without instructors and it is expected that its members will be paid off and sent home. It is also thought that although the course has been curtailed by about one week, the members of the class will receive their qualification.

Bedding and other belongings of "H" Company, R.C.R., now on duty at St. John, were sent to St. John this morning and it is a pretty good indication that it will become time before the company returns.
