

FALLING HAIR AND ITCHING SCALP

Entirely Needless---Use Parisian
Sage. It Quickly Removes
Dandruff---Your Head
Feels Fine

Now that Parisian Sage can be had at any drug or toilet counter, it is certainly needless to have thin, brittle, matted, stringy or faded hair. No matter how unsightly the hair, how badly it is falling, or how much dandruff, use Parisian Sage---it is all that is needed. One application removes dandruff, the hair roots are nourished and stimulated to grow new hair, itching scalp and falling hair cease---your head feels fine. Best of all, the hair becomes soft, fluffy, abundant and radiant with life and beauty.

You will be surprised and delighted with Parisian Sage. Try at least one fifty-cent bottle. A. J. Ryan will refund the purchase price if you are not satisfied.

TO TRY YOUTH FOR KILLING TEACHER

Little Falls, N. Y., May 2---Monday next is the day set for the opening of the trial of Jean Gianini, the 17-year-old youth who is accused of having murdered Miss Lida Beecher, a young school teacher of the town of Poland. Despite the fact that Gianini is alleged to have made a confession of the crime, a vigorous effort is to be made to obtain his freedom. His father, who is well-to-do, has retained eminent counsel to conduct the defense.

The body of Miss Beecher, torn, cut and bruised, was found in a clump of bushes on the outskirts of the town of Poland, on the morning of March 28 last. The young woman had left her boarding house in the evening to mail a letter at the village postoffice. After she did not return, search for her was begun, but it was not until the next morning that a farmer, driving along the road found the body.

Miss Beecher who was the daughter of a minister had for several years imbibed a deeply religious spirit and had planned to quit teaching at the end of the present term and offer herself as a Presbyterian missionary in foreign fields. She had become deeply interested in the moral welfare of young Gianini, who had been one of her pupils, and had written to her father on the subject of the course she should pursue in reclaiming him from evil ways. It is supposed that the youth tired of the teacher's persistence in her efforts to have him reform. Then too, it is believed that Gianini feared Miss Beecher would use her influence to have committed to an industrial school. Luring the young woman from the village on the pretext of meeting his father to talk over his case, Gianini is believed to have attacked and killed her with a wrench that was found in her possession.

LIBERALS WILL FIGHT CANADIAN NORTHERN DEAL

Ottawa, April 30---The Liberals of parliament, at a fully attended caucus this morning, unanimously and enthusiastically decided to put up a strenuous opposition to the terms of the government's bargain with the Canadian Northern Railway, whereby the people of Canada assume the role of junior partner with MacKenzie & Mann, put up $45,000,000 of their credit to finance the undertaking, assume practical responsibility for all present and future obligations of the company and still leave Sir William MacKenzie, Sir Donald Mann and Mr. Lash in control of the road, to reap all possible profits either from construction or operation with the opportunity to retire with these profits later on, in case the road should become insolvent.

There was a marked and significant difference between the Liberal caucus this morning, which decided to fight the proposition, and the Conservative caucus which decided to accept it. On Tuesday morning, as soon as the terms were made known, two of the leading supporters of the government from Ontario and the west, left the caucus and publicly announced that they would vote against a proposal so manifestly in favor of railway promoters, as against the interests of the people. Then the caucus after a long and acrimonious discussion, lasting nearly three hours, finally swallowed the proposal. There was no cheering and there was no enthusiasm.

Since that caucus and since the details of the bargain have been studied, there have been again numerous signs of revolt on the part of a number of the government's supporters. There is now a strong desire among a considerable number of them for a new caucus and for a revision of the terms of the bargain.

LIBERALS FULL OF FIGHT.

The Liberal caucus this morning lasted a little over an hour. From first to last there was unanimity of opinion that the terms of the agreement sacrificed the public interest for the interests of the railway promoters. While not disagreeing with the principle of aiding and securing the completion of the transcontinental system with public funds and credit, there was only one opinion as to the necessity of safeguarding that aid with additional provisions for government control of further expenditures so as to insure the honest and economical application of moneys raised on public credit towards the completion of the line.

There was unanimity of opinion that before proceeding further with public aid to MacKenzie & Mann, there must be a strict accounting as to what had been done with the public funds and the public credit which have already been granted to them. It was felt that there must first be a much closer examination of the meaning and wording of the agreement, changed, as it has been even already, from the form in which it was originally presented yesterday morning.

The various points in the agreement leaving room for a final "clean-up" by the railway promoters without any guarantee that the people's equity in the road would not be further jeopardized to the advantage of private promoters, were discussed in their various phases, and a number of amendments were suggested in general form. These will, of course, have to be worked out later, after expert legal advice has been given as to the real meaning of the agreement submitted by the government.

The one basic idea of the caucus was that whereas the government had apparently very carefully looked after the financial interests of the men behind the road, the public interest still remains to be looked after and this must be done by the Liberal party. As a first step, it was decided that there must be a searching and persistent demand for full and complete information as to the whole financial position of the road, the relation of Sir William MacKenzie and Sir Donald Mann to it, both as stockholders and as contractors, the character of the security offered the nature of the obligations to be assumed by the government in case of default by the company and generally the return which the people of Canada can expect from their partnership with the company.

Unless this information is given by the government, and unless the present proposals are amended in accordance with the public interest, it is certain that the bill can only be put through the Commons by the application of closure. That decision was ratified without a dissenting voice, and was emphasized by the resounding cheers which echoed in the corridors outside the caucus room and gave warning to the Conservatives of what they might expect when the bill comes up for discussion next week.

A NEW OLD STORY.

The talk turned to the professional beggar, the other night when B. B. Comer of Alabama told of an incident that happened in a metropolitan city.

Party named Smith was going down the street one afternoon when he was approached by a beggar who looked like a cross between a ton of misery and a comic valentine. "Excuse me sir," plaintively said the beggar "couldn't you give me the price of a small sandwich? I haven't tasted food for two days."

Smith gave him a nickel and went on. Suddenly he remembered that he had passed a place where he intended to stop, and turned back. He was just in time to see the beggar coming out of a saloon.

"Look here, you gink," heatedly cried Smith. "You told me that you hadn't tasted food for two days, and yet you buy beer!"

"Yes, sir," was the calm rejoinder of the beggar, "but I hadn't tasted beer for thirty one days!"---Philadelphia Telegraph.

"I had terrible pains in my head. My appetite faded away and when I did eat anything it disagreed and made me very sick for hours after each meal. The pains in my stomach and the dizzy headaches I had to endure almost set me wild. Sometimes attacks came on so severely that I had to go to bed. I would feel so worn, depressed and utterly miserable that for hours I wouldn't speak to my family. My system was poisoned with wastes and nothing helped me till I used Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Without this grand system-cleaning remedy I would still be sick but each day brought me better health and spirits. I was cured and made strong, ruddy and healthy and will always use and recommend Dr. Hamilton's Pills."

DAGOES DISMISSED.

When Italians sail from this port in the steerage of the big liners to see their families in the Mother Country they are searched at the gangways by expert seamen who take away all revolvers and knives and give each man a check with which he can reclaim his property on arriving at the port of destination. The same rule is applied by the steamship agents when the emigrants embark in Italy for America. The object of depriving these passengers of their weapons is to prevent any trouble arising among them while aboard ship. On one steamer recently, where the men were allowed to keep their clasp knives, a small fire was discovered in the forward steerage and before the officers realized what had happened, the Sicilian passengers rushed on deck, ripped the canvass covers off the life-boats and sat in them waiting for them to be launched.

Perhaps nothing jolts a young man quite as hard as to go to the opera alone and see his best girl show up in a box with his rival.

THE REFUSAL

Apropos of the starvation rates paid for magazines, poetry, Jerome S. McWade, the millionaire sociologist of Duluth said:

"On a recent slumming trip I gave some aid to a magazine poet. Apropos of the current poetry rates the poor fellow told me a story:

"How much do you want" an editor asked a poet "for this sonnet sequence on white slavery?"

"Two cents a line, if you please, sir," the poet humbly answered.

"Don't slam the door as you go out," said the editor."
