A Word With Subscribers

It is a popular misconception that in times of War a newspaper makes money. As a matter of fact, any newspaper which tries to do its duty by its subscribers, loses money during war time. This is true of The Daily and Semi-Weekly Mail. Both of these papers, in spite of their tremendous increase in circulation, are not making any profit out of the war. This being the case, we have to ask our subscribers who are in arrears to be good enough to REMIT. If we are properly doing our duty toward you as a subscriber, we have to ask that you will carry out your duty to us by remitting promptly any amount that may be owing to us.

If you want to help us make our paper better, send us your subscription in advance. We assure you that we will spend it in improving our news service.

Accounts are now being sent out, and we will be very much indebted to you if you will give the same your prompt attention.

UNSTRUNG, UNSTEADY SHAKY NERVES MAY BE TONED UP BY USING MILBURN'S HEART and NERVE PILLS.

Mrs. John Harper, Toronto, Ont., writes: "I have used Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills for the heart and nervous system. I was confined to a grocery store for twelve years, and had to give up business, as I became terribly run down and nervous, and had heart trouble, and I am sure I am gaining very fast now. I feel that nothing did me any good until I tried your Heart and Nerve Pills, and I am positive they will cure me. The nerves of one hand would tremble and then seem to go numb so that I could not write or sew. Now my hand is quite steady, as you can see by my handwriting. This is a big change which delights me so much for I thought all was done that could be done. I was about to give up in despair when I tried this last remedy, and even after I had only taken half a box the change started to come."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills will restore the enfeebled, enervated, exhausted, overworked system to full constitutional power.

Price, 50 cents per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

PAYING THE PRICE OF ADMIRALTY

(Halifax Chronicle)

The official announcement issued by the Admiralty last evening confirms our fears of British losses in the naval engagement on the Chilean coast. The flagship Good Hope which caught fire, doubtless from an exploding shell, foundered, and the cruiser Monmouth which the German report stated had been sunk, ran ashore. The cruiser Glasgow which single handed fought the German cruisers Leipzig and Dresden was not extensively damaged, and later reports may show that she was able to inflict serious injury upon the enemy's ships.

Concerning the fate of the officers and crews of the lost ships, the Admiralty is silent—save for an announcement that energetic measures are being taken to rescue the survivors of a stranded warship believed to be the Monmouth—and the worst is to be feared.

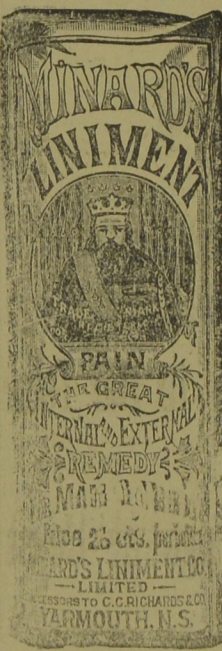

The news is distressing, not so much because two ships have been destroyed—for the fighting strength of the Navy is not appreciably impaired—as because so many of our brave sailors have lost their lives. The loss of the ships effects our pride; the loss of life touches our hearts. And yet, though the blow is heavy, there is consolation in the knowledge that they died a glorious death, giving up their manhood in defence of the flag of Empire and the principles of liberty and justice for which we are fighting. The officers and men of the British ships who engaged in unequal combat off the coast of Chile last Sunday did not flinch in the hour of trial. The enemy bears testimony to their gallantry, and we may well believe that they maintained the glorious traditions of the navy, fighting as British sailors always fight—until their ship went down.

To those to whom the loss is personal we can only express the heartfelt sympathy of the community. The British world sorrows with them in their bereavement and its glories, as they may glory in this hour of trial, in the assurance that as the darkest closed over the sailors in those far off seas they faced the enemy's gunfire like true Britishers and gave their lives in defence of the noblest cause for which men ever fought and died.

WOMAN SEES BATTLE OF AISNE AND DUEL BETWEEN AEROPLANES

London, Nov. 9.—How Mrs. Martin French, the New York and Newport society leader, who since the war started has been in charge of one of the American hospitals in France, stood all alone on the banks of the Aisne and, with shells bursting all about her, watched the artillery duel between the British and Germans, was told by herself for the first time.

Mrs. French, who is a sister-in-law of Elsie French Vanderbilt, has just arrived in London to arrange for sending a hospital unit to the new British base in Northern France, and is stopping at the Ritz. Mrs. French also criticized the administration for not protesting against the activities of Count von Bernstorff.

BERNSTORFF SCORED.

"I received a letter from a friend today," she said, "who wrote that he had invited twenty-four persons to meet Ambassador Bernstorff at dinner in Newport and had received twenty-four declinations. All the news I get from America on the subject is to the effect that all the best people in New York simply refuse to have anything to do with Ambassador Bernstorff, as anybody who knows the rudiments of diplomacy knows he has committed blunders, to use the kindest expression, which should cost him his job instantly. His utterances on the subject of the Germans invading Canada is only one of his offenses against diplomatic decency."

TO STUDY HOSPITALS.

Mrs. French went to the front on behalf of the American Ambulance Associations of Paris to make a report on the field and base hospitals.

"It was my good fortune to drive several staff officers to the lines in my car and as a result I happened to see a small slice of the battle of the Aisne," she said. "The officers were anxious to watch the artillery operations, so I took them to a point which I am not at liberty to mention on the heights overlooking the Aisne, where a battery was engaged with the Germans across the river."

"The officers apologetically informed me they would have to leave me, as they were going forward under fire so I remained behind with the chauffeur. I could hear heavy guns booming near at hand and finally curiosity overcame my discretion, so, leaving the car hidden in the woods, I started across the fields in the direction of the firing."

SEES ARTILLERY DUEL.

"Soon I could see shells bursting in the air and all of a sudden the whole scene of the artillery duel spread before me from the high plateau on which I was standing."

"Guns were below me and to my left, and the Germans were hidden on the opposite bank, but tiny puffs now and then rising above the trees showed me about where they were. It was so exciting the thought never occurred to me that I was in danger, and even when shrapnel burst a few hundred feet away I was so engrossed in the spectacle my own peril seemed wholly unimportant."

"Afterward I learned that the Germans could easily have hit me if they had wanted to. They never tried to, however, whether from an un-Teutonic sense of chivalry or because it wasn't worth wasting shells on one person, I cannot say. Shells which exploded in my neighborhood were simply those badly aimed at the battery."

AEROPLANES IN BATTLE.

"After I had been standing there for what seemed a long time my chauffeur came up and begged me to retire to a safer spot. I had started back, when we suddenly saw a Taube above the German lines and instantly afterward heard the firing of anti-aircraft guns from our side of the battle line. We stood there, the chauffeur and I, gazing breathlessly upward, and beheld a monoplane set out after the invader."

"Then we witnessed that most thrilling of all conflicts, a duel in the air. As I stood looking up at the two machines circling above each other I realized, for the first time, I think, what a terrible business war was."

"There was something indescribably sinister and vicious about the movements of those two graceful craft, each seeking to destroy the other. I shuddered with the horror of it, yet even then no feeling of personal fear came to me. I can't explain why, except that one is so enthralled by these things one seems to forget one's self. After that I had enough."

A CALL TO THE MARITIME FARMERS

In a foot-page exhortation, The Maritime Farmer, published at Sussex, N.B., urges the farmers of the maritime region to greater production during the coming year. The Farmer says in part:

"But suppose Canada does not reach the state where her men must go to the front. We still can be of inestimable assistance to the motherland. Every acre of soil that is possible to prepare should be broken for next season's crop. England is in her death grips. To Canada she must look for food, and our duty is to see that the men at the front are fed. There lies our goal—it is not to be a question this year of best prices in best markets. We are to feed the men in the trenches. Lord Kitchener is credited with the statement that the war will last eighteen months. These long, dreary months will be pregnant with anxiety, the loss of dear ones, the dislocation of all lines of business, and the many other sides of hell that accompanies war."

"The farmers of the Maritime Provinces should see to it that the approaching few months are put to the very best use in providing for the largest crop that it is possible to raise. There will be need for every pound of foodstuff. Canada's offer of five million bags of flour to England was received with joy and thankfulness. It is not the luxuries of life that will be in demand during the months to come, but the commonest necessities. They are produced on the farm. In addition to the food supply for men, the demand for fodder for the tens of thousands of horses at the front will be enormous. Europe, deluged in blood, cannot pro-

IMPRESSING THE NATIVES.

In a small South American state which had recently undergone a change of administration the new potentate summoned an artist and ordered new designs for all the official uniforms.

"I wish showy costumes—very showy," he said, "for people are impressed by them. I have some sketches that I myself made. Look over them and be guided by these as far as possible."

The artist examined the sketches carefully. "This," he said, turning the pages, is evidently for the navy, and this is for the army; but if you please, what is this—a long plume, a three-cornered hat, yellow dress coat trimmed with purple, and—"

"That," replied the chief of state, gravely, "is the secret police."—Everybody's.

duce it and Canada must help. That is why every possible effort should be put forth at the earliest possible date to fit the fields for the crops of next year. No living man knows what the coming months may have in store for us. The summer of 1918 may find the fields of the Maritime Provinces tilled by women and men too old to bear arms. The very produce which the farmers are urged to make ready for may be their next year's rations on some distant battlefield.
