GERMANS ARE GETTING HARD HIT ON ALL SIDES

These reports say the Germans got as far as the western bank of the Niemen River, but found strong Russian forces in the hills on the eastern bank. Being in low and marshy ground, the Germans, according to the Russian viewpoint, were at a disadvantage and could not advance. A fight is now in progress at Mirampol, near the northeastern Prussian frontier, while further south, in the Suwalki district, the Russians claim to have turned the Germans' retreat into disorderly flight. More heavy fighting is taking place at Augustow 140 miles northeast of Warsaw, in the Province of Suwalki, where the Germans have received reinforcements and been able to take the offensive. At Grajewo, twenty-five miles southwest of Augustow, the Russians have again entered German territory, and at Mlawa the Russians claim a victory over the Germans.

ALLIES' PROGRESS SLOW BUT SURE.

On the Battlefront, via Paris, Oct. 2.—A thrill was in the air all along the extended allied lines today. The French and British troops, who have been over a fortnight in the closest contact with the Germans, felt that they had accomplished their hard task of preventing the Germans breaking through the human barrier erected between them and their main objective, Paris, and that this meant eventually victory for the Allies. The lines of the trenches make the battlefront appear like deeply scarred fields. The Allies, who quickly learned the lesson in burrowing, at some places face the Germans within a quarter of a mile. Their field entrenchments offer admirable shelter from the effects of the German artillery, which consequently reduces their casualties and permits the Allies to await in comparative safety the German attacks, which must be made across the open, and often at terrible cost.

The fury of the German onslaughts was unabated today, especially on the western wing, but their efforts were met with vigor by the Allies, who seemed to vie with each other in throwing all their strength and courage against the attackers.

The scene of the most violent attacks changes day by day. The Germans, finding it impossible to penetrate the allied lines in the vicinity of Rheims and Soissons, quickly transported many of their divisions farther northwest, and today hurled them against Roye. Again they failed, although they had not ceased their efforts to batter down the resistance.

The Allies' great turning movement continued today and their western wing extended toward Arras. Reports from the other end of the line of the front show the progress of the Allies to be slow, but sure. Hundreds of German prisoners fell into the hands of the Allies at every point and it was remarked that among them the majority were Bavarians, who seem to have been prominent in the front of the German attack.

FRENCH IN VICINITY OF ARRAS.

Paris, Oct. 2.—The following official communication was issued tonight:

"First—On our left wing one of our detachments which came out of Arras, (a fortified town and capital of the department of Pas-De-Calais), has fallen back a little toward the east and north of that city.

"North of the Somme we have made progress in front of Albert. Between Roye and Lassigny the enemy has directed violent attacks, which have been broken against our resistance.

"Second—Quiet prevails along the rest of the front. It is reported that in the neighborhood of St. Mihiel, (department of Meuse, twenty miles southeast of Verdun), there remains no enemy on the left bank of the Meuse."

CANADA'S SOLDIER BOYS WILL DO THEIR DUTY

Editor of Daily Mail:

Sir:—As the Canadian contingent has now embarked for the front, and will soon be on the firing line, a few words, we believe, with reference to them will be read with interest every where. That the people of Canada have reason to be proud of their citizen-soldiers goes without saying. That the country is proud of having made this sacrifice in the interest of the whole empire is equally true. There is hardly a man in Canada today with British blood in his veins who regrets for a moment that any one of these thirty thousand men volunteered to give their services to the country. For, consider how great would be our shame and humiliation if, after long enjoying the benefits of British protection and British liberty, we should be base enough to refuse to lift a hand in defence of British justice and liberty in this, an hour of supreme trial. What would be thought of us, what would we think of ourselves, if, while every section of the empire is reounding with preparations for faithful service to the Mother Country, we, the brightest jewel in the British crown, should remain careless, indifferent and inactive? Yet this is about what Bourassa would have us do.

That the Canadian people have realized the gravity of the situation, and have risen equal to it, is a fact, at once gratifying and reassuring—a fact which has filled the people of Great Britain with pride and pleasure. It is true that our sacrifice may be great, not only in money but in what is of infinitely more importance—in human life. But great emergencies ever call for great sacrifices. And although some of our boys may not come back, although widows and mothers may weep for husbands and sons, yet the transient tear-drop, distilled like the dew and ephemeral as the dew, will not, when placed in the balance, weight up against the life and liberties of a nation. So that even if our country should presently present the weeds of mourning, indicative of its loss, that loss, though great, is not to be compared to the loss of national honor or national liberty, both of which our boys have gone to defend. The boys themselves have made great sacrifices. They have thrown aside their business and prospects in life. They have snapped the ties of home and kindred. They have consented to face danger and death on the field, for they know full well that while far away from the soil of their country they will be face to face with enemy. But great sacrifices are seldom made which do not bring great rewards. The justice of their cause and the honor of defending it, will be their reward. The honor of maintaining the best traditions of their forefathers will be their sufficient reward. From whatever port Canadians may embark—from Quebec, St. John, Montreal or Halifax—or at whatever port they may disembark on the other side, they will, if they have history enough, find there glorious reminiscences of their fathers, and doubtless they will prove worthy of them. All Canada and the empire follow them with their prayers and the eyes of the world are upon them. When the enemy shall see Canadians bearing the flag ever forward in the face of the iron storm, they will tremble because they will know that everywhere and always, it shadows beneath its ample folds the honor, the genius and the prowess of our country.

Yours, etc.,

CANADIAN.
