

TORTURED WITH RHEUMATISM

Could Not Walk, Until "Fruit-a-tives" Completely Cured Him

CHATHAM, ONT., April 3rd, 1913.
"I am a veteran of the Crimean War and the Indian Mutiny, volunteering from the Royal Artillery into the Royal Engineers, and served under Lord Roberts during the Indian Mutiny, and am a pensioner of the British Government. Pierce hand-to-hand fighting and continual exposure, left me a great sufferer from Rheumatism, so much so that my legswelled up, making it impossible for me to walk. My bowels were so constipated that I only had one passage a week until I got to using "Fruit-a-tives". They cured me of both the Rheumatism and Constipation. In my regular employment, I walk thirty miles a day and enjoy perfect health. No more Rheumatism or Constipation. You are at perfect liberty to publish this letter if it will be advantageous to "Fruit-a-tives".

STEEL BOUNTIES MAY BE RESTORED

Ottawa, March 11—Once again the Borden government hasn't been able to make up its mind. Hon. W. T. White told parliament tonight that ever since the administration took office they had been considering the question of aiding the iron industry by the granting of bounties and had not got through considering it yet. He would consider some more, he said. In the meantime, however, it was clear that Liberalism in parliament has a very clear-cut idea as to fiscal economies and that aid to special industries at the expense of the masses of the people is not likely to secure much support from their side of the House.

On the other hand, the high protectionist Conservatives, in a series of blue-ruin speeches, maintained that unless bounties were given the industries could not at present continue to exist.

"There is crepe on the factory chimneys all over," was Mr. Carriek's jeremiad on existing conditions. And this after a brief two years of the present protectionist government. Dr. Michael Clark of Red Deer, in stating the general principle of Liberal tariff policy, maintained that the first consideration must be the primary industry of agriculture and the need of wider markets without first seeking to bolster up secondary protected industries.

Mr. MacDonald of Pictou, severely scored the minister of finance. He was continually seeking to cast aspersions on the Laurier administration, as was the wont of those who for reasons best known to themselves changed their convictions.

The Pictou man reminded Mr. White that until 1911 he had professed to be a follower of the Liberal chief and it did not lie in his mouth to criticize the policy he had supported. Mr. MacDonald also scored Mr. White for challenging Sir Wilfrid's statement regarding unemployment in Canada. His scoffing was now condemned out of the mouths of his own supporters.

The whole trouble was, Mr. MacDonald declared, that Mr. White was hopelessly incompetent to deal with the situation. His incompetence had never been more manifest than tonight when the only answer he could make to his followers who had brought the existing situation before him had been:

"I have been thinking about that for two years and more."

GREAT BRAIN CASE OF BURNS AS SHOWN BY SKULL

It has taken almost a century for certain facts concerning the cerebral development of Robert Burns to become generally known. A writer in the London sphere refers almost anonymously to the fact that early in the nineteenth century, in the year that Jean Armour, Burn's widow, died, the family of Robert Burns gave their consent to having a cast made of the skull of the poet, dead thirty-eight years previously. The science of phrenology had just then been interesting Scotch physicians, and a paper was drawn up containing the results of the phrenological examination of Burn's skull, with drawing of the cast. It is these memorials of the poet that Mr. Arthur Keith now examines, beginning with some generalizations about the present method of drawing conclusions from physiological aspects, and using a tone almost deprecatory in fear that the sensibilities of Burn's worshippers will be hurt by what may be regarded as an unreverential way of treating the poet's physical remains:

HAD VERY LARGE BRAIN

"Most of us have faith in the size of head or expanse of brow as an index of mental ability; our speculations along such lines have been upset by our daily experience. We place our trust rather in the eye, the mouth, the expression, the manner in which the countenance lights up. Burns had an eye. 'I never saw such another eye in a human head,' said Sir Walter Scott. Had Sir Walter shared Dr. George Combe's predilection for the study of heads I am quite certain he would have discovered that the poet's brain was quite as remarkable as his eye. In recent years Miss Lee and Professor Parson have invented a fairly accurate method of calculating the size of the brain from the dimensions of the skull. This method indicates that Burns had a brain measuring 1,720 cubic cm.—1,500 cubic cm. being the size of brain for an average Scotchman. The great size of the head gives a key to the remark made by Sir Walter Scott, viz. 'His countenance was more massive than it looks in any of his portraits.'"

"Unfortunately, the east of the skull leaves off at the lower margin of the eye-sockets, hence I am unable to give any exact measurements relating to the lower part of the face. The width of the face, taken just below the eye-sockets, measures 134 mm., fully a quarter of an inch beyond the width of the average man's face. Yet the cheek-bones as may be seen from the various portraits as from the skull cast, were neither high nor prominent; the greatest width of the face lay well behind the eye-sockets. Anatomists do not include the forehead in measuring the length of the face, because its upper limit is hard to define; they measure from the root of the nose to the lower margin of the chin. The well developed average man has a face length of 120 mm. From the various portraits I infer that the poet's face was of average length, about 120 mm., but his face was above the average width. When however, a face of rather more than normal dimensions is painted as part of a head altogether abnormal dimensions it appears dwarfed; hence Sir Walter's Scott's remark that artists had not done justice to the massiveness of Burn's features.

GREAT MEASUREMENTS.

"In order to assist the reader in realizing the remarkable dimensions of the poet's skull, on rather brain-case, I here set various views of it side by side with the corresponding view of a skull of nearly the average size. The profile shows its exceeding length, viz., 206 mm., a good half-inch beyond the average. Even the Edinburgh matters, accustomed to provide for exceptionally large heads, must have some difficulty in meeting the needs of the poet. The skull also is remarkably wide 153 mm. The proportion of the width to the length of the skull is of interest to those who study and discriminate human races; in Burn's case the width is 74 per cent of the length. He was thus not only of the large headed but also the long-headed type. The height of the skull—the degree to which the roof rises above the earholes—reveals a Scotch feature. The head of the typical Scot has a low-pitched roof. The height of Burn's skull is 125 mm.—quite a good figure in itself, but low when compared with the great length and breadth measurements."

Then the writer deals with what he regards as aspect of Burn's hitherto untouched:

"That he was a Scot of Scots goes without saying. Racial mixture is just as marked north of the Tweed as south of it; from John o' Groat's to Land's End we are a hybrid people. Can we assign Burns with some degree of certainty to any of the known racial elements? Beyond doubt we can. Recent researches by the professor of anatomy in the University of Glasgow provide us with the materials for solving the problem. A few years ago Professor Bryce undertook a systematic examination of certain ancient cairns in the island of Arran—an island which Burns must have scanned many a time from his native Ayrshire shore. In the very oldest of these cairns Professor Bryce recovered skulls of the same type.

EDITORS AND OFFICERS PUT UNDER ARREST

Rio Janeiro, March 11—A stage of siege has been proclaimed here and there have been many arrests. It is believed that the cause of the agitation in military quarters is connected with the imbroglio at Ceara.

The governor of Ceara, a committee of ladies of Ceara and the officers of the garrison have telegraphed to the military club here, asking it to intercede with the President to obtain protection against the rebels. The President has also received many similar petitions. Many families are leaving for Talez. In well informed quarters it is asserted that the President intended to resign but has changed his mind, yielding to the pressure of his friends.

The military club did not hold a meeting last night on account of the absence of the executive committee. A majority of the club is favorable to the Governor of Ceara, while the committee is supporting the rebels.

Mr. Edwin V. Morgan, the United States ambassador, has returned here and has been welcomed by a representative of Dr. Lauro Muller, the minister of foreign affairs.

The stage of siege has been proclaimed in the City of Rio Janeiro, the Town of Niteroy, five miles east of the capital, and Petropolis, capital of the State of Rio Janeiro, which is to remain in force until March 31.

The announcement was made as a preventive measure against any possible troubles which might be started by the disturbing elements of the population as a result of the recent resurrection in the State of Ceara, where the situation was reported to be becoming worse.

The managing editors of three of the principal newspapers, A. Epoca, Sotelo Da Noite and O. Imparcial, were placed under arrest, while Generals Thaumaturgo Azevedo and Felio Mendes de Moraes, two colonels, and some other officers of the army also were made prisoners.

A strict censorship as immediately was established, the government by telegraphic communication and all the troops were confined to barracks for any eventualities. There were no disorders in the federal capital.

HON. W. L. M. KING SPEAKS IN NEW YORK

Ottawa, Ont., March 11—Hon. W. L. MacKenzie King left for New York Friday afternoon by special invitation to represent Canada at a dinner to be given by the Republican Club of New York, at which the subject to be discussed by the evening's speakers will be the centenary of peace between the United States and Great Britain and the present world conditions of national unrest. The Republican Club of New York is one of the strongest political clubs in the United States. The other speakers of the evening were Mr. Andrew Carnegie, Hon. Robert Bacon, formerly American ambassador to France; Hon. Oscar Strauss, a member of President Taft's cabinet and member of the Hague Court of Arbitration. Mr. King was invited to attend as being the man "who gave the first public expression and impulse to the peace centenary."

It will be remembered that the idea which has now been taken up in Great Britain, the United States and Canada, was first suggested by Mr. King at a Harvard banquet in 1909 and he was a member of the original committee organized at Lake Mohonk the following year to carry out the scheme.

SKY GAZERS WILL SEE AN ECLIPSE

Washington, D.C., March 10—Observers of the celestial spheres are discussing the partial eclipse of the moon which is to take place tomorrow night. The phenomenon will be visible to the inhabitants throughout this section of the globe. The moon will enter the shadow of the earth at 9:33 p.m., Washington standard time, this being the beginning of the eclipse. During the next hour and twenty-nine minutes the moon's light will be gradually merged in the shadow, until by four minutes past eleven the middle of the eclipse is reached. Then the moon will begin to emerge from the shadow any by a few minutes past midnight the eclipse will be over so far as this section of the country is concerned.

WOULD COUGH SO HARD Would Turn Black In The Face.

A cough cold is one of the most dangerous kind. It leaves the throat or lungs, and sometimes both, affected if not taken care of immediately.

Obstinate coughs and colds yield to the grateful soothing action of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, containing as it does all the lung healing virtues of the Norway pine tree.

Mrs. C. J. Selig, Dartmouth, N.S., writes:—"My little boy, six years old, had a dreadful, hard cough. At night time he would cough so hard he would turn black in the face, and at times he would cough nearly an hour before he would stop. I tried different cough syrups, but they did him no good. The little fellow was wasting away, as he could not eat or sleep, the cough troubled him so. I got a bottle of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and it did him so much good I got another. Now I am only too glad to be able to write this to tell how thankful I am, and to tell every mother to use nothing else."

Price, 25 and 50 cents.

Be sure you get "Dr. Wood's" when you ask for it. See the trade mark; the three pine trees.
