GREAT GERMAN CELEBRATION

Berlin, Aug. 8.—The celebration of the centenary of the great firm of Krupps, for which preparations have been going forward for nearly two years, began today at Essen. The celebration is attended by the Emperor William at the head of a brilliant galaxy of his fellow-German sovereigns, generals, admirals, and civic dignitaries.

The celebration will be of a most imposing and memorable character. The chief feature will be a great pageant which will symbolize the substitution of firearms for the old weapons of the middle ages. The principal scene of the pageant will be an episode from the life of the Emperor Maximilian I., and 250 retired officers of the German army are to play the parts of knights.

During the period of the celebration the Emperor and other royal guests are quartered at the Villa Hugel, the splendid country house of Herr Krupp von Bohlen-Halbach, who by marry the older daughter of the late Herr Krupp became the head of the firm. The villa is located just outside Essen. The other notable guests at the celebration are being accommodated at the hotel in Essen maintained by the Krupp company exclusively for their guns, armor and ships, who are always at Essen in large numbers.

The strong personal interest that the Emperor is manifesting in the celebration is not surprising in view of the fact that the firm of Krupps is almost a government institution. The armament branch of the business is in direct touch with the German army and navy and studies their interests before anything else. The firm is in short an integral part of the German Empire and during the past decade or two it has done more for the military power of the empire than any commercial firm has ever before been able to do for its government. Its patriotism needs no better proof than that the firm, while making the guns and armor for nearly all of the leading nations of the world, has steadfastly refused to do any business with France since the Franco-Prussian war.

The foundation of the world-renowned firm was laid in 1812 by the first Alfred Krupp. But it was his son the second of the name who gave the works their international character. This he succeeded in doing after seemingly insurmountable difficulties had been overcome. According to his own statements Alfred Krupp's profit for fifteen years were no more than enough to pay the wages of his workmen and frequently he was at a loss to pay the postage of his correspondence.

Alfred Krupp saw the possibilities of the great exposition to open in London in 1851 and decided to take advantage of it. He had many important discoveries in the casting of large quantities of Bessemer steel, which has always been an insurmountable task previous to his time. The exhibit he sent to London fairly astonished the world and it at once established his reputation. Orders began to pour in and soon there was plenty of work to do at the Essen foundries.

The making of heavy ordnance, which has made the name of these works famous the world over was not then a prominent part of the business. One of the first large orders Herr Krupp got for firearms was four years later when Prussia gave him the contract for her new breech-loaders. Soon general foundry work and the making of small arms began to take second place at Essen, as heavy steel siege guns and armor plate demanded more and more attention.

In 1832, after the second Alfred Krupp had been at the helm six years there were but ten men employed at the foundry. But after he fairly got started Herr Krupp extended his business rapidly borrowing large sums of capital for the purpose and adding new workmen by thousands to his employees by the stroke of a pen.

Today the firm employs upwards of 70,000 workmen. More than forty thousand are employed at Essen, while the remainder are distributed at the great collieries owned by the firm, at its iron ore mines, the works at Muldurg and at the great shipyard at Kiel. The firm has many miles of its own railroads and also operates its own telephone and telegraph lines, electric works and street railways.

Alfred Krupp, the real founder of the firm died in 1887 and was succeeded in 1887 and was succeeded by his son Frederick A. Krupp. The latter died in 1902. At the time of his death he was by far the richest man in Germany. The bulk of his fortune and the control of the firm were left to his daughter, Frau Bertha Krupp. In 1906 Frau Krupp married Herr Von Bohlen und Halbach, a young German diplomat who has since been the active head of the Krupp works.

The Twin City Rapid Transit Company has announced an increase of wages to two thousand trainmen in St. Paul and Minneapolis, Minn., amounting to practically ten per cent. The increase was made voluntarily and as a surprise to the men.
