Doctor Said She Had Bright's Disease.

DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS CURED HER.

Bright's disease is a term applied to one of the most serious of all diseases of the kidneys, the symptoms of which are often of a severe character.

Severe pains in the back appear at first and are followed by disturbances of the urinary organs which show that the urine contains a large amount of albumen. Dropsy is also another forerunner of the dreaded Bright's disease. On the first sign of any kidney trouble you should at once put the kidneys right by the use of Doan's Kidney Pills. The pill that cures kidney troubles only.

Mrs. C. A. Helstead, Mooswa, Alta., writes: "Last May I was taken down sick. The doctor told me I had Bright's disease. My kidneys got so bad I could not rest day or night. The doctor's medicine did not give me any relief. I used four boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills, and they put me in good shape again."

Doan's Kidney Pills are the original kidney pill, so when you ask for "Doan's" do not accept any others with similar names.

Price, 50c per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

When ordering direct specify "Doan's."

SOME EGG POINTERS

Producer Should Study Wishes of Consumer For Best Results

The consumer unconsciously plays an important part in fixing the standard for the first-grade eggs. Popular prejudices may not always be supported by scientific fact, but, as the consumer is ultimately responsible for the demand, the producer will find it to his advantage to study public requirements carefully and endeavor to meet them as far as lies in his power.

The interval between the time the eggs are laid and the time they reach the consumer should not be more than three to five days, according to the season of the year. If older than this they must face competition with foreign supplies, and have lost a measure of their new-laid quality. Unless the poultry keeper delivers his eggs to private customers he loses control of them after they have passed out of his hands, but he can at least ensure that he is responsible for no part of the delay.

The egg should be not less than 2 ounces in weight; smaller eggs may be equal in nutritive value to those of larger size, but the consumer has an undoubted preference for the latter. In shape it is desirable that the eggs should be neither too long and narrow nor too wide and short; provided, however, the shell is even and not abnormal it does not greatly matter. The shell should be strong and devoid of any roughness. A thick shell may mean that the proportion of edible matter to total weight is less than when the shell is thin, but this is more than compensated for by the fact that there is less evaporation, and the transport qualities are greater.

While it may be true that there is no appreciable greater value in eggs with tinted shells the consumer usually prefers them to those having white shells, and the producer would, therefore, include at least a proportion of tinted eggs.

While it is important that eggs should present an attractive external appearance, their actual food value can only be determined by an examination of the contents. Examination should allow a small area at the broader end of the egg. When an egg is new-laid the air space is scarcely perceptible, but it increases in size every day. The contents should be clear and free from spots representing moulds, or dark areas showing development of the germ or bacterial colonies in the white.

When broken the white and yolk ligaments should be strong and firm and the yolk round. A flat yolk indicates age or a "stale" egg. The best yolks are reddish-yellow in color, and not pure yellow. If boiled before it is more than three to five days old the white does not thicken to the extent that it will later, but remains milky and flaky.

Finally, it may be said that infected eggs are to be preferred to those which have been fertilized.

Why Our Eyes Sparkle

Merriment causes a frequent movement of the eyelids up and down, and as it is the function of the eyelids to release a tear each time it comes down, the repetition has the effect of covering the eye with considerable moisture.

The light shining on this moisture gives the sparkling effect.

Inasmuch as the merry appearance of the eye is caused by tears, we are apt to shed them from laughing; as well as from crying. Tears are intimately associated with our merry and sad moods.

which have bound France and Ireland through the centuries and the heartiest congratulations were extended to Ireland on her final victory in the fight for her liberties. Altogether the mission was a splendid success, bringing out the following facts:

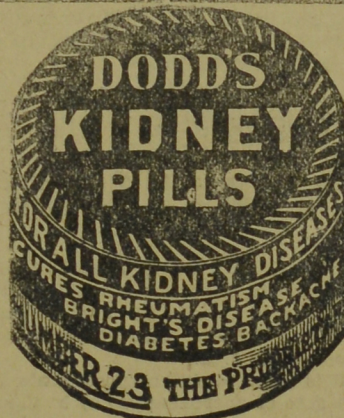

ALL PARTIES UNITED.

All the parties in France are united, the Catholics particularly resenting with horror the idea that they are not fighting as valiantly and unselfishly as any other class for the liberation of their beloved country. Every Catholic supports loyally the French ministry; many of the bravest generals are of the Catholic faith; strong Catholic sections are as loyal as any other part of the population; finally, the French Catholics look forward confidently, as do all other Frenchmen, to a great and final victory over the insolent invaders.

I see also growing signs that the war may bring softer feelings between the warring sections of the French nation and that after the war France will be ruled so tolerantly and wisely as to enable Frenchmen of every creed freely to join in an effort to help the government increase the well being of the country.

FEDERAL ELECTION WILL

BE HELD ON JUNE 14 OR 21

Ottawa, April 30—Dissolution of parliament next week and an election either on June 14 or June 21 is freely predicted in the capital today by politicians in close touch with Hon. Robert Rogers, who is again dominant in the party councils.

Mr. Rogers has apparently won over Premier Borden and a majority of the cabinet to his view, that it is now or never with the present administration. Politics has been put ahead of patriotism and although the die is not yet finally cast every indication points to the fact that Premier Borden will ask His Royal Highness for dissolution within a few days.

When Hon. Mr. Rogers came back from Winnipeg last week and found his colleagues cold when he proposed an election, it is said he was so vexed that he threatened to go on strike. Then he went to bed with the gripe. From his sick room he kept up the pressure and has compelled the ministers, one after another, to bow to his dictation. When a majority of the ministers had been won over Premier Borden was taken into the Rogers camp and he is now, according to well informed politicians here, with the "minister of elections."

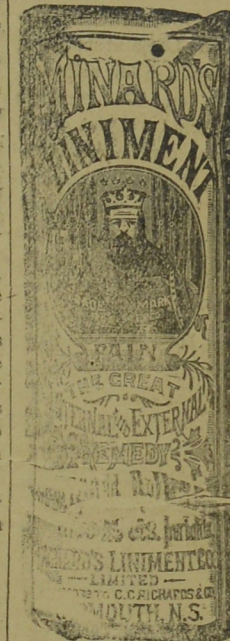

It is believed that the Duke of Connaught would prefer to see the British oratorise adhered to and the country left undisturbed by an election until the close of the war. It will be the unpleasant duty of Sir Robert Borden to persuade the governor general that the reasons for an election are sufficiently serious to warrant recruiting being interrupted and business conditions disturbed.

His Royal Highness' advisers still have His Royal Highness to deal with.

Hon. Louis Coderre, secretary of state, is going out, to accept a Quebec judgeship, and J. M. Teller, leader of the opposition in the Quebec legislature, is coming in. The change is being made to strengthen the government politically in Quebec.

Votes for the soldiers at the front have been sent forward in the custody of Harold Mayne Daly, son of the late Hon. T. Mayne Daly. It is of sinister significance that the instructions for taking the soldiers' vote contain an intimation that if a soldier feels incapable, for any physical cause, of marking his ballot, he may have the deputy returning officer mark it for him. This means that many soldiers in the ranks will have their votes cast for them by government officials.

Only a great outburst of party sentiment against the crime of plunging the country into the turmoil of a bitter partisan struggle in the present critical war situation will cause the government once again to change its mind.
