MR. CARTER'S REPLY TO THE GLOBE'S INSINUATIONS

To the Editor of The Telegraph:

Sir.—The Globe of Friday, commenting upon the change in the government of Manitoba, takes occasion to revive the slander that there was a "deal" in connection with the Dugal charges—a slander that, while the royal commission was in session last year was referred to nearly every day in its editorial columns. The Globe says:

"The Dugal investigation brought out some details of an attempted deal but the white light of truth proved a very substantial basis for the allegations."

No statement could be more dishonest or misleading. There was no evidence given showing that there was even an attempt to shelve or withdraw the Dugal charges by any one associated with the making of them. On the contrary, F. B. Carvell, K.C., and E. S. Carter voluntarily took the witness stand and swore that they not only had no knowledge of any such "deal" but that they had not even been approached by any supporter or friend of Mr. Fleming with any proposition to withdraw or amend the charges.

In spite of this The Globe returns at this date with the statement that "the white light of truth proved a very substantial basis for the allegations."

The "white light of truth" simply showed that J. B. M. Baxter, smarting under disclosures respecting a certain $500 check, which had been paid to him while a member of the legislature as a retainer by the St. John & Quebec Railway and which, when an investigation seemed imminent he returned, went upon the witness stand and confessed that by an arrangement with A. R. Gould, he was to receive $2,000 a year for his services and that the $500 was simply payment for the first three months; that he did return the $500 check and, in addition, while on the witness stand he gave currency to a rumor he had heard respecting a "deal" or arrangement whereby the charges against Fleming were to be withdrawn on certain considerations and that there was to be a payment of $10,000 to Mr. Carter and others for detective services. Mr. Baxter's evidence was simply hearsay; he had no personal knowledge; he had simply "heard" the story. Like The Globe, he had no facts but he sought to destroy the effect of the evidence against him and against Fleming by drawing this "red herring" across the trail and thus divert the attention of the public.

It was at this same session of the inquiry, by the way, that Mr. Baxter (now attorney general of this province) refused to give evidence respecting the authorship of the famous fore-shores bill but at this session of the legislature he showed how well founded Mr. Carvell's information was by confessing on the floor of the House that he had prepared and furnished the material for the "fore-shores" bill.

In the same editorial in Friday's issue The Globe says:

"To quote again the New Brunswick experience, it is well known that investigations are not always as thorough as they might be. The things not proven are sometimes of greater importance than the things proven, and bluster and bravado does not always mean a maximum of effort."

The Globe has shown so much "appreciation" of Mr. Carvell's work in disclosing the condition of political affairs in New Brunswick that of course, its terms "bluster" and "bravado" could not apply to him, but it spoke truly about the lack of thoroughness in investigations. Had the books of the Valley Railway been brought from New York much more would have been disclosed; had Mr. Gould been compelled to answer as to his payments to politicians there would have been more facts; had Mr. Corbett and Mr. Berry been told by the government that they must come and give their evidence, many matters would have been cleared up. But these things were not done. The government of New Brunswick lent no assistance to bring out the truth; instead of that, George W. Fowler, representing the attorney general, objected and fought every attempt of Mr. Carvell's to expose the truth. Mr. Teed, representing Mr. Fleming, was expected to block all the evidence he could, but the legal representative of the province, Mr. Fowler, had no right to prevent the truth being told.

The Globe has not condemned Mr. Fowler nor the government for thus attempting to block the truth, but it has never lost an opportunity to sneer at and belittle the efforts of Mr. Carvell to show the people of New Brunswick how they were being plundered and now more than a year after the charges were made its unfriendly and unfair tactics are shown again by its reference to a "deal" which Mr. Carvell's sworn evidence disposed of effectually.

Yours truly,
E. S. CARTER.

BELGIAN QUEEN CHATS WITH SOLDIERS

London, May 18.—The Daily News correspondent says that Sir Cecil Hertslet, British consul general at Antwerp, speaking at Eastbourne, stated that wounded officers had just given a touching description of an incident that occurred the other day in the Belgian trenches on the Yser.

Queen Elizabeth went to speak to her soldiers. The men in the trenches did not recognize the kind and graceful lady as their Queen. One soldier said: "Come along madame, make yourself at home!" and another, "Ah, but madame, this trench is dangerous." The Queen replied, "Not for me, I'm so small."

One of the men produced a sack and placed it on the slope of the trench. The Queen sat down on the sack and began to distribute the chocolate and cigarettes she had brought. Presently another soldier came from another position, and, recognizing her majesty, said, "Oh, the Queen!" All the soldiers then of course, rose and stood at attention. Her majesty, after expressing kind wishes for their welfare, left the trench.

On the sack on which she had sat were inscribed the words, "Resting place of the Queen." The soldier to whom the sack belonged was asked whether he would sell it as a souvenir, and he replied: "Not for a thousand francs."

LUSITANIA 'MURDERERS' DENOUNCED

(Boston Record)

"The time for mild words or silence has passed. Neutrality is the refuge of cowards," declared Rev. William H. van Allen of the Church of the Advent, as he grasped the Stars and Stripes in one hand and the Union Jack in the other, during a memorial service for the Lusitania victims held at the church this morning.

Dr. van Allen, who has been a prominent supporter of the Allies, advertised his meeting this morning as a memorial to those murdered on the Lusitania.

The big church was crowded with hearty supporters of Germany's opponents. The English, French and Belgian consuls were in the audience. "President Wilson has made plain what we expect, and it is not too late for an apology," said Dr. van Allen. "But if repentance is wanting to the Germans, may God defend the right and scatter the people who desired this great war."

Before beginning his sermon, which developed into one of the most bitter attacks on the Germans heard in this city since the beginning of the war, Dr. Van Allen read this text: "They make haste to shed innocent blood; their thoughts are thoughts of iniquity, desolation and destruction are in their paths. The way of peace they know not, and there is no justice in their goings. They have made their crooked paths; whosoever goeth therein doth not know peace." "These words come naturally and fittingly to our lips this day," said Dr. Van Allen. "Three years ago we came to this place to celebrate a similar service for those drowned in the sinking of the Titanic. This, the sinking of the Lusitania, is more dreadful than the Titanic tragedy."

"This act was the deliberate, long contemplated deed of a great national government. The Lusitania was plunged into the deep with those she bore upon their lawful occasions."

"To slay one man is murder. What is it to slay twelve hundred? Murder most foul, before which Christendom stands aghast."

NOTHING IN HISTORY TO MATCH

"The sinking of the ocean liner was a massacre from which the heathen would have refrained. It is an unparalleled calamity. The time has passed for mild words or silence and neutrality becomes the refuge of cowards."

"There is nothing in history which matches this murder. Not only were men of a hostile country drowned, but non-combatants and women and children, those too of a neutral country, went down."

Dr. van Allen told of his voyage on the Lusitania last October and drew a vivid picture of the scenes that occurred when the torpedo struck the huge liner. He paid a tribute to the bravery of Charles Frohman and Alfred Vanderbilt and then told the crowded church of the death of Mr. and Mrs. Steward Macsod, who were both well known to him.

"The eddy currents around the Irish coast are even yet washing up the bodies of those who died by this dastardly deed. They call upon the God of justice as well as on the God of Mercy. God grant that they did not die in vain."

"Who is responsible for this crime?"

Was Troubled With Choking Spells and Shortness of Breath.

When the heart becomes affected, there ensues a feeling of a choking sensation, a shortness of breath, palpitation, throbbing, irregular beating, smothering sensation, and dizziness and a weak, sinking, all-gone feeling of oppression and anxiety.

Many men and women drag along with weary step, and become worn out and haggard, when otherwise they could be strong and healthy if they would only pay some attention to the first signs of heart or nerve trouble. On the first sign of the heart becoming weakened or the nerves unstrung Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills should be given a fair trial and you will find that they will soon correct both these organs.

Mr. James Leard, Tryon, P.E.I., writes: "Just a few lines to let you know what Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have done for me. I had choking spells, and was troubled with weakness of the heart and shortness of breath. I tried three doctors but they all failed. A neighbor recommended me to try your pills, so I got a box and they helped me so much I have taken six boxes. I highly recommend them to all who are troubled with their heart and nerves. I was not able to do any work for over two years; now I can do quite a bit."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50 cents per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

The criminal is the German government. The German War Book lauded such deeds. There stands the criminal before the bar of justice of God and mankind—the criminal in the spiked helmet.

"We distinguish between the Khiser and the German government. The Germans, while they are not entirely guiltless, are not entirely free from responsibility, and will in the future turn with loathing from the ones who spattered the German name with blood."

"We who read German philosophy and theology know what their theories were, but we hoped they only existed in the world of theories."

BORDEN MINISTER VS METHODIST MINISTER

(Toronto Globe.)

Methodists in all parts of Canada know the high personal character and the blameless life of Prof. Salem G. Bland of Wesley College, Winnipeg. As a schoolboy and a college student, he was known in many centres of Eastern Canada during his father's itineraries as a Methodist minister. In later years his own ministerial life brought him into intimate acquaintance and close personal friendship with many thousands of people in different parts of the country. As professor in Winnipeg he has won for himself a very high and honored place, not only as a scholar and teacher, but also as an upright, absolutely sincere and public-spirited citizen.

No intelligent Methodist needs to be told of Dr. Bland's sanity of judgment and purity of motive, but for others this much may be worth saying by way of introduction to a significant passage in the address of the Hon. Robert Rogers, Canada's minister of public works, in Montreal recently. That address was carefully prepared and copies of it were furnished for publication. The following paragraphs were omitted from The Globe's published report yesterday, but are of public interest. The minister of the crown had just been assailing clericalism who had spoken against political corruption and war graft. He calls those clergymen "simply minded and innocent people" and thus then proceeds:

"It might be well for those individuals to better study and better understand the true conditions before undertaking to enter upon a discussion of public affairs, for, if they have no better knowledge of their Bible and its teachings than they appear to have when they undertake to discuss public questions, all I can say is, may God have mercy upon the souls of the unfortunate people that depend upon such individuals for spiritual instruction and direction."

"Of course the case of Prof. Bland is somewhat different in that he is a well known professional hypocrite and has ever been ready to endorse, approve, and applaud every crooked act that has ever been known to have been committed by any Liberal. Such an individual as this, who has never been guilty, when speaking politically, to have any regard for either principle or truth, one can well afford to look upon with feelings of sorrow rather than of anger."

Those words were written beforehand. The man who wrote them and spoke them is the most dominant minister in the present government of Canada. In the light of this utterance, and of his whole record and reputation, is there one well-informed Methodist, Conservative or Liberal, in all Canada who would believe Hon. Robert Rogers on any question on which personal truthfulness is of the slightest importance? Why should such a man dominate Canada's government?
