strong plea for honesty and efficiency but we did not enter into matters of political controversy. Instead of impeding the government, we favored it, for which we received no credit, but it is understood by the people of the country and those who know especially.

PROTESTED INCREASED TAXES

"It is true, when it came to the ways and means of raising the necessary revenue to carry on the war we dissented from their position. We could not agree to the fiscal measure which they proposed in order to levy the revenue. And why did we not agree? Because we were only too convinced, we were, only too sure that the measure was ill-conceived, not calculated to bring in revenue, but rather to be oppressive upon the people. We put our objection, we put our protest, but we did not carry our objection farther than putting a protest before the people, leaving the responsibility to those upon whom responsibility must rest. Our conduct in that respect has been compared in the press of the government with that of the Unionist opposition in Great Britain. I challenge the comparison, I welcome it, and I am ready to leave it to the judgment of Canada. It is to the credit of the Unionist opposition in Great Britain that, so far as they could, they supported the policy of the government. They joined with the government in order to carry on the tremendous task which is now imposed upon the government of Mr. Asquith.

OBLIGATIONS ON OPPOSITION

"Does it mean that the opposition were dumb? Does it mean that they were not critical? Does it mean that they were simply recording clocks to the will of the government of Mr. Asquith? No. Don't you know that the opposition would not support the policy of the chancellor of the exchequer upon a certain measure? Mr. Lloyd George, in his speech which has become famous, declared there was an enemy more dangerous to Britain than the German army. That enemy was the liquor traffic, and he stated that he would introduce measures in order to limit, or, if possible, extinguish, that traffic. Our conduct in that respect has been compared in the press of the government with that of the Unionist opposition in Great Britain. I challenge the comparison, I welcome it, and I am ready to leave it to the judgment of Canada. It is to the credit of the Unionist opposition in Great Britain that, so far as they could, they supported the policy of the government. They joined with the government in order to carry on the tremendous task which is now imposed upon the government of Mr. Asquith.

BRITISH PRECEDENT

IN PARLIAMENT

"On the 5th of May the newspapers of this country reported the speech which Mr. Lloyd George delivered, only hinting a policy of new taxation upon wine, beer and spirits. Immediately Austen Chamberlain, the financial critic of the opposition declared that he would oppose these
