PREPARING FOR AN ELECTION

Ottawa, Feb. 19—"I have a letter received only yesterday telling me that shoddy blankets are being manufactured in Toronto for the use of Canadian soldiers. The German spy is a gentleman as compared to the Canadian manufacturer who, when liberty and civilization are at stake, schemes and plans to sell shoddy blankets and paper boots to the government of his country for the sake of private gain."

Thus did J. H. Sinclair of Guysboro, preface his introduction in the Commons this afternoon of his bill designed to make it a criminal and indictable offense for any person to defraud the government through the sale of military supplies. The bill was referred to a special committee for consideration.

Mr. Sinclair's amendment to the Shipping Act, designed to extend the definition of coasting voyages of Canadian ships was referred to the committee on marine and fisheries for consideration.

In its two hour session today parliament ordered the production of much correspondence in connection with various war matters; referred several private bills to special committees for consideration; received two replies out of sixteen questions put to the government and heard the prime minister make a somewhat heated reply to an intimation by Mr. Turriff of Assiniboia, that Canadian volunteers on the continent were "sockless soldiers."

OUR "SOCKLESS SOLDIERS."

J. G. Turriff read a newspaper article headed "Our Sockless Soldiers Again," which stated that Sir George Perley was appealing for socks and other warm clothing and comforts for the First Canadian Contingent. This article was in the Journal of Commerce, Montreal. Mr. Turriff observed that while there was no reason why gifts should not be sent to the soldiers, it should not be necessary to have them receive socks and other necessary articles in that way. He said that the Canadian soldiers should not be without socks, especially in view of the quality of the boots supplied them.

Sir Robert Borden replied that had Mr. Turriff enquired at the militia department he would have learned that our troops were going to the front supplied with clothing and socks on precisely the same scale as the British army. However, it had probably served his purpose better to endeavor to cast discredit on the government. He was perfectly well aware, or ought to be, that in Great Britain, as well as here, the troops were being supplied with comforts by private efforts. Sir Robert thought no honorable gentleman in or out of the House would find fault with any government because the efforts were being made by private individuals and organizations.

In the empire, and in the United States as well, the women of the country had been furnishing caps, socks and belts to the soldiers at the front. It was entirely in the nature of this patriotic and voluntary appeal for comforts that Sir George Perley's appeal was made.

PUNISH CONTRACTORS.

Mr. Sinclair moved the second reading of his bill to make it an indictable offense, punishable by two years imprisonment, or $5,000 fine, to commit fraud in the sale of military or naval stores to the crown.

Government officials involved in such frauds will also be punished. Mr. Sinclair said there was at present no provision of this kind in the criminal law. If one were to credit the press, it must be believed that fraud was now being practised. Supplies furnished to Canadian soldiers had been discussed in the London press, while the minister of militia said he would like to shoot dishonest contractors. Mr. Sinclair continued that he had received a letter asking him to inform the inspector of military stores that shoddy blankets were being manufactured for the government in Toronto. Mr. Sinclair thought a German spy was a gentleman, compared with a Canadian contractor who schemed to defraud the government by selling shoddy blankets or boots or a spavined horse.

Hon. C. J. Doherty, while not hesitating to agree that any person guilty of such crimes should be condignly punished, somewhat doubted the accuracy of the statement that they were not punishable under the Criminal Code.

In the meantime, without committing the government to the principle of the bill, he moved that it be given a second reading and referred to a special committee. This was done, and the House adjourned.
