MURDERER TO DIE EARLY NEXT WEEK

Boston, Mass., Sept. 19—Chester S. Jordan, who killed his wife four years ago this month, has been taken from the jail in East Cambridge to the State prison in Charlestown, there to await death in the electric chair in accordance with the sentence of the court. According to this sentence the noted prisoner, whose case has attracted country-wide attention, will be put to death early in the coming week.

Jordan is a brother-in-law of Jesse Livermore, the young Wall Street plunger who is reputed to have made several million dollars in cotton speculation some years ago. For four years Livermore has spent freely of his immense fortune in a vain effort to save his relative from the death chair. The best lawyers in Massachusetts were retained as counsel and the case was carried to the Supreme Court of the United States. The only result was to obtain for the prisoner a short respite while his case was awaiting argument before the highest tribunal in the land.

Officials of the East Cambridge jail, where Jordan has been confined for four years, declare him to be one of the most remarkable prisoners with which they have ever met. From the hour he was arrested, while seated on a trunk in which was hidden the headless body of his slain wife, he has maintained perfect composure. The long trail, the sentence of death, even the news that the Governor had declined to interfere and by so doing had wiped away his last lingering hope for life, have failed to produce the slightest ruffle in the steady calmness of his appearance and demeanor. During the years of his confinement in jail the prisoner spent his days largely in studying the market reports, in which he displayed the same quiet interest as might a broker in his office.

Jordan's crime was of an unusually gruesome nature. Of giant build and handsome face, the young man had sought and found employment as an actor, after leaving his boyhood home in Indianapolis. Early in his stage career he met and married Mrs. Honora Eddy. The married life of the couple proved tempestuous. Mrs. Jordan, according to her husband, took to drinking and associating with other men. This led to jealous quarrels between the two and it was one of these quarrels that ended in the death of the wife.

The murder was committed in the home of the couple in Somerville. In the heat of a quarrel, according to Jordan's own statements, he struck his wife and the blow caused her death. The husband went out and bought a butcher's knife and a hack saw, with which he dismembered the body. He severed his wife's head, also the legs. Then he tried to destroy all trace of them by burning them in the furnace of his home. He put the rest of the body in a trunk and came to Boston with the ghastly burden, stopping at a boarding house preliminary to taking a steamer for New York. It was his intention to get rid of what remained of his wife by throwing the headless corpse into the water while the boat was en route for New York.

Up to this point all had gone well with the young murderer. But when he arrived at the wharf he found that the New York steamer had gone. He then hired a cabman to drive him back to the boarding house. His nervousness aroused the suspicion of the cab driver and after the latter had carried the trunk to Jordan's room he mentioned the matter to an officer. The police suspected that the trunk might contain stolen goods, as up to this time there was no suspicion that a murder had been committed. When the officers entered the room and examined the trunk against Jordan's protests they were dumb-founded by their ghastly discovery. When taken to the station the young man calmly told the entire story and an examination of the apartment in Somerville bore out the horror of the crime to which he confessed.

During the trial Jordan listened to the revolting details of the murder with the utmost nonchalance. After he had been convicted and sentence of death had been passed upon him, one of the jurors went insane. This was four days later. Counsel for Jordan appealed the case on the ground that the juror had been insane during the trial. The Massachusetts court denied the contention and the appeal was taken to the Supreme Court of the United States. The latter tribunal upheld the decision of the Massachusetts court and Jordan was sentenced for the second time to die in the electric chair.

SIR WILFRID'S MOTTO

"When I was at the school of St. Lin in my boyhood days," said Sir Wilfrid, "when it occurred in class or recreation that I failed to attain the end I was striving for, my old master used to say to me: 'Crache-toi dans les mains, et reprends-toi.' (Spit on your hands, and start again.)"

"Though I am reaching the end of my career, I have never forgotten that advice, and the Liberal party is about to put it into practice with the greatest confidence possible."—Sir Wilfrid Laurier at Marieville.

THE OLD MAN BLOQUENT

"We, gentlemen, are prouder of our defeat than our friends are of their victory. The skies have cleared. Like St. Paul on the road to Damascus, the people have had their eyes opened—Castors, Nationalists, Blues—you now see the manner of men you voted for. What illusions, fallen, what hopes destroyed, what ideals broken, what hopes destituted, what idols overthrown. How much humiliation in place of the great glory that was promised us."—Sir Wilfrid Laurier at Marieville, P. Q.
