TIGHT? not a break in the joints

Rain and wind play queer tricks with shingles. If there are openings where the joints lap, trust the wind to find them and drive in water and snow.

You cannot force water through a PRESTON roof, even with a fire hose.

Be sure to see how the joints of the Preston Safe Lock Shingles hook together. They are continuous wind-and-water-proof joints, solid at the corners and solid along the top and sides. All joints—four sides—are lock joints; no lapping but solid tight locks that water cannot penetrate—that sagging, or wind storms cannot pull apart.

ACID Tests Protect You

The British Government taught us how to buy iron. We borrowed their method of testing with acid to make sure of the galvanizing. We know that Preston Safe-lock Shingles will continue to make good friends for us among the farmers.

ENGLISHMAN ADVISES TOURISTS ABOUT BUYING RUGS

London, March 26—A correspondent of The Daily Mail writes home from Salonica some very good advice on rug buying and shopping in Turkey.

An excited Turk was addressing a party of visitors to his shop in the bazaar at Salonica. By his side were five other Turks, each wearing a red fez. They acted as chorus. When one of the purchasing party offered £5 for a rug which the Turk priced at £50, the chorus party lifted up their hands and cast up their eyes to the heavens and moaned with sorrow to think anyone could so attempt to rob them.

It was not the first visit to the bazaar. Some of the tourists had been there before to spy out the land and to try to learn the methods of the Turkish merchants. One of our party had shown great aptitude for dealing with the Turks, so he was unanimously elected bargainer-in-chief and the others were appointed a chorus to decry all goods shown.

So the party passed along the stone paved street. Cries of distress from six Turks were raised.

"Won't you look at this beautiful rug?"

"I will sell it you cheap."

"I have some fine costumes—Antique—very fine, much nice. Come along, gentlemen."

"No, you are thieves," declared the bargainer. "I won't do business with you. You waste my time. You try to rob me. Go away."

"But look at this gentlemen," pointing to a rug.

"Well," said the bargainer, "what about it? It is rubbish. I will give you ten francs for it. I will put it in my garden for the dog to sleep on."

PARTY ENTERS A RUG STORE.

"Ten francs," shrieked the head of the land pirates. "Ten francs!" echoed his chorus of Turks in a despairing tone.

"Would you like the shop for ten francs?" asked the leader in a caustic but deferential tone.

"Yes, would he like the shop for ten francs?" chanted the chorus.

"Come inside and I will show you much for little. Come inside."

And so the party drifted in and sat themselves down.

Seats were brought forward, a Turk appeared with a tray of small cups of Turkish coffee, glasses of water and cigarettes, and the bargaining commenced.

"My Lynchem," as the bargainer-in-chief was called, commenced by saying he would not look at the rug, for which the "thieves" had asked £65.

It annoyed him to think of it, and if they brought it forward he would leave the shop.

"So," said the Turk in despair. "Very good, said. How much you give for it?"

"I won't look at it. I have told you."

"Fifty pounds."

"No, you thief. Seven pounds ten."

"Seven pounds ten! It is silk—beautiful. It is made by hand. Cheap at hundred pounds English. I will be mad to let you have it for £45."

"No, not a penny more than six pounds ten," replied our man.

The chorus of Turks wailed.

"Six pounds ten! You say before seven pounds ten."

"Yes, now I say six pounds ten. In a minute it will be six pounds."

"Six pounds!"

The Turk looked around at the impassive faces of the tourists. He evidently decided that the baronet was the most likely to help him.

"Mr. Kelley," he cried appealingly, "he say six pounds for this beautiful rug."

"Six pounds is too much," replied the baronet.

Other articles were brought forward and at the end of two and a half hours Mr. Lynchem made his final offer. He would give £47 for the whole lot—forty-seven English lbs. The bundle included the rug which was the basis of negotiations. For that the latest offer was £8.

HEART WOULD PALPITATE.

HAD WEAK and DIZZY SPELLS.

Palpitation of the heart is one of the most common of all heart troubles. The heart will beat fast for several seconds, then slow, then start to flutter, and a feeling of utter depression will come over the system accompanied by weak and dizzy spells, making you feel that you are surely going to die. When you feel this way what you require is a real good heart and never tonic; one that will strengthen the weak heart and build up the nerve system. For this purpose we know of nothing that can equal Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

Mrs. J. S. Nicholls, Listowel, Ont., writes: "I was weak and run down, my heart would palpitate, and I would take weak and dizzy spells. A friend advised me to try your Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills so I started at once, and found that I felt much stronger, and my heart was ever so much better within a short time. I cannot praise your medicine too highly for it has done me a world of good. My husband has also been bothered with heart trouble ever since childhood and finds great relief in using your valuable pills."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50 cents per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.
