MACDONALD BYE ELECTION

A bye-election in the constituency of MacDonald, Manitoba, to fill the vacancy caused by the appointment of the sitting member Mr. W. D. Staples to the Grain Commission is to be held on Saturday of this week. The candidates are Mr. R. L. Richardson editor of the Winnipeg Tribune, Independent Liberal, and Mr. Alex. Morrison, Conservative. At the election of 1908 the constituency returned Mr. Staples by a majority of 576, but in the contest of one year ago when reciprocity was the issue his majority was cut down to 161. It will be seen that the constituency is in the doubtful column with the chances in favor of the return of Mr. Richardson. Sir Rodmond Roblin premier of Manitoba and Hon. Robert Rogers have thrown themselves actively into the fight, which means that Mr. Morrison has the active support of the Manitoba Tory machine, the most unscrupulous political organization in all Canada. The most desperate methods will be employed to defeat Mr. Richardson; but he has a platform which commends itself to the great body of the rural population and at this distance it looks as if his cause could triumph. The Manitoba Tory machine received a black eye in the recent local elections in Saskatchewan and if it does not get another in MacDonald it will not be because it does not deserve it.

Mr. Richardson who is in the field in response to a requisition signed by thousands of electors, is running on a platform of wider markets and freer trade. He also advocates the extension of the British preference as a means of establishing closer connection with the motherland. He sums his policy up as follows:

"A verdict in favor of freer trade, enlarged markets, lower tariffs, closer and freer trade relations with the Motherland and reciprocity, while it would not defeat the government or even impair its already too great majority would have the effect of compelling the administration to adopt a policy which would bring the much needed relief. It is in this light that I confidently appeal to Conservatives in MacDonald to vote for me. By doing so they can render a real service to their party for such a vote would compel the adoption of a policy which would assist the party in the west, and no national party can succeed which fails to recognize the necessity of adopting a policy which will result in the development of this part of the Dominion.

"In this contest, I realize that many hundreds, if not some thousands, of good, loyal Conservatives, are going to vote for the cause which I represent. Rest assured, I shall not betray you or misrepresent you. You know my record, which extends over a quarter of a century, and you know that I have always regarded public office as a public trust and that as between party and duty to my constituents, I always chose the latter. I have grown too old to change, even if I were so disposed.

"The choice is for you to make. If you vote for the government candidate you vote for a party man, supporting a government pledged to high protection, unalterably opposed to reciprocity—a government which owes its return to interests, however they may prate and blather about loyalty which would oppose with as much vehemence and stubbornness a further reduction of the tariff against British goods by a farthing on the dollar as they have opposed reciprocity and enlarged markets. To vote for a candidate under such auspices would be a declaration on your part that you are absolutely satisfied with your limited and restricted markets, and that you endorse a policy which costs you many hundreds of dollars each on every crop you reap."

Sir Wilfrid Laurier in his speech at Mount Forest drew this striking picture of the Tory-Nationalist Alliance. "There never was such a baby team; Monk kicks and Foster roars, and neither coaxing and petting nor whip and spur can move them."

It has been rumored about Ottawa for some time that the Borden government will at the approaching session of Parliament make an attempt to tamper with the British preference. The Tories have always talked about loyalty while the Liberals have practised it. When the Tories introduced the National Policy with its tariff wall against Great Britain, Hon. Alexander MacKenzie, Sir Richard Cartwright and other Liberal leaders took occasion to point out that doubling the taxes on British goods was a queer way of strengthening British connection. What reply did Sir John Macdonald make? "Why," said he, "if the national policy be bad for British connection so much the worse for British connection."

The wisdom of a saddle horse in attempting to leap over a motor car that in another second would have struck it, probably saved the life, the other day in Kansas City of Miss Emma Rieger its rider. The motor, going at a high speed and the saddle horse met at an intersecting street and a collision was imminent. As the horse came within a foot of the car, it made a leap presumably to jump high enough and clear the car. The attempt failed and the animal landed squarely in the rear of the car throwing Miss Rieger to the ground. Her injuries were not serious. The driver of the car and the horse were uninjured.

In Virginia there lives an old man who although shy on education himself appreciates the value of culture in others. He sent his daughter to a boarding school, where young ladies are taught everything from arithmetic up to how to manage a gown with a train on it. A few months later he received a letter from the daughter telling him that she was "simply infatuated with ping-pong." That was too much for the old man. He indignantly telegraphed the principal of the school instructing her never to allow his daughter to associate with a Chinaman.

While the cost of living has been going higher every day, the cost of living high has been growing less. Three years ago a trip in an aeroplane cost a passenger $50.00. This was considered the union price for a flight. Now a man can go up in a monoplane and make a flight around the field at Mineola, L.I., for $1. William Hemper, Jr., who has a large monoplane, is the head of the new industry.

A bye-election to fill the vacancy in Richelieu P.Q., caused by the unseating of Mr. Cardin, has been fixed for Oct. 24. Hon. J. D. Hazen recently visited the constituency and was tendered a banquet at Sorel. It is here that the Government ship yards are located and the real object of the Minister's visit was to round up the Government employees for the Tory candidate.

The City of Dresden, G.B., is the only municipality to own and conduct a public newspaper. The property was bequeathed to the city some years ago by a wealthy man, and the newspaper man has made it a paying thing, the profits being used to beautify and extend the open spaces of the town.

SECRETARY'S REPORT

In his report the Secretary gave the date of absence of several of the teachers at first of the term, and also the names of substitutes. The truant officer has been busy and some of the lads seem incorrigible. The visit of Rev. Mr. Hall, Lord Strathcona's representative, and his excellent addresses in the schools, and the presentation of shields in the several schools, were referred to. The question of making a contribution for the shields was deferred.

Among the correspondence considered was a request from one of the teachers for increase of salary was laid on the table, and a letter of thanks from another member of the staff was filed.

As the Secretary reported scarcity of funds for immediate needs and a huge overdraft at the Bank, the Chairman and Secretary were appointed a committee to at once interview the chairman of the City Finance Committee (Ald. Calder) and procure an order on the Treasurer. Several other matters engaged the attention of the Trustees, and after passing a number of accounts the Board adjourned.

CANADIAN PACIFIC
A LITTLE STRONGER

New York, Oct. 10.—The strength and activity that prevailed in the first half hour or so were more pronounced in Reading than elsewhere. There was an improvement in sentiment and it was believed that large interests had greatly increased their lines of stock in the past few days. The rise in Reading was buoyant, stock sold up 1½ up to 177½. Transactions in that issue were heavy and as the stock came into close proximity of its high, it was believed that important developments were in store for this stock. Except in Reading there was no marked activity although the market was strong and close observers said that barring a sharp advance in money rates that substantial upward movement in prices could be expected.
